Happily the bag purses that carried out jewelers' zoological specimens somewhat absurdly, such as elephants, piggies and midnight owls are conspicuous by their absence; while for ladies in half-mourning the gun-metal bag, quietly and prettily ornamented with half pearls inset around the clasp, are exceedingly tasteful and elegant. Some have the light of the diamond sparkling from the dark gray polished background, but although very smart they are hardly in good taste for half-mourning; amethysts are quieter and withal quite as elegant when intermixed with pearls.

The jeweled purse-bags, outside of their luxurious appearance, are decidedly inconvenient, and to obviate the vexatious process of picking up various items that have a tendency to rolling upon the ground or onto the floor of the motor car, the small interior purse, also of chained gold, has been invented, and adopted with success.

Can anyone take exception to a bridge coat made of beautiful white lace, the serrated edge of which is covered with chinchilla, caught up where each arabesque ends with a cocarde of silver tissue sewn with little crystals and pearls? Or of ivory lace hemmed with ermine, and given a belt of vivid green satin? This coat with a crepe skirt, makes an evening robe so beautiful that its fascination is irresistible.

THE WINTER GARDEN IN THE WINDOW.

When builiding our house a number of large window sashes were left over, which later were utilized for the purpose of constructing a small room, seven by nine feet, off the sitting-room and connecting with it by sliding doors. The sashes were put iin on three sides—east, west and south—and projected beyond the house line four or five feet. Winters we placed shelves in it at proper distances to accommodate potted roses. While there were many plants growing outside, only a few, the best, were put into this rose room. These were Bon Silene, Queen's Scarlet, Enchantress and similar varieties.

To make sure of being successful a florist was called in occasionally to look at the plants, and sometimes he brought new specimens to refill any vacant places or to replace any which were not in the best of condition. Those brought in were fresh and about ready to bloom, so we had a continual supply of vigorous plants which had lots of buds and blooms, which flowered all the winter, something very delightful and not common in window gardens.

The florist suggested many helpful ideas, among which was that several large ferns and palms be added to occupy the space beneath the lower row of shelves. This mass of green set off the bright roses in a most beautiful way, and, besides, we had quite a nice and refreshing little fernery.—Suburban Life.

WHEN SPEAKING OF THE ABSENT ONE.

Little things, but how much they count in the long run.

It may sound like a very little thing, but, really, the mentioning of an absent person, whether it be your husband, your sister, your mother or your fiance, is an indication of your education and a clue to your breeding.

Of course, were it impossible to correct mistakes of this kind it would be totally unnecessary for me to write these articles. But every one may learn to do better, and surely every one wants to do exactly right.

I have heard a girl mention her husband to her own mother as "Mr. Jones," and many a time a girl, recently married, mentions her husband by his full title to her most intimate friends. This is but foolish affectation.

If you are speaking of your husband to a servant, he should be given his title, but if you are speaking to a friend of yours or his there is no reason why you should not call him by his first name. Should you speak to a stranger of your husband, call him by his first and last name, as "John Robinson."

The new bride who goes around speaking of "my husband" makes herself really ridiculous. If you are natural, if you call him what appears to you as being the correct thing, you cannot make a mistake.

CHAPTER I.

The Man with the Moles.

The first time that Col. Rupert Winter saw Cary Mercer was under circumstances calculated to fix the incident firmly in his memory. In the year 1903, home from the Philippines on furlough, and preparing to return to a task big enough to attract him in spite of its exile and hardships, he had visited the son of a friend at Harvard. They were walking through the corridors of one of the private dormitories where the boy roomed. Rather grimly the soldier's eyes were noting marble wainscoting and tiled floors, and contrasting this academic environment with his own at West Point. A caustic comment rose to his lips, but it was not uttered, for he heard the sharp bark of a pistol, followed by a thud, and a crackle as of breaking glass.

"Do you fellows amuse yourselves shooting up the dormitory?" said he. The boy halted; he had gone white.

"It came from Mercer's room!" he cried, and ran across the corridor to a door with the usual labeling of two visiting cards. The door was not locked. Entering, they passed into a vestibule, thence through another door which stood open. For many a day after the colonel could see just how the slender young figure looked, the shoulders in a huddle on the study table, one arm swinging nerveless; beside him, on the floor, a revolver and a broken glass bottle. The latter must have made the crackling sound. Some dark red liquid, soaking the open sheets of a newspaper, filled the room with the pungent odor of alcohol. Only the top of the lad's head showed—a curly, silky, dark brown head; but even before the colonel lifted it he had seen a few thick drops matting the brown curls. He laid the head back gently and his hand slipped to the boy's wrist.

"No use, Ralph," he said in the subdued tones that the voice takes unconsciously in the presence of death.

"And Endy was going to help him," almost sobbed Ralph. "He told me he would. Oh, why couldn't he have trusted his friends!"

The colonel was looking at the newspaper—"Was it money?" said he; for a glance at the dabbled sheet had brought him the headings of the stock quotations: "Another Sharp Break in Stocks. New London Records." It had been money. Later, after what needed to be done was over, after doctors and officers of the law were gone, Col. Winter heard the wretched story. A young, reckless, fatally attractive Southerner, rich friends, college societies, joyous times; nothing really wicked or vicious, only a surrender to youth and friendship and pleasure, and then the day of reckoning—duns, college warnings, the menace of black disgrace. The young fellow was an orphan, with no near kindred save one brother much older than he. The brother was reputed to be rich, according to southern standards, and young Mercer, who had just come into a modest patrimony of his own, invested in his brother's ventures. As to the character of these ventures, whether flimsy or substantial, the colonel's informants were absolutely ignorant. All they knew of the elder Mercer was that he was often in New York and had "a lot to do with Wall street." He wasn't a broker; no, he was trying to raise money to hang on to some big properties that he had; and the stocks seemed to be going at remarkable rates just now, the bottom dropping out of the market. If a certain stock of the Mercers—they didn't know the name—could be kept above 27 he would pull through. Col. Winter made no comment, but he remembered that when he had studied the morning's stock-market pages for himself, he had noted "bad slump in the southern steels," and "Tidewater on the toboggan slide; off three to four points, declining from 27 and a fraction to 23."

"Another victim of the Wall street pirates," was the colonel's silent judgment on the tragedy. "Lucky for her his mother's dead."

The next morning he had returned and had gone to his young friend's rooms.

The boy was still full of the horror of the day before. Mercer's brother was in Cambridge, he said—arriving that morning from New York. "Endy is going to fetch him round to get him out of the reporters' way sometime this evening; maybe there's something I can do"——this in explanation of his declining to dine with the colonel. As the two entered the rooms, Winter was a little in advance, and caught the first glimpse of a man sitting in a big mission arm-chair, his head sunk on his breast. So absorbed was this man in his own disempered musings that the new-comers' approach did not arouse him. He sat with knitted brows and clenched hands, staring into vacancy; his rigid and pallid features set in a ghastly intensity of thought. There was suffering in the look; but there was more; the colonel, who had been living among the serpent passions of the orient, knew deadly anger when he saw it; it was branded on the face before him. Involuntarily he fell back; he felt as if he had blundered in on a naked soul. Noiselessly he slipped out of the range of vision. He spoke loudly, halting to ask some question about the rooms; this made a moment's pause.

It was sufficient; in the study they found a quiet, calm, although rather haggard-looking man, who greeted Winter's companion courteously, with a southern accent, and a very good manner. He was presented to the colonel as Mr. Mercer. He would have excused himself, professing that he was just going, but the colonel took the words out of his mouth: "Ralph, here, has a cigar for me—that is all I came for; see you at the Touraine, Ralph, to-morrow for luncheon, then." He did not see the man again; neither did he see Ralph, although he made good, so far as in him lay, his fiction of an engagement at the Touraine. But Ralph could not come; and Winter had lunched, instead, with an old friend at his club, and had watched, through a stately Georgian window the shifting greenery of the common in an east wind.

All through the luncheon the soldier's mind kept swerving from the talk in hand to Cary Mercer's face. Yet he never expected to see it again. Three years later he did see it; and this second encounter, of which, by the way, Mercer was unconscious, was the beginning of an absorbing chapter in his life. A short space of time that chapter occupied; yet into it crowded mystery, peril, a wonderful and awful spectacle, the keenest happiness and the cruelest anxiety. Let his days be ever so many, the series of events which followed Mercer's reappearance will not be blurred by succeeding experiences; their vivid and haunting pictures will burn through commoner and later happenings as an electric torch flares through layers of mist.

Nothing, however, could promise adventure less than the dull and chilly late March evening when the chapter began. Nor could anyone be less on the lookout for adventure, or even interest, than was Rupert Winter. In truth, he was listless and depressed.

When he alighted from his cab in the great court of the Rock Island station he found Haley, his old orderly, with a hand on the door-hasp. Haley's military stoicism of demeanor could not quite conceal a certain agitation—at least not from the colonel's shrewd eye, used to catch the moods of his soldiers. He strangled a kind of sigh. "Doesn't like it much more than I," thought Rupert Winter. "This is mighty kind of you, Haley," he said.

"Yes, sor," answered Haley, saluting. The colonel grinned feebly. Haley, busy repelling a youthful porter, did not notice the grin; he strode ahead with the colonel's world-scarred hand-luggage, found an empty settee beside one of the square-tiled columns of the waiting room and disposed his burden on the iron-railed seat next the corner one, which he reserved for the colonel.

"The train ain't in yet, colonel," said he. "I'll be telling you—"

"No, Haley," interrupted the colonel, whose lip twitched a little; and he looked aside; "best say good-bye now; don't wait. The fact is, I'm thinking of too many things you and I have gone through together." He held out his hand; Haley, with a stony expression, gazed past it and saluted, while he repeated: "Yes, sor; I'll be back to take the bags whin the train's made up." Whereupon he wheeled and made off with speed.

"Just the same damned obstinate way he's always had," chuckled the colonel to himself. Nevertheless, something ached in his throat as he frowned and winked.

"Oh, get a brace on you, you played-out old sport!" he muttered. "The game's on the last four cards and you haven't established your suit; you'll have to sit back and watch the other fellows play!" But his dreary thoughts persisted. Rupert was a colonel in the regular army of the United States. He had been brevetted a brigadier general after the Spanish war, and had commanded, not only a brigade, but a division at one critical time in the Philippines; but for reasons probably known to the little knot of politicians who "hung it up," although incomprehensible to most Americans, congress had failed to pass the bill giving the wearers of brevet titles the right to keep their hard-worn and empty honors; wherefore Gen. Winter had declined to Col. Winter.

He had more substantial troubles, including a wound which would probably make him limp through life and possibly retire him from service at 50. It had given him a six months' sick leave (which he had not wanted), and after spending a month on the Atlantic coast, he was going for the spring to the Pacific. Haley, whose own term of office had expired, had not re-enlisted, but had followed him, Mrs. Haley and the baby uncomplainingly bringing up the rear. It was not fair to Haley nor to Mrs. Haley, the colonel felt. He had told Haley so; he had found a good situation for the man, and he had added the deed for a little house in the suburbs of Chicago.

If Haley wouldn't re-enlist—there never was a better soldier since he had downed a foolish young hankering for wild times and whisky—if he wouldn't go back to the army, where he belonged, let him settle down, take up the honest carpenter's trade that he had abandoned, be a good citizen and marry little Nora to some classmate in the high school, who might make a fortune and build her a colonial mansion, should the colonial still obtain in the twentieth century.

The colonel had spread a grand prospect before Haley, who listened unresponsively, a dumb pain in his wide blue Irish eyes. The colonel hated it; but, somehow, he hated worse the limp look of Haley's back as he watched it dwindle down Michigan avenue.

However, Mrs. Haley had been more satisfactory, if none the less bewildering. She seemed very grateful over the house and the $300 for its furnishing. A birthday present, he had termed it, with a flicker of humor because the day was his own birthday. His fiftieth birthday it happened to be, and it occurred to him that a man ought to do something a little notable on such an anniversary. This rounding of the half-century had attributes apart; it was no mere annual birthday; it marked the last vanishing flutter of the gilded draperies of youth; the withering of the garlands; the fading tinkle of the light music of hope. It should mark a man's solid achievements. Once, not so long ago, Winter had believed that his fiftieth birthday would see wide and beneficent and far-reaching results in the province where he ruled. That dream was shattered. He was generous of nature, and he could have been content to behold another reap the fields which he had sowed and tilled; it was the harvest, whether his or another's, for which he worked; but his had been the bitter office to have to stand aside, with no right to protest, and see his work go to waste because his successor had a feeble brain and a pusillanimous caution in place of his own dogged will. For all these reasons, as well as others, the colonel found no zest in his fiftieth birthday; and his reverie drifted dismally from one somber reflection to another until it brought up at the latest wound to his heart—his favorite brother's death.

There had been three Winter brothers—Rupert, Melville and Thomas. During the past year both Thomas Winter and his wife had died, leaving one child, a boy of 14, named Archibald after his father's uncle. Rupert Winter and the boy's great-aunt, the widow of the great uncle, were appointed joint guardians of the young Archie. To-night, in his jaded mood, he was assailed by reproaches because he had not seen more of his ward. Why, he hadn't so much as looked the little chap up when he passed through Fairport—merely had sent him a letter and some truck from the Philippines; nice guardian he was! By a natural enough transition, his thoughts swerved to his own brief and not altogether happy married life. He thought of the graves in Arizona where he had left his wife and his two children, and his heart felt heavy. To escape musings which grew drearier every second, he cast his eyes about the motley crowd shuffling over the tiled floors or resting in the massive dark oaken seats. And it was then that he saw Cary Mercer. At first he did not recognize the face. He only gazed indifferently at two well-dressed men who sat some paces away from him in the shadow of a great tiled column similar to his own. There was this difference, it happened: the mission lantern with its electric bulbs above the two men was flashing brightly, and by some accident that above the colonel was dark. He could see the men, himself in the shadow.

HOPE'S FIVE DEFEATED BY ROGER A. C. TEAM

The Hope Chapel Young Men's Club basketball team was defeated by the Roger A. C. team, captained by Russell Morris, Saturday night, by a score of 40 to 38. The victorious team was composed of P. H. S. players. The game was fast and free from all roughness. It was replete with sensational goals from the field, the passing and team-work of both teams being excellent.

The score at the end of the first half was 15 to 8 in favor of the Young Men's Club, and when time was called in the second half the score was a tie, 38 to 38. The game was resumed and it was fully five minutes, when Sherwood Parsons, who was doing excellent work as a guard, had the ball passed to him and he put it in the basket for a goal. This was his first and only try during the game.

For Y. M. C., Doane, Hunter and Rimmer did good work and Riffert, Clark and Captain Morris did most of the scoring for the Roger A. C. The lineup:

Roger A. C.—Forwards, Riffert, Clarke; centre, R. Morris; guards, Bristol and S. Parsons.

Hope Y. M. C.—Forwards, Rimmer and C. Firstbrook; centre, M. Hunter; guards, Clyde Doane and H. Kenney.

Goals from field—Clyde Doane, 8; Clarke, 6; Morris, 7; Riffert, 5; Hunter, 4; C. Firstbrook, 3; Bristol, 1; Rimmer, 1; Parsons, 1; goals from foul, Doane, 6. Referee, Allen Snyder; timekeeper, John Kenney; scorer, John Slorah.

MAJOR TEAM PRACTICES ON Y. M. C. A. SECONDS

In place of the scheduled game with the Columbia University five, which was unable to come Saturday night, the Y. M. C. A. major league team played the Second association five and ran up a score of 71 to 23.

It was really a faster game than some of the more evenly matched contests have been, as the shooting was especially accurate and there was but little fouling.

The lineup:

| Major team. | Second team. |
|---|---|
| Forwards. | |
| Joseph | Templin |
| Denton | Mackey, Bogardus |
| Centres. | |
| Cahoone | Martin |
| Guards. | |
| Miner | Hoagland |
| Rumsey | Rockwell |

Goals: Denton, 7; Joseph, 7; Cahoone, 8; Miner, 3; Rumsey, 10; Cahoone, 1 foul; Templin, 3; Bogardus, 1; Mackey, 2; Martin, 1; Hoagland, 2; Rockwell, 1; 3 from fouls.

ASSOCIATION DECIDES IN SMALLEY'S FAVOR

The National Trotting Association while in session at Hartford, Conn., December 1, 2, 3, and 4, decided the case of Newton B. Smalley against Adam C. Blair, relative to the claim that the latter's horse, "Aaron B," was formerly known as "Leon," and was entered in recognized races by the latter name. Following an investigation the Board of Review made this report:

"Ordered, that the horse, having started under a changed name, his winnings are unlawful and are ordered to be distributed to the parties entitled to same."

At the race meet held at the driving park July 4, last, under the auspices of the Fair Acres Driving and Riding Club, Newton B. Smalley asked for the identification of the horse owned by Adam C. Blair, entered in the 2:30 class and known as "Aaron B." At a subsequent meeting of the club the subject was thoroughly discussed and then left to the National Trotting Association for a decision.

Publicity to the decision is requested in the hope that future entries to races may be made with the understanding that those who enter there may at least have the right to ask the stranger his name.

TOSSES BABY INTO MUD. TO GET WOMAN'S PURSE.

Refusing to yield to the demands of a highwayman, evidently a Dane, to surrender her purse, while on the road to Woodbridge Saturday morning, Mrs. Oscar Wilson, who lives about a mile outside of the town, was attacked by the stranger, who wrested her baby from her arms and threw it to one side in the muddy road.

The man then twisted Mrs. Wilson's handbag from her wrist and ran away. The bag contained $25 in cash and considerable jewelry.

Mrs. Wilson rescued her baby, which had fallen into a heap of soft mud and was unhurt. She was on her way to visit friends in Woodbridge, and with her bedraggled baby continued her journey. The police have been notified and have a good description of the man.

Mails Closed Up 'Em.

Postmaster Bird received notice today from the postal department at Washington that newspapers carrying items advertising or relating to card parties to which an entrance or admission fee is charged contestants and prizes awarded the winners, must be excluded from the mails. Advertisements or articles relating to such card parties are only mailable when they refer to parties for participation in which no charge is made.

Thomas E. Currin, Jr., Injured.

Thomas E. Currin, Jr., of Mountain avenue, paying teller at the First National Bank, is detained at his home today with an injured foot, the result of an accident yesterday when a heavy piano stool fell on it. The weight of the stool so bruised the foot that Mr. Currin has suffered greatly and this morning was unable to get his shoe on. He expects to return to business in a day or two.

Excise Report Delayed.

Chairman Fisk and members Rice and Backes, of the State Excise Commission, are in conference at New Brunswick today. It is understood that some changes will be made in the commission's report, which was scheduled to be in Governor Fort's hands today. As a result of these changes it is expected that the report will be deferred until tomorrow or Wednesday.

Committee to Meet Thursday Night.

The dinner committee of the Board of Trade will meet Thursday night, December 17, instead of the 18th, to discuss plans for the annual dinner of the board.

HUNT CLUB MEMBERS ENJOY WEEKLY CHASE

Although the going was a trifle heavy, about twenty members and friends of the Watchung Hunt Club turned out Saturday afternoon for the weekly chase after the hounds. The meeting was at Dog Tavern, where under the direction of Lewis E. Waring, master, the rders followed a course extending to Lambert's Mills, Westfield, Netherwood and home, a distance of about eight miles. There was not a single spill and everyone reached home in good shape, thoroughly delighted wth the hunt.

Among those who rode were Lewis E. Waring, master; Fred Bull, Rufus L. Finch, C. E. S. Bellows, Miss Mabel B. Hooley, Charles W. Fisk, Charles F. Wildey, Fred Stover, Cris. Cumins and Peter Hauck, Jr.

There was a "stein night" at the hunt club, Saturday night, when a company of about twenty-five male members and their friends enjoyed an informal program. There was some excellent vocal and instrumental music, while the members were much pleased with the supper provided by the house committee, of which W. L. Righter is the chairman.

DR. TOMLINSON SPEAKS AT C. E. ANNIVERSARY

The feature of the seventeenth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, Sabbath morning, was an address on "What is Thy Name?" by Rev. Dr. Everitt Tomlinson, pastor of the Baptist church, Elizabeth. During the course of his address he recalled in amusing fashion the many nick-names often given persons and how well they apply. He made an appropriate application explaining the advantages in being known as a Christian Endeavorer and a follower of Christ. Dr. Tomlinson held the close attention of his congregation throughont.

In connection with the anniversary Miss Eva Rogers as secretary of the Senior society, presented a report for that society as well as the Juniors. This showed that there is a total membership of forty-nine in the Senior and fifteen in the Junior societies. All departments were stated to be in excellent financial and spiritual condition. Treasurer Ray Burdick reported the receipts to be $150 for the past year. Miss Mildred Greene, as president of the Senior society, presided at the meeting.

St. Joseph's Church Fair.

"STANDARD OIL BANK," THE LARGEST IN AMERICA NOW OCCUPIES THE OLD U. S. C. CUSTOM HOUSE SITE

The National City Bank of New York.

The National City Bank of New York, the largest banking institution in America, has moved into its new building on Wall street. The removal was a simple matter of crossing the street from its old home at 52 Wall street, and the transfer of the bank's enormous holdings of cash and securities was accomplished as easily as if they had been a few bundles of every-day merchandise.

It is necessary to go to some of the great central government banks of Europe to find an institution whose resources compare with those of the National City Bank. Its total assets recently touched the record figures of $372,849,000, a sum sufficient to pay off the national debts of Mexico and all the Central American countries.

The National City Bank was a member of the syndicate which subscribed for the entire issue of Spanish American War loan. It also arranged for the transfer of the $20,000,000 payment made to Spain for the Philippine Islands.

The National City Bank is ninety-six years old and was founded at the time of the War of 1812, when it was one of nine banks in New York, York, whose total capitalization was $7,552,760, while there were only eighty-eight banks in the whole country at the time, with a combined capitalization at the time, with a combined capitalization of $42,610,601. Since its formation the National City Bank has had ten presidents. Much of its early prosperity was due to Moses Taylor, who for forty-five years was a director and for twenty-six years president. In 1882 he was succeeded by Percy R. Pyne, and in 1891 James Stillman was elected president and he still holds that office. Mr. Stillman was the main factor in broadening the influence of the National City Bank, as he and the Taylor estate owned a controlling interest in the institution, and the work of developing its resources was left largely to him.

TWO EXCISE REPORTS FILED WITH GOV. FORT

MINORITY MEMBERS DIFFERING RADICALLY

Chairman Fisk and Four Others on the Commission of Seven Recommend Local Excise Boards, Power of Revocation, High License Fee, No Sunday Selling, Limit to Licensed Places and Other Restrictions.

Mayor Charles J. Fisk, as chairman, handed to Governor J. F. Fort today at Trenton, the majority report of the State Excise Commission. It is an exhaustive document of 25,000 words and conatins not only a summary of the probe in each county but recommendations for a new law based upon such investigation, as well as a copy of the proposed law. Other data including the testimony taken and the laws governing the liquor traffic in this and other states was also filed with the Governor. The majority report is signed by Messrs. Fisk, Backes, Rice, Smith and Appleby. A minority report signed by Messrs. Howe and Whitbeck was also submitted.

This is the majority report in a nutshell:

A local elective Excise Board, of three members, for every town, city, borough, village, and township, with powers to grant, refuse and regulate licenses, members to serve three years.

The Board of Excise to have powers to make regulations governing the sale of liquor locally, within the limits of the State law.

The nomination of candidates for such boards to be made by petition of ten or more residents of the municipality.

The local Board of Excise to be responsible to the Governor for the enforcement of the Excise law.

The granting of police powers to the boards, with authority to call upon any police or other officer for aid in making investigations or arrests, refusal being considered a misdemeanor.

The appointment of inspectors to see that the law is enforced.

The removal by the Governor of members who refuse to "do their whole duty."

For the second offense, revocation of license, refusal to grant a new license and no license for a year to any one to sell on the same premises.

For the third offense, revocation of license and the debarring of the holder from ever holding a license again.

Bring all offenders before the judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the county.

The power of initiative to be granted to the judge of such court to prefer charges against any saloon man in the county.

The granting of no more licenses in any municipality until there is but one to every 500 inhabitants.

To sell liquor at retail to be drunk on the premises.

To sell liquor in original packages not to be drunk on the premises.

Bottlers' or wholesale licenses for sales of not les than three gallons, not to be consumed on the premises.

To sell liquor in clubs.

To sell liquor in Pullman or dining cars.

A license fee for retail licenses of not les than $1,000 in cities of over 15,000 inhabitants, decreasing to $250 for cities of less than 3,000 inhabitants.

A license fee of $50 for each place where, in addition, liquor is sold to be carried away.

Wholesale license fee, minimum $250.

Licenses to clubs, minimum $250.

Pullman or dining car licenses, minimum $100.

All licenses to begin October 1 and expire September 30.

Full license fee for all license granted between October 1 and December 31, although same expire September 30.

A card index system of registering barkeepers, with a fine of $25 for failure to register, a permit to be granted on registration.

With each application a map of the premises should be submitted to the Excise Board.

The applicant must declare that no one else is pecuniarily interested in the proposed establishment.

The refusal of license to any applicant whose neighbors, for 200 feet from the proposed saloon, object, in the majority, to the granting of the license.

The license of anyone making false statements in his application must be declared forfeited by the court.

All beer, wine, ale, porter or other spirtuous liquors containing more than one per cent. of alcohol shall be considered intoxicating liquors.

Close all saloons between midnight and 6 o'clock the following morning.

Close all saloons selling only liquors in original packages not to be drunk on the premises from 7 o'clock p. m. to 6 o'clock a. m.

No license should be pledged in transfer and no transfer should be made under any power of attorney of the license.

Close and lock all saloons during prohibited hours, allowing only employees in the place, the presence of others being considered prima facie evidence of violation of the law.

No liquor should be sold or given to any minor, nor may an older person send a minor into a saloon to purchase liquor.

No saloon man shall serve anyone who has the habit of drinking intoxicating liquor after he has been served with a writen notice by the husband, wife, parent, guardian, child, employer, trustee, Mayor or overseer of the poor.

Close the saloons throughout the State from midnight Saturday to 6 o'clock Monday morning.

A brewer's sign shall be considered prima facie evidence that the saloon is controlled by such brewer.

No shades, screens, blinds, cabinetwork, merchandise, curtains, nontransparent glass or any article of obstruction shall be placed in the window of any bar. The windows and doors must be of clear glass and a full view of the interior shall be had from the street at all times.

No boxing bouts, theatricals, pool tables or bowling alleys shall be allowed in any saloon, room or yard connected therewith.

No transfer of license shall be granted except in case of bona fide sale of the business or death of the owner.

All houses used as dwellings shall have separate entrances for tenants apart from the saloon door.

No licenses shall be granted to places in cities of less than 15,000 inhabitants where liquor is to be consumed in the premises, unless such place be an inn, tavern, hotel or restaurant of six spare rooms, with stable accommodations.

No new license shall be granted within 200 feet of any church, school-house, armory, hospital or any charitable or benevolent institution.

Outside a city, no liquor shall be sold within a mile of any industrial school, asylum, State hospital, State agricultural or industrial school, colony or institution established for the treatment of epileptics or poorhouse, or regularly incorporated camp meeting.

Licenses should be refused minors, those convicted of crime or employing an ex-convict, foreigners, those whose employees are tiwce convicted for violation of the excise law, clubs whose membership includes minors.

No license holder should permit any girl or woman to serve drinks.

The Mayor of a municipality should be held responsible for the enforcement of the law. He shall instruct the police to watch for violations and submit reports of such to the Excise Board.

The inspector of buildings shall examine regularly all places where liquor is sold, sending his reports, through the Mayor to the Excise Board.

Where the Excise Board refuses to act, in cases of violation, the Mayor shall report the case to the Court of Common Pleas and to the Governor.

The Mayor must prefer charges against any police officer who refuses to enforce the excise law.

Any failure, wilful neglect or refusal to act, on the part of the Mayor, shall be a misdemeanor.

Such failure on the part of a police officer shall be a misdemeanor and the punishment shall be removal from office.

Any Sheriff or prosecutor who fails to do all within his power to enforce the excise law shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

For selling without a license, a fine of not less than double the license fee should be imposed.

For Sunday selling, selling to a minor, keeping a disorderly house or selling to intoxicated persons the penalty shall be a fine of half the license fee for the first offense, revocation of license for one year for the second offense and permanent revocation for the third offense.

Power should be given to the Governor of the State to remove any Mayor, Sheriff, prosecutor or judge who does not do his ful duty in enforcing the excise laws.

THE MINORITY REPORT.

Here are some salient extracts from the minority report:

We concur in large part with the statements of fact concerning conditions in the various counties of this State as set forth in the majority report, but we cannot give our sanction to the sweeping allegations in the majority report, that the judges of our County Courts, the prosecutors, the sheriffs and mayors in New Jersey are under the domination of the manufacturers and dealers in liquors, in that they owe their appointments or elections to political leaders, who in turn are under financial obligations to the liquor trade; that by reason of this domination licenses are improperly granted, violators of law are shielded from indictment and prosecution, and a perversion of judicial and administrative functions in the interest of excise violators generally exists.

We cannot concur, without reservation, in the recommendation of the majority of the Commission in favor of an elective Excise Board in each municipality, each member to serve three years and a new member to be elected annually as a special election held for that purpose.

We dissent from the proposition that the governor of this State be vested with the power to remove county and municipal officials, whether constitutional or statutory and whether elective or appointed. There is certainly no warrant in the investigation of this Commission for the assertion that evils due to non-

MR. RANDOLPH ON ATHENS

THE ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES.

Illustrated Lecture is Much Enjoyed By the Men's Club of the First Baptist. Church.

Before the Men's Club of the First Baptist church, last night, L. V. F. Randolph gave a delightful illustrated lecture on "Athens and the Eleusinian Mysteries." The speaker has traveled considerably abroad and last night's talk was descriptive of one of the most interesting trips taken by him through Athens. The lecture was also highly instructive to the large audience present and many expressions of pleasure were heard afterward. The views were especially fine and gave all an excellent idea of the country discussed.

In part Mr. Randolph spoke as follows:

"Neither in its traditions nor in its physical position does Greece seem to belong to Europe. It is a foot, whose far-stretching toes dally with the waves of the Mediterranean. On one side of this foot comes down the Aegean Sea; on the other, the Ionian. But it is rather of Athens than of Greece that we now speak; and ancient Athens was the capital of Attica. Here we have a country and a nation in miniature. All of Attica covered a space containing about seven hundred square miles, scarcely the average size of an American county. But from this nation of Lilliputian dimension went forth the power of a giant.

"It was the very smallness and poverty of Attica, and of its city, Athens, that helped to stimulate the courage and purpose of the able and brilliant men who had there found a home. This was ever, and still is, one of the most striking examples of all history, of the truth declared by Paul to the Corinthians, that 'God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty, and things which are not to bring to naught things that are.

"Christopher Wardsworth, writing on the extent and influence of Attica, wonders at this 'small province, confined within these narrow bounds, yet stretching itself, like a living Agent, from its contracted limits, by vigorous growth, elastic energy, and expansive activity to a comprehensive vastness, nay even to a kind of intellectual omnipresence, upon the surface of the earth., 'There is,' he says, 'no region of the civilized world which is not breathed on by the air of Attica. The works of the architect and of the sculptor in every quarter of the globe speaks of Athens.

"Even our manufacturers are imprinted with her ornaments; the galleries of Princes and States, the temples and palaces, the libraries and council rooms of capitol cities pay homage to Athens, and will do so forever. To Attica, therefore, it was due that when a channel of general communication was most needed, there existed a common language in the world, and that this language was Greek; or in other words, that there was, at the time of the propogation of the Gospel, a tongue in which it could be preached to the whole world.

"The population of modern Greece is somewhat over two and a half millions, and nearly one-tenth of it is to be found in Athens and in her twin city and Port, Pireaus, where the increase has been by doubling and trebling within a dozen years. Greek merchants, who have amassed fortunes elsewhere, return to make this city their home.

"Then again, the world at large is today more than ever before interested in Greece. Free, progressive, modern, Christian Greece, so near to Turkey, but no longer under her control—an object leson which scholars, economists and travelers love to visit and contemplate. To this, add the glamour and the glory of ancient Greece, of the Greece that endowed the earlier ages with her art, and culture, and of the Greece, which, as we have shown, furnished a casket for the preservation of the Gospels in a classical language (which is well nigh identical with her language of today) and one may cease to wonder that the citizens of all countries come hither, bringing homage. But the most powerful loadstone attracting foreign travelers consists in her valuable antiquities, and with these is closely associated the romantic setting in which these jewels are displayed. Surely, the unique aspect of Athens, in the combination of her natural charms and her splendid relics, entitle her to peculiar praise.

"At its portal, on the day of our arrival, we enjoyed our first grand

MRS. FISHER THE BRIDE OF ALBERT J. MEYERS

Announcement was made today of the marriage of Mrs. Sarah Fisher, daughter of Mrs. Joseph Ramsey, of Lebanon, and Albert J. Meyers, both of Dunellen. The ceremony took place Saturday afternoon last at the parsonage of the Reformed church, South Bound Brook, Rev. Henry Stout, the pastor, officiating. The couple was unattended, preferring that the affair should be a quiet one and as unostentatious as possible. The couple is residing at the home of the bride in Dunellen for the present.

Mrs. Meyers has a host of friends and acquaintances. Her first husband, Mr. Fisher, died eight years ago. Since then she has resided at Dunellen, where she conducted a boarding-house. Mr. Meyers, who is an expert draughtsman and in the employ of Levering & Garrigues, has made his home at Dunellen for several years. Mrs. Meyers has two children, Lillian and Joseph Fisher. She is a sister of Mrs. A. D. Edgar, of East Front street, this city.

DOG LOVERS MEET AND ORGANIZE CLUB

The Plainfield Kennel Club was organized last night with a charter membership of sixty. Its formation was accomplished at an enthusiastic meeting held at Truell Hall at which were present a majority of the dog lovers and owners whose names had been subscribed to the charter.

A. C. Wilmerding was elected president, A. G. Hooley, secretary, and W. W. Coriell, treasurer. One of the objects of the club is to inaugurate and annual open air bench show where dogs will be brought in competition for prizes, and another of its purposes is to protect the dog interests of the community from infringement of their rights by bad legislation or otherwise.

CRITICS HIGHLY PLEASED WITH JONAS LIE'S WORKS.

"The Storm" and "The Last Gleam," Jonas Lie's large canvasses on exhibition at the National Academy, New York, are attracting much favorable comment and much notice among the four hundred representative paintings. The New York Times in speaking of Mr. Lie's work remarks: "This same intense vitality is felt in the two canvasses by Jonas Lie, together with a finer arrangement of masses and a more dignified simplicity." The New York Evening Mail says in part: "Jonas Lie has one of his storm pictures which shows great imagination and power."

"The Witches Pool" at the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, is likewise a centre of attraction; the exhibition had hardly opened before he received invitations to exhibit the picture elsewhere. He was only able to accept one of the three and chose the Alaska-Youkon Pacific Exposition in Seattle 1909. It seems that Jonas Lie is indeed coming to the front in American landscape painting. The exhibition now at his studio in the Babcock building, and the last he will hold here before going abroad is open to the public every day.

Dr. Glatzmayer Sentenced.

Dr. Herman A. Glatzmayer, who was convicted of having performed a criminal operation on Miss Mary Vliet, of Blairstown, was yesterday sentenced by Judge Ten Eyck, in the Court of Special Sessions at Newark, to serve five years in the State prison and pay a fine of $1,000. The defendant's counsel immediately gave notice of appeal and the sentence will be held up at least a year, pending the Supreme Court's decision. Dr. Glatzmayer was released under $7,500 bail. The case is the one in which Irving Van Horn and Mrs. Sarah Dodge, both former Plainfield residents, were involved.

Chief Weiss at Somerville.

Chief George Weiss of the borough police department, is in Somerville to be present at the hearing of the Farbman case before the grand jury. This is the case involving the Arlington hotel which was raided a few weeks ago, and the proporietor arrested charged with keeping a disorderly place. Eighteen inmates were gathered in at the same time and some of them will appear as witnesses.

FERGUSON WANTS HIS $2

YOUNG WOMAN WAXES ANGRY.

Alludes to the Complainant as a "Chipmunk," Which Produces a Vigorous Protest to the Contrary.

Albert Ferguson, a chunky-built colored gentleman with an accent as broad as a Kentucky colonel's, paid a social call at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Betts, of Arlington avenue, Saturday night. While he was there someone stole $2 of his hard earned money and as he had every reason to believe that Miss Henrietta Lewis was the purloiner, he had her haled before Judge Runyon in the city court this morning.

Miss Henrietta, who is known to her particular friends by the somewhat significant title of "Punchie," indignantly denied snitching the two bucks and said some things that must have made Al grow pale beneath his sable skin. He seemed to shrink even smaller that his five feet two and before he could recover his composure, the young woman had advanced several arguments to show he was surely mistaken in his accusation. In his complaint to the police, Al said he took some money out of his pocket to put a few pennies in the Christmas bank of the young Bettses and while doing so laid the $2 bill on a table. It was taken by someone during a moment that his back was turned. "Punchie" sure must have copped it, he said, because she was the only one nearby.

"My goodness," said "Punchie," when Judge Runyon asked her to give her side, "whadda yuh suppose A'd what to take his $2 for? A've worked for white people where there was sixteen thousand dollars layin' around and Ah never took a cent Anyway, A'd rather give $2 to the court than be standin' here like a couple a' chipmunks."

"Ah aint no chipmunk," said Al, and he looked as if he was ready to fight if the assertion was repeated.

"Ye-es, yuh are," exclaimed "Punchie." "You're a chipmunk if yuh say Ah took that money. An' look here—how could yuh have $2 when you blowed to a dozen bottles of beer and a quart of rum?"

"Ah didn't, Ah didn't," expostulated Al. "Ah only got a dozen beer; they warn't no rum. Ef Ah did, Ah had the $2 anyway an' yuh took it an' yuh know yuh did. Mis' Ageus saw yuh have it."

"Would it be possible for you to produce Miss Agens so that your somewhat misconception of facts might be corroborated?" asked Judge Runyon at this juncture.

"Wha-wha's that?" asked Al, who wasn't sure whether the court was "kidding" him or explaining a point of law. "Ah don't jes' ezactly understand."

"Why, I simply want to know if Miss Agens will come here and say she saw 'Punchie' have the money."

"O, yes, she kin be in co't tomorrow," said Al, and the $2 case was adjourned until she is produced.

Surprise for Joseph Sutton.

A surprise party was given to Master Joseph Sutton, of West Fourth street, by his young friends, last night. The evening was spent playing games of all kind, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were Harold Seals, Madeline Pennington, Harry Vogel, Joseph Miner, Harold Adams, Elizabeth Seals, Ralph Adams, Carl Taylor, Mabel Lant, Irving Stevenson, Violet Sutton, Clifford Hughes, Iven Stevens, Susie Stewart and Kenneth Hughes.

"Labor vs. Wealth."

Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, will speak on "Labor vs. Wealth" at a meeting of the Men's Club of Hope chapel tonight. This will be followed by a discussion of the topic and an important business session will then be held.

Wrong Place for Ashes.

Charles Halloway, a carter, was arrested in the borough yesterday for dumping ashes in a vacant lot at the corner of Grove street and Green Brook road. His case was heard this morning and he was given a suspended sentence with a warning.

"Here Now."

"The Two Arrivals" are in the city today only, and can be seen at the Park theatre, East Front street. The very essence of entertainment in motion pictures. "The Bell-ringers" will force you to laugh. •••

N. P. Social Club Dance.

The North Plainfield Social Club will give a dance at Saengerbund hall December 29. W. Johnson is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

FREEHOLDER ADDED TO HOSPITAL BOARD

The regular meeting of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital was held at the Mayor's office last evening. The medical director's report for November showed patients remaining at date of previous report, 46; admitted, 57; total number of patients treated, 103; discharged cured, 53; improved, 9; not improved, 1; died, 4; remaining, 36; hospital days, 1182; operations, 57. In the dispensary, number of patients, 49; visits, 108; operations, 5; cases in isolation ward, 1.

The managing committee reported that the drainage of the hospital had been connected with the city sewerage system, thereby relieving the institution from the care of the private disposal beds heretofore in use on its own premises, which is considered a great advantage. An amendement to the by-laws was adopted increasing the number of members of the Board of Governors to twenty-six, by providing that one of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union county shall be ex-officio, a member of body, such member to be designated annually by the freeholders themselves.

The finance committee reported that the responses to the postal cards sent with the view of enlarging the annual subscription list were gratifying, and it was hoped that further replies would be received, so as to make it unnecessary to call so frequently on the people to contribute through entertainments.

PRIVATE FUNERAL FOR MISS H. M. KREITLING.

The funeral of Miss Henrietta M. Kreitling, whose death occurred in Muhlenberg Hospital last week, was held at the home of her parents on West Front street, yesterday afternoon. The service was private and was conducted by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. In the course of his remarks the clergyman took occasion to speak of Miss Kraitling's devotion to church work in the last years of her life and the many womanly traits that endeared her to all her friends. There were numerous floral offerings, among them a wreath of galax leaves from the Loyal Band Sunday school class of which she was secretary.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Charles M. Dolliver, Edgar F. Shepherd, William Trembath and Albert Honeyman.

Hotel Business Changes Hands.

The Hotel Kensington's business has again changed hands, W. J. Poulson, who bought out J. A. Staats in February, having disposed of the trade to John Burns, of Flemington. Mr. Poulson will retire just as soon as the license transfer can be made. The new proprietor has for years conducted a hotel at Blairstown. Mr. Poulson, who formerly ran the Globe Hotel at Red Bank, will retire to a Hunterdon county farm near Flemington. Former Judge W. A. Coddington negotiated the deal.

Mrs. Mary H. Tunison.

Mrs. Mary H. Tunison, widow of William Tunison, at one time sheriff of Somerset county, died at her home in Somerville yesterday morning. She was fifty-six years old and leaves three sons and two daughters. They are William G. Tunison, of Plainfield; Dr. Fred Tunison, of Spartansburg, S. C.; Philip Tunison, Miss Elizabeth Tunison and Mrs. Phoebe Ianson, of Somerville.

Assault Case Dismissed.

The two Italians, John and James Pasquo, who were accused by their brother Dominico of beating him when he asked for food and shelter, were given a hearing before Justice Mundy last night. The charge was dismissed, the justice deciding that the complainant was as much to blame for the quarrel as the brothers.

Child Undergoes Operation.

Marguerite Grannatt, the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs Charles Grannatt, of West Fifth street, suddenly developed a case of appendicitis yesterday necessitating immediate removal to the hospital for an operation. The child passed through the operation all right and today was reported as doing well.

Admitted to Supreme Court.

Brockholst Kip Miller, of Watchung avenue, yesterday, duly took the oath of office and was admitted to practice as an attorney and counsellor-at-law of the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey.

The Passion Play Tonight.

A beautiful presentation of The Passion Play is the moving picture show attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The pictures are all life size and are well explained by an experienced lecturer.

TOLLES AGAIN PRESIDENT

Caucus of 1909 Common Council Also Decides for MacMurray for City Clerk.

COMMITTEE CHANGES PLANNED

Holt to Head Laws and Ordinances Committee and Robert L. Hall Fire Committee.

At a caucus of the members of the 1909 Common Council, held last night, to plan for the re-organization of that body the first of the year, President Ralph I. Tolles was the unanimous choice of the members for his present position. It was previously understood that there would be a change in the presiding officer, but when the members got together, Mr. Tolles was prevailed upon to take the position for another year.

Having served in that capacity for three terms since his election to the Common Council, Mr. Tolles was not anxious to continue in the chair, being willing to stand aside for anyone else. When he learned the wishes of his fellow-members he then gave his consent.

In the choice of a city clerk for the next three years, James T. MacMurray, the present incumbent, was also the unanimous choice, as was George B. Wean for the position of stenographer and city typist. It was also decided that Jacob Dunham should continue as page.

While there was practically little or no discussion regarding the make-up of the 1909 committees, that matter being left to the president, it was decided to have a new committee to be known as the law and ordinance committee, and Frank L. Holt, who succeeds Mr. Hibbard from the Second ward, will undoubtedly be appointed to the chairmanship. He is a lawyer and in every way qualified to head such a committee. It is not customary to give a new member a chairmanship, but Mr. Holt's ability is recognized and he would no doubt render valuable service in looking after the laws and ordinances pertaining to the city government. He will also be placed on some of the other more important committees.

In the appointment of the heads of the various other committees, few changes are anticipated. It is believed that Mr. Gloak will remain chairman of the street and sewers committee, and that Frank DeW. Randolph, who has served as chairman of the police committee, will be reappointed.

The retirement of Mr. Hibbard, who is chairman of the fire and building committee, leaves a vacancy and there is no doubt but that Councilman Robert L. Hall, of the Second ward, will get that plum. He has been exceedingly active in fire matters and it is largely through his influence that a new fire-house is now being erected in the Netherwood section.

The fact that that building will still be under construction next year and Mr. Hall is so closely in touch with the work, practically assures him the chairmanship of the fire committee.

No change is looked for in the head of the finance committee. In the opinion of the Council, Mr. Buxton has performed excellent service in that position and he will undoubtedly be prevailed upon to continue another year in looking after the financial part of the Council affairs.

There is a belief that there may be a change in the head of the light committee, although at present the name of a successor to Mr. Montgomery has not been suggested. He was the only absent member from the caucus and before an announcement is made President Tolles will probably confer with him. As Mr. Mygatt has done good work as chairman of the public affairs committee he will probably be asked to serve there another year, while he is also entitled to membership on some of the other important committees.

Among the other members who are entitled to recognition in the distribution of plums in the makeup of the committees, are Duncan W. Taylor, Charles C. Randolph and H. B. Suydam, and President Tolles can be depended upon to recognize their ability and the fact that they have done good work this year on the several committees of which they are members. Last night's caucus was a harmonious one and every Councilman present seemed pleased with the preliminary plans looking toward the coming year.

The 1909 Common Council will hold its first meeting Friday night, January 1, when the formal organization of the body will be effected and the committees announced by President Tolles. The city ordinances compell the Council to meet on the first day of the year for organization after which an adjournment is usually taken to a week or two later to take up the regular business.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

A meeting of the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company will be held Wednesday night in the fire-house for the election of officers. These have been nominated: For chief, William Hamilton; president, Harry J. Manning; financial secretary, Edward Ten Eyck; corresponding secretary, Harry Winters, Jr.; foreman, William Rielley; assistant foreman, Melvin Teeple; stewart, Charles Randolph.

The death of J. Hummer, of New Market, in the unfortunate acciden' at Panama, is deeply regretted by his many friends in this place.

William J. Leddin, of the firm of Leddin & Kaine, is in Boston working on a large plumbing contract for a restaurant concern.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Mrs. Nancy Wilcox, one of the town's oldest residents, is critically ill at her home on Front street with heart trouble and complication. Owing to her advanced age but little hopes are entertained for her recovery.

Miss Laura Bornmann, of Westfield road, entertained her class in the Baptist Sunday-school at her home yesterday afternoon. Several hours were pleasantly spent by teacher and scholars.

Principal S. Dana Townsend, of the public school, is entertaining Dr. Ballard, superintendent of the North Hampton, L. I., public school.

Miss Rose Spiegel, of Orange, has been spending several days with Miss Mamie Clark, of Bartle avenue.

Miss Winifred McGowan, of the corps of teachers, visited the Plainfield schools today.

The Township Committee met last night in the town rooms.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Christmas cantata to be produced by the Methodist Sunday-school on Wednesday night, December 23, is entitled "Entertaining Santa Claus" and includes in the cast: I. B. Huff, as Santa Claus; W. W. Giddes, the Storm King; John Dutcher, Jack Frost; Harry Giddes, the Raggedy Man; Willie Vail, as Harry; George Smith, as Eddie; Horace Williams, as Tom; Roy Smith, as John; Gertrude Boneby, as Maude; Gertrude Hughes, as Pearl; Belle States, as Bessie; Hazel Runyon, as Maymie; Emma Tetlow, as Gladys; Helen Shively, representing Sleep; the five brownies, John Maskell, Morris Staies, Leslie Vail, Lillie Watts, Madison Vail; the fairies, Helen Davenport, Lila States, Angie Huff, Florence Smith, Viola Boneby; the Little Tots, Blanche McCauley, Clifford Huff, Emily Williams, Edith Mundy. Mrs. P. C. Smith and Mrs. I. B. Huff are in charge of the entertainment and are conducting the rehearsals. A large tree will be arranged in the auditorium of the church and deliver its presents after the cantata. In the infant room there will be exercises by the little folks, under the direction of Miss May Apgar.

Rev. Stanley Davis, of Elizabeth, will preach and sing at the Methodist church Sunday morning. He is an excellent baritone singer and will favor the congregation with two songs, besides a discourse on "The Epworth League," it being league day, and will also be the occasion of the reopening of the church. The painting and decorating will have been completed by that time, so that services can once more be held in the main edifice. In the afternoon Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue church, Plainfield, will address a men's meeting and Russel Conroy, also of Plainfield, will play the piano. All of the boys clubs of the borough and the Jr. O. A. M. are invited to attend for whom seats will be reserved. At night Dr. R. R. Dohorty, of New York, will speak to young people. He is a layman and is connected with the Methodist Book Concern there.

Two tired travelers got off of an east-bound trolley car Saturday night and lay down in the street where they alighted and slept until the marshall discovered them and took them to the lock-up. A valise which they had with them was lying close by. Recorder D. S. Campbell gave them a hearing Sunday morning and fined each $1, which they paid and went on their way, saying they were on their way from Philadelphia to New York to look for work.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Meyers are being congratulated by their friends today, who by the way, are very numerous. The marriage was a big surprise.

BOUND BROOK AND VICINITY.

Members of Ivy Hook-and-Ladder Company of Bound Brook celebrated the twentieth anniversary of its organization last night with a banquet at the Berkeley. Music was furnished by an orchestra, and addresses were made by C. C. Rawlings, James A. Oldham, Mayor Dr. John T. Robinson and others.

Members of the Woman's Literary Club of Bound Brook have been invited to attend a meeting of the Somerville History Club of Somerville to be held in the chapel of the Second Reformed church of that place tomorrow afternoon, when Rev. A. A. Pfaustiehl will lecture on "Holland."

EXCISE REPORT FILED

enforcement of the excise laws exist to such an extent as to justify recourse to so drastic a remedy.

The proposition that where a business arrangements exists, the wholesaler should be held jointly liable with the customer for a violation, and that even when the violation occurs without the knowledge and against the wish of the wholesaler, is repugnant to the elemental principles of justice.

We concur in the proposition that certain general restrictions of the power to regulate and control be incorporated in the general laws of the State, to wit: A minimum license fee of $250 for all licenses; no new license in a municipality until the population has increased so that the ratio of one licensed place to 500 inhabitants has been established and the maintenance of that ratio thereafter provided, of course, that each municipality is entitled under all circumstances to at least one license; no sales between the hours of 12 o'clock midnight and six o'clock a. m., except by special permission of the licensing authority and the issuance of a special license with additional fee therefor.

It is idle to speak of local control and regulation and then strip the local board of every vestige of discretion by means of general laws prescribing the most trivial details in regard to excise matters.

The places to whict licenses shall be granted is also very properly a regulation to be left with the local boards and should not be the subject of a general law.

We recommend to the consideration of the Legislature the proposition whether the licensing authorities should not be empowered by law to grant to certain hotels and restaurants, if in their opinion a reasonable demand therefor exists, the right to serve beverages to bona fide guests, who have resorted to the licensed place on a Sunday for food or lodging. We do not hesitate to say unequivocally that we favor such legislation.

We cannot concur in the recommendation for additional legislation on the subject of revocation of licenses. Ample power to bring about the revocation of a license for cause already exists in our laws.

Finally, we lay stress upon the fact that the excise question has been a most frequent subject of agitation, from which turmoil have flowed frequent changes in the law. The result has been that no plan has been given sufficient permanence to afford a fair test of its efficacy. It has not yet been shown that any radical changes should be made in the existing laws of this State. If there are to be any changes, we believe the above recommendations are fair and reasonable.

Fought Two; Sent to Jail.

George Gannon, of East street, Bound Brook, was taken before Justice of the Peace Robert T. Brampton Saturday night, charged with assault and battery and resisting an officer, and was committed to the county jail at Somerville to await the action of the grand jury. Gannon, who had but a few days ago completed a ninety days' sentence for disorderly conduct, entered the Berkeley Hotel Saturday evening and called for a drink. Andrew Martin, the bartender, refused to serve him, and he became abusive, and, reaching across the bar, slapped Martin in the face. He was then ordered from the house, but refused to go. Martin left the bar to eject him, and was roughly handled by Gannon. Chief Marshal Andrew Flammer, who called in, placed Gannon under arrest, but in the struggle one of Flammer's thumbs was badly bitten.

Knocked Cop's Eye Out.

The trial of Joseph Satmar, of Perth Amboy, charged with knocking out the eye of Israel Weitzen, a Perth Amboy policeman, with a blackjack on October 10, was begun before Judge Booraem and a jury yesterday and is still on today at New Brunswick. Weitzen claims that he was trying to stop a general fight when he was attacked. Satmar denies the charge, claims that he never saw the blackjack and that he did not strike the policeman.

Ban on Pupils' Gifts.

There was a long discussion at the meeting of the East Orange Board of Education last night, when Commissioner Epstein recommended that no presents be allowed to be given at Christmas time to any of the employes of the board, teachers and principals. Following a long argument, a resolutions was passed advising the principals and teachers to discourage the giving of presents by the scholars as much as possible.

MR. RANDOLPH ON ATHENS.

view of the Acropolis. It was perhaps an hour before sunset; and the sun's rays, streaming through the dark shafts of Pentelic marble which remain to adorn the Acropolis after the vicissitudes of thousands of years, seemed to transform them into alabaster, and then almost to transfigure them with a supernal and golden transparency. After this, we could not be satisfied until we had ourselves stood on that spot, so replete with physical beauty and with precious associations; and before the day had closed we had left Lykabettos and had climbed the Acropolis.

"On this rocky elevation, overlooking Athens and the Attica Plain and its environment of handsome hills, stood three edifices, each of which has been called a Temple; and on this rock were also three famous statues of Athens. We make repeated visits to the Acropolis, and wonder and wonder amongst its ruins.

"A view of Athens and of Salamis and the sea, equally fine with that to be enjoyed from the Acropolis, is to be had from the Hill of Philipapos, on which stands the remnant of a monument to Antiochus the Fourth, who was dethroned by Vespasian. Our later excursions took us to the phyx and the Areopagus, both of which in Athens' ancient days heard the voices of her great orators and the declarations of wisdom and of judgment. More than a mention should be given to the noble Temple of the Olympian Zeus. After standing incomplete for some 700 years, it was finished by the Emperor Hadrain, and its impressive remnants may still be found near the Hadrian Arch.

"We looked in at the Stadium, where the Pan Anthenia games were held so long ago as 300 years before the Christian era, and where again they have recently been held, following the splendidly worthy restoration of the modern patriot-Greek.

"We cannot turn our backs upon Athens without seeking to delve a little, as it were, in the ancient Eleusinian mysteries, which were so closely associated with her religious thought in the time of her greatest glory, and which were amongst the last of the priceless possessions and treasures to which this devoted people most fondly clung.

"This journey covered a distance of twelve miles, and was performed on foot, and by torchlight, under the direction of the priests or spiritual authorities. They had charge of what were known as the Minor Mysteries, celebrated in the spring, and of the Major Mysteries, celebrated in the early autumn, that is, at the time of the September full-moon. Certain sacred objects were kept as treasures in what was known as the Telesterion of Eleusis. Whatever these Elusinian mysteries were, they must have been cunningly devised to affect the art-loving and sensuous Athenian nature, or they must have contained elements of culture and of grandeur.

"Meditating on these things, and wondering how much of the cult might have been a truly divine inspiration and preparation for a more perfect enlightenment to follow, and, on the other hand, how much of it as grafted on modern faith, was but a wild olive-graft, that should be cut out and destroyed, we stood and mused amidst the ruins of Eleusis.

"Truly the spirit of poetry is the breath of God. Not always may the ancient Greek have clearly comprehended the divine message. Not always does the modern Christian catch its deep, mystical meaning. Our minds are ceiled and soiled with the grossness of our earthly imprisonment, but, in the halcyon days to come, to all who can reach after and seize the truth, the sweet inexpressible longings of an ardent and poetic soul will find their affulgent realization in a light even more celestial and enchanting than that which descends at dazzling sunset upon the Athenian Acropolis."

ARNOLD DALY SCORES IN "THE PICKPOCKETS."

Atlantic City, Dec. 15.—In the Apollo Theatre last night Arnold Daly, aided by an excellent company, gave the first performance on any stage of C. M. S. McLellan's new play, "The Pickpockets," under Liebler and Co.'s management. It is the first work by McLellan since his "Leah Kleschna," and it socered an instantanteous success before a cosmopolitan audience largely composed of winter guests from the many hotels, augmented by numerous visitors from New York and Philadelphia.

The play, which has a momentous theme likely to appeal to all classes of Americans, has its location in the coal belt of Pennsylvania. When a big strike has reached its climax, United States troops arrive and a massacre is threatened. The story grips from the start and tensely unfolds to unexpected and stirring climaxes. Daly as a young millioniare who changes sides at the eleventh hour, winning the day for the miners, played with splendid effect a role of extraordinary sympathy, and seems to have found at least both play and part likely to serve him for seasons to come. The "Review" will say today: "Unquestionably one of the most powerful dramatic vehicles seen in this city of frequent premieres in a long time."

SOME GIFT SUGGESTIONS:

Why Not Give Stockings?

Our variety of Women's and Children's Hosiery is remarkably fine, besides the every day sort there are many fancy effects in Lisle Thread and Silk; also a complete stock of Merino and Cashmere Stockings.

Men's Neckwear

We never have shown such an excellent variety of fine Neckwear and each of the hundreds of patterns is in good taste and correct style—a cheering thought for the woman who is selecting Neckties. Richest silks, many exclusive designs; every conceivable coloring; a regular men's collection.

Holiday Ribbons

Ribbons are in great demand for all sorts of Holiday decorations and trimmings. Our stock was never so complete. Fine Satin Taffeta Ribbon in all the Holiday colors for fancy work and general use. Also a fine line of fancy warp print Dresden Ribbon.

Dolls! Dolls! Dolls!

Don't buy a doll till you see our wonderful showing. The prices are so low that people can hardly believe it. "Only 98c for that doll; my, it's a beauty," is heard many times during the day. French Jointed Dolls that open and shut their eyes, with beautiful hair, dressed and undressed, at

Men's Winter Underwear

Headquarters here for every sort of good Underwear that men may need, both in cotton and wool, in light, medium and heavy weight.

Beautiful New Waists

Entirely new models and the prices are most surprising. Net Waists, Linen Tailored Waists, Lawn and Batiste Waists, Silk Waists. If you want to give a useful Christmas gift here's your chance.

Victor Talking Machines

Get one of these ever-ready entertainers for your own home, or maybe you'd like to give one as a present. Our Easy Payment Plan makes but very little inroad on your Christmas money. Only a small payment down and $1.00 a week.

Framed Pictures

make excellent Holiday gifts. We have an excellent variety to choose from in Etchings, Photo-Colors, Oleographs, Water Colors, etc.; Pictures for every room in the house at moderate cost.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Richard Carle has a big advantage over the stage comedian, for he writes his own musical comedies. In this way he is able always to keep building up the character he portrays. In "Mary's Lamb," the lively play in which the tall comedian appears at the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night, he has the part of Leander Lamb, a hen-pecked man. The part fits him perfectly, but he has never ceased adding lines and jokes since the first performance of the play was given in March. Now he is greeted by an almost continuous laugh while he is on the stage—and he has cut out much work for himself.

Next Saturday afternoon and night Arnold Daly is to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre in C. M. S. McClellan's latest play, "The Pickpockets," a powerful depiction of the struggle between strength and weakness in our economic world. It is to be understood that the title carries only a metapherical significance, for "The Pickpockets" of Mr. McClellan's play are not common thieves or cutpurses, but those unduly exalted to an unfair social or business plane, by the mere gift of an instinct at which enables them to get money. What is there in this instinct, asks the author, that advances its possessor so much more materially than the finer instincts that lend to antithetical instincts be so much out of proportion to their intrinsic value per se? This the author asks, not in so many words, for he is neither muck-racker or preacher, but dramatist. He speaks only through dramatic action, and if reports speak truly, "The Pickpockets" is a drama of such admirable construction, such deep intensity, and so thrilling, that it will experience little difficulty in winning a high rank among the best of our native plays dealing with serious social problems.

The attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Christmas afternoon and night will be Bayonne Whipple and her successful play, "The Ninety and Nine." It is by Ramsay Morris, who has written before for Miss Whipple, with excellent results. Much that is complimentary is being said about the present production, which is said to afford ample opportunity for the talented young lady. Miss Whipple's steady and certain rise from somewhat humble beginning, behind the footlights, to her present enviable position as one of the three or four most popular American actresses, has been followed by a large number of theatre-goers and her appearance here during the week promises to be one of the most pleasant attractions of the season.

Miss Estelle Mills, of Trenton, has returned home after a visit with Plainfield friends.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

The men were rather striking in appearance; they were evidently gentlemen; the taller one was young, well set-up, clean-shaven and quietly but most correctly dressed. His light-brown hair showed a slight curl in its closely clipped locks; his gray-blue eyes had long lashes of brown darker than his hair; his teeth were very white, and there was a dimple in his cheek, plain when he smiled. Had his nose been straight he would have been as handsome as a Greek god, but the nose was only an ordinary American nose, rather too broad at the base; moreover, his jaw was a little too square for classic lines. Nevertheless, he was good to look upon, as well as strong and clean and wholesome, and when his gray-blue eyes strayed about the room the dimple dented his cheek and his white teeth gleamed in a kind of merry good-nature pleasant to see. But it was the other man who held the colonel's eye. This man was double the young man's age, or near that; he was shorter, although still of fair stature, and slim of build. His face was oval in contour and delicate of feature. Although he wore no glasses, his brow had the far pucker of a near-sighted man. There was a mole on his cheek bone and another just below his ear. Both were small, rather than large, and in no sense disfiguring; but the colonel noted them absently, being in the habit of photographing a man in a glance. The face had beauty, distinction even, yet about it hung some association, sinister as a poison label.

"Now, where," said the colonel to himself, "where have I seen that man?" Almost instantly the clew came to him. "By Jove, it's the brother!" he exclaimed. Three years ago, and he had almost forgotten; but here was Cary Mercer—the name came to him after a little groping—here he was again; but who was the pleasant youngster with him? And what were they discussing with so little apparent and so much real earnestness?

One of the colonel's physical gifts was an extraordinary acuteness of hearing. It passed the mark of a faculty and became a marvel. Part of this uncanny power was really due, not to hearing alone, but to an alliance with another sense, because Winter had learned the lip language in his youth; he heard with his eyes as well as his ears. This combination had made an unintentional and embarrassed eavesdropper out of an honest gentleman a number of times. To set off such evil tricks it had saved his life once on the plains and had rescued his whole command another time in the Philippines. While he studied the two faces a sentence from the younger man gripped his attention. It was: "I don't mind the risk, but I hate taking such an old woman's money."

"She has a heap," answered the other man carelessly; "besides—" He added something with averted head and in too low a voice to reach the listener unassisted. But it was convincing, evidently, since the young man's face grew both grave and stern. He nodded, muttering: "Oh, I understand; I wasn't backing water; I know we have lost the right to be squeamish. But I say, old chap, how long since Mrs. Winter has seen you? Would she recognize you?"

The colonel, who had been about to abandon his espionage as unbecoming a soldier and a gentleman, stowed away all his scruples at the mention of the name. He pricked up his ears and sharpened his eye, but was careful lest they should catch his glance. The next sentence, owing to the speaker's position, was inaudible and invisible; but he clearly caught the young man's response:

"You're sure they'll be on this train?"

And he saw the interlocutor's head nod.

"The boy's with them?"

An inaudible reply, but another nod.

"And you're sure of Miss Smith?"

This time the other's profile was toward the listener who heard the reply: "Plumb sure. I wish I were as sure of some other things. Have we settled everything? It is better not to be seen together."

"Yes, I think you've put me wise on the main points. By the way, what is the penalty for kidnaping?"

Again an averted head and hiatus, followed by the younger man's sparkling smile and exclamation: "Wow! Riskier than football—and even more fun!" Something further he added, but his arms hid his mouth as he thrust them into his greatcoat, preparing to move away. He went alone; and the other, after a moment's gloomy meditation, gathered up coat and bag and followed. During that moment of arrested decision, however, his features had dropped into sinister lines which the colonel remembered.

"Dangerous customer, or I miss my guess," mused the soldier, who knew the passions of men. "I wonder—they couldn't mean my Aunt Rebecca? She's old; she has millions of money—but she's not on this train. And there's no Miss Smith in our deck. I'm so used to plotting I go off on fake hikes! Probably I'm getting old and dotty. Mercer, poor fellow, may have his brain turned and be an anarchist or a bomb-thrower or a dirty kidnaper for revenge; but that boy's a decent chap; I've licked too many second lieutenants into shape not to know something of youngsters."

He pushed the idea away; or, rather, his own problems pushed it out of his mind, which went back to his ward and his single living brother. Melville had no children, only his wife's daughters, who were both married—Melville having married a widow with a family, an estate and a mind of her own. Melville was a professor in a state university, a mild, learned man whom nature intended for science but whom his wife was determined to make into the president of the university.

"Even money which will win," chuckled Rupert Winter to himself. "Millicent hasn't much tact; but she has the perseverance of the saints. She married Mel; he doesn't know, but she surely did. And she bosses him now. Well, I suppose Mel likes to be bossed; he never had any strenuous opinions except about the canals of Mars—Valgame dios!"

With a gasp the colonel sprang to his feet. There before him, in the flesh, was his sister-in-law. Her stately figure, her Roman profile, her gracefully gesticulating hand, which indicated the colonel's position to her heavily laden attendant, a lad in blue—these he knew by heart just as he knew that her toilet for the journey would be in the latest mode, and that she would have the latest fashion of gait and mien. Millicent studied such things.

She waved her luggage into place—an excellent place—in the same breath dismissing the porter and instructing him when he must return. Then, but not until then, did she turn graciously to her brother-in-law.

"I hoped that I should find you, Bertie," she said in a voice of such creamy richness that it was hard to credit the speaker with only three short trips to England. "Melville said you were to take this train; and I was so delighted, so relieved! I am in a most harassing predicament, my dear Bertie."

"That's bad," murmured the colonel with sympathetic solicitude; "what's the trouble? Couldn't you get a section?"

"I have my reservations, but I don't know whether I shall go to-night."

AN ORDINANCE

For the Laying Out and Opening of Kensington Avenue from the Southerly Side Line of Prospect Avenue to the Northeasterly Side Line of Park Avenue.

Whereas, the Common Council have judged and do hereby judge that the public good requires that Kensington Avenue should be laid out and opened between the points named in the title to this ordinance, therefore

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That a public street to be known as Kensington Avenue, be and the same is hereby ordered laid out and opened in said City as hereinafter specified, that is to say:

The center line of said street shall begin at an iron monument, being the intersection of the center line of Kensington Avenue with the southerly side line of Prospect Avenue as now laid out and opened, and running from said point in a southerly direction along the center line of said Kensington Avenue as shown on a map entitled "Perfected Map of Central Park, City of Plainfield, New Jersey, Oct. 1904," filed in the office of the City Clerk, October 14, 1907, over lands now or formerly of Central Park Realty Company and Agnes R. Bird, Fred Bird, Margaret Vail and Caro Bird, a distance of 1512.57 feet to an iron monument in the northerly line of property now or formerly of Jonathan Clawson, thence running in a southerly direction over lands now or formerly of Jonathan Clawson and George E. Sovereign, in a straight line a distance of 877.88 feet to an iron monument in the northeasterly side line of Park Avenue, and there to end. Said street to be sixty feet in width, that is to say, thirty feet on each side of said center line. Said center line and also the side lines of said street are delineated on a certain map filed in the office of the City Clerk, June 29, 1908, entitled "Map showing proposed laying out and opening of Kensington Avenue from Prospect Avenue to Park Avenue and Randolph Road, City of Plainfield, N. J., Sept., 1907," to which map reference is hereby made for greater certainty.

The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken for the laying out and opening of said Kensington Avenue on the easterly side of said center line of said proposed street from the southerly side line of Prospect Avenue to the northeasterly side line of Park Avenue, are all those lands, real estate and appurtenances included between said center line and a line thirty feet distant therefrom in an easterly direction and parallel therewith.

The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken for the laying out and opening of said Kensington Avenue on the westerly side of said center line of said proposed street from the southerly side line of Prospect Avenue to the northeasterly side line of Park Avenue, are all those lands, real estate and appurtenances included between said center line and a line thirty feet distant therefrom in a westerly direction and parallel therewith; the lands to be taken on both sides of said center line include all that part of the lands, real estate and appurtenances now or formerly of Central Park Realty Company, Agnes R. Bird, Fred Bird, Margaret Vail, Caro Bird, Jonathan Clawson and George E. Sovereign, which lies within said side lines.

The lands, real estate and appurtenances to be taken and the lines of the proposed street as the same is hereinbefore ordered to be laid out and opened, are shown on said map on file with the City Clerk, last hereinabove referred to and hereby made a part hereof.

Adopted by the Common Council, November 27, 1908; Approved by the Mayor, December 5, 1908.

SAENGERBUNDS DEFEAT THE KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS

The Saengerbund and Knights of Pythias teams rolled in the Fraternal bowling league at Campbell's alleys, last night, the former taking two games out of three. The series was closely contested and narrow margins were the rule each time. The Knights took the first tally by a lead of twelve, the Saengerbunds squeezed ahead in the second by a single pin and won the third by fourteen to the good.

Nash, of the Pythians, was the only man to go over the 200 mark, doing it twice. The nearest best score was a 198 made by John Wirth, captain of the singing society delegation.

NORTH PLAINFIELD WINS OVER CITY SCHOOL RIVALS

North Plainfield High School conquered its bitter rival, the Plainfield High School, at basketball yesterday afternoon. It was a hard fought game and at the same time cleanly played and void of wrangling.

The borough players owe their victory to clever shooting, the performances of Conroy being especially noteworthy. Their team work was good, and showed surprising improvement since the last apeparance in a match game.

Snyder and Doane did excellent work for Plainfield. In fact every player on both teams played hard and fast.

The game was the second in the Interscholastic League championship series and was contested on neutral grounds, the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. The score was 21 to 9.

The line up:

| P. H. S. | N. P. H. S. |
|---|---|
| Snyder | Conroy |
| Clark | Stein |
| forwards. | |
| Lidgate | Overton |

ORGANIZED THE SENATE

Republicans in Caucus Make Robbins President and Frelinghuysen Leader.

HOUSE APPORTIONS POSITIONS.

Union County Fairs Well in Both Branches in Distribution of the Plums.

Republican members of the State Senate, constituting the majority of that body, met at the State House at Trenton yesterday and caucused on the official makeup for the enusing term. The slate agreed upon by the Republican leaders went through without a hitch, except for a tilt over the position of assistant secretary.

These Senate officers were selected for the 133d Legislature, which will be convened here on Tuesday, January 12:—President, Samuel K. Robbins, of Burlington county; Republican Floor Leader, Joseph Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, the position putting him in line for presiding officer the last year of his present term; Secretary, Howard L. Tyler, of Cumberland; Assistant Secretary, William C. Murphy, of Camden; Journal Clerk, John W. Cliff, of Union; Sergeant at Arms, Gaudaloup A. Holl, of Mercer; Bill Clerk, Charles A. Trimble, of Union, and Supervisor of Bills, Edward A. Sexsmith, of Monmouth.

Atlantic—Assistant to president's secretary, doorkeeper, gallery keeper and page.

Bergen—Calendar clerk, clerk to Railroad and Canals Committee and doorkeeper.

Burlington—Assistant sergeant at arms, president's private secretary, page.

Camden — Assistant secretary, clerk to Appropriations Committee and cloak room keeper.

Cumberland—Senate secretary, clerk to president and doorkeeper.

Gloucester—Clerk to Printed Bills Committee, doorkeeper and file clerk

Mercer—Sergeant at arms, stenographer and two pages.

Monmouth—Supervisor of bills; asistant to secretary and page.

Morris—Clerks to committees on Revision of Laws, Banking and insurance and Municipal Corporations and gallery keeper.

Salem—Assistant supervisor of bills; clerk to Public Health Committee and doorkeeper.

Union—Journal clerk, bill clerk, clerk to Corporations Committee and doorkeeper.

Tilt over the position of Assistant Secretary was due to the candidacy of Howard B. Keasby, of Salem county, for whom Senator Plummer stood sponsor. Keasby was last year clerk to the Committee on Printed Bills, and this year wanted something better. He had no show in the caucus, however, due, it was said, to the fact that he is in disfavor in South Jersey because of the part he has been taking in factional disputes in the party ranks. Mr. Murphy was backed by Senator Bradley, of Camden, and easily won out. Last year he served as private secretary to the President of the Senate, Thomas J. Hillery.

COURT DISMISSES CHARGE AGAINST MOTORMAN LOCK

The charge of running a trolley car at a reckless rate of speed preferred against Motorman Charles Lock after he had crashed into Patrick J. Regan's milk wagon at Front street and Giraud avenue, last Tuesday night, was dismissed in the city court, this morning. Judge Runyon declared that sufficient evidence had not been produced to verify the complaint.

The police put Peter Mohan and George Rinehart, of Dunellen, on the stand as witnesses, but their stories did not jibe. The former declared the car was running at a high rate of speed but he was unable to state how much, while Rinehart said it was fully twenty-five miles an hour. Mohan also admitted that the car had stopped within a length after Regan's wagon was struck and that there is a down grade where the accident occurred. Lock was represented by Lawyer Clarence Case, of Somerville, of the firm of Clark & Case.

Regan, the victim of the accident, was discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital Monday, but it will be some weeks yet before he recovers fully. He sustained two broken ribs and numerous severe cuts on the head.

GRAND JURY THROWS OUT ARLINGTON HOTEL CASE

From various authentic sources it was learned today that the Somerset county Grand Jury, yesterday, threw out the disorderly house charge preferred by the North Plainfield police against Morris Farbman, proprietor of the Arlington hotel. Several witnesses were brought before the body but it is understood that what they had to say did not substantiate the claim made by the authorities. Further proceedings, it is said, were ordered dropped and Farbman's bond will be released.

The defendant's arrest followed a spectacular raid on the Arlington hotel in which some eighteen men and women patrons of the place were arrested in addition to the proprietor. They were kept prisoners in the borough jail from 11:30 on a Saturday night until late the next afternoon. At the hearing before Recorder Dolliver, Farbman was held on the charge of keeping a disorderly house and four men and two women caught in the raid were placed under bonds as witnesses. Chief Marshal Weiss made the complaint against the proprietor and stated on the witness stand that the descent on the hotel was planned and conducted by himself.

Francis J. Blatz and William G. DeMeza were counsel for Farbman and conducted a vigorous defense at the hearing.

HAND MADE ARTICLES FOR SALE BY SISTERS.

Some very beautiful pieces of fancy work, made by the Sisters of Mercy, of Mt. St. Mary's College, are for sale at the home, 43 Manning avenue.

Tapestries, doilies, center pieces and china painting of pretty designs and excellent workmanship are on exhibition, or if any one wishes to inspect a certain line of work, samples will be submitted to them at their homes, on their calling. Telephone 718-J.

The sale will continue for two weeks at the home and after that the articles may be secured at the college, at any time during the year.

The sisters work monograms and special designs on household linens, and in fact, are prepared to fill orders for all kinds of useful and ornamental articles, made entirely by hand.

IMPORTO IS HELD TO AWAIT ACTION OF GRAND JURY.

Tomaso Importo who engaged in a stilletto duel with a fellow Italian at Fanwood a few weeks ago, during which his throat was cut, left Muhlenberg Hospital this morning in company with Marshal Logan, of Fanwood, who took the man to the county jail at Elizabeth, where the other Italian is being detained. He will be held to wait the action of the Grand Jury.

Importo was more seriously injured than the other fellow, and at first it was believed he would die. The Italian with whom he fought received stabs in the shoulders, but has since recovered.

Juniors Did Not Meet.

The committees from the various Jr. O. U. A. M. councils of the city which were to have met Monday night to consider questions relative to forming a Union county association, did not put in an appearance. Arrangements will be made to hold a meeting within a short time.

FAVOR SUNDAY SELLING

Crimes Commission Majority so Recommend in Report to Governor Fort.

THE WOMEN MEMBERS RESIGN.

But They Signed Majority Report and Their Reason is Only Known to Themselves.

Governor Fort's special commission to investigate the cause of dependency and crime had a stormy conference at Trenton yesterday, in which the two women members resigned because of serious differences of opinion relative to the work and the report of the commission. The retiring members are Mrs. Emily V. Williamson, of Elizabeth, and Mrs. Caroline B. Alexander, of Hoboken, two of the best known philanthropists of the state. Real reason for the resignation of Mrs. Williamson and Mrs. Alexander is known only to themselves and to Governor Fort, with whom the conference was held. One of the most radical recommendations of the majority report is for the sale of liquor on Sunday. The report says—

"We find a general and notorious violation, most of it unpunished and apparently unpunishable, of the present stringent laws against the sale of liquor on Sunday. We believe that relaxation of the excise statutes will lead to a more general observance and respect for all laws. For that reason, we recommend that the sale of wine and malt liquors be legalized in restaurants and dining-rooms of hotels, with meals on Sunday."

Majority members also recommend the repeal of the old "blue laws" and the legalizing of Sunday baseball and like amusement for the benefit of those who are obliged to work all through the week. Other recommendations relative to amusements include the establishment of public playgrounds and the restriction of cheap theatres and moving picture shows. The report recommends the abandonment of the State prison in this city, declaring that it is shockingly unhealthy, and recommends the erection of a modern prison with a large farm attached. The trusty and contract labor systems at the prison are condemned.

The women members signed the majority report.

FERGUSON PROVES THAT "PUNCHIE" TOOK HIS $2

Miss "Punchie" Lewis' vigorous defense against Al Ferguson's accusation of having stolen his $2 at the Betts family joy party, Saturday night, collapsed like a punctured balloon in the city court this morning. She was caught fair and square with the goods and after a few feeble denials of testimony submitted by two witnesses she obeyed Judge Runyon's command to hand over the amount involved in the dispute. She paid it out of $10 she clutched tightly in her hand while the hearing proceeded and the fact that she had the money ready is explained by the following:

Ferguson declared yesterday that he could produce witnesses who saw "Punchie" have his $2 and he came to court real early this morning with Mrs. Betts and a Miss Agens. "Punchie" arrived a little later and she at once proceeded to buzz the two women to see what they were going to say. There is every reason to believe that from what she learned, the defendant realized she had a hard proposition before her as she suddenly chased out of the room and sped up Sycamore street. When she returned a few minutes later her right hand was clutched around something. It proved to be $10 when the grip was loosened. The court cops figure out that "Punchie" believed she would be called upon to refund Ferguson's two spot and probably pay a fine beside. There was no penalty attached, however, but Judge Runyon warned her to take something for her symptoms of kleptomania.

Mrs. Betts and Miss Agens told stories that left no doubt in the court's mind as to what had become of the greenback and "Punchie's" protestations that they were wrong in their assertions had no effect. Ferguson refrained from saying anything but it was plain to see that he was greatly pleased at getting revenge on the defendant for her reference to him yesterday as a "chipmunk." He grinned broadly and said "thank you" when "Punchie" passed over the two bucks.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church will hold its regular monthly meting at the home of Mrs. M. Klimer, of Dunellen, on Thursday.

TUBERCULOSIS CONGRESS

Dr. B. van D. Hedges and L. R. Thurlow Among Speakers for Jersey Day.

N. Y. TOMORROW AFTERNOON.

Governor Fort to Preside—Bishop McFaul and Mrs. Williamson to Make Addresses.

Governor Fort has accepted an invitation to preside at the great international tuberculosis exhibit, American Museum of Natural History, New York, tomorrow. It will be New Jersey State day at the exhibition, and an elaborate program has been arranged by the New Jersey Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, which has made all arrangements for the day.

At 2 o'clock in the afternoon Governor Fort will preside at a meeting which will include the following speakers and program:

"What New Jersey Has Done to Prevent Tuberculosis," William C. Smallwood, executive secretary of the New Jersey Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis; "The Responsibility of the Church in the Tuberculosis Campaign," the Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, bishop of Trenton; "The Responsibility of State and Municipalities in the Tuberculosis Campaign," Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, president State Charities Aid, of Elizabeth; "New Jersey's Need of Sanatoria and Hospitals for Consumptives," Dr. Henry H. Davis, of Camden; "The Danger of Apathy in Tuberculosis," L. R. Thurlow, health officer of this city; general discussion, Dr. Gordon K. Dickinson, Jersey City; Dr. Luther M. Halsey, Williamstown; Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, of this city, and Selskar M. Gunn, Orange.

The New Jersey State day meeting will be held in the auditorium hall of the Museum of Natural History. Indications point to a notable gathering from all parts of the State of people interested in the fight against tuberculosis. The meeting has been widely advertised through the twenty-five local committees of the association, through churches, department stores, Y. M. C. A., schools and State and local boards of health. A request has been made to the State Board of Education to dismiss the schools on that day, giving every teacher in the State an opportunity to visit the exhibition.

Thursday evening a public conference of all citizens and societies interested in the cure and the prevention of the spread of tuberculosis will be held at the Free Public Library in Newark under the auspices of the Board of Associated Charities.

RELIEF CORPS ELECTS.

Scott Post's Women's Auxiliary Meeting.

At a special meeting of the Women's Relief Corps, yesterday afternoon, these officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. S. R. Struthers; senior vice-president, Mrs. Emma K. Frazee; junior vice-president, Mrs. Emma L. Stephens; treasurer, Miss Mary T. Smith; chaplain, Mrs. Sarah E. Mattox; conductor, Mrs. Hattie Gibbons; guard, Mrs. Elizabeth Naylor; delegates to department convention, Mrs. Maria C. Terry and Mrs. Hattie Gibbons; alternates, Miss May E. Howlett and Mrs. Mary Meyers. The appointive officers will be announced by the president at the time of installation in January.

Saleem Farhat Comes to America.

Saleem Farhat, brother of Mitree Farhat, of this city, arrived in New York on Monday on the steamer Philadelphia, from his home in Tyre, Phoenecia. The brothers have not seen each other for four years and the greeting at the steamship lasted for several minutes. Saleem Farhat, who is fifteen years old, will make his home in Plainfield soon after the first of the year. He speaks excellent English, having been educated in the Presbyterian Mission School at Sidon, of which Dr. Jessup is the president. Young Farhat arrived in his Eastern costume, and the first thing his brother did was to take him to a men's furnishing store, where he donned American clothing and furnishings. He is now stopping in New York temporarily.

Groszmann School Xmas.

The annual Christmas exercises of the Groszmann School at Watchung Crest will be held Saturday afternoon at the school. Dr. A. B. Poland, superintendent of the public schools of Newark, and Dr. George Alexander Kohut, of New York, are expected to make addresses. Dr. Poland is considered one of the foremost educators in the country and is practically interested in the establishment of special provisions for exceptional children in public schools. Cards of admisison to the exercises can be had on application.

DOLLAR GAS JANUARY 1

Public Service Corporation Making Preparations for Reduction in Rate.

ELECTRIC RATE THE SAME.

Where Quarter Meters are Being Used, Lower Price for Gas is Now Being Given.

According to its announcement in The Daily Press on October 24, 1906, the Public Service Corporation, commencing January 1, 1909, will reduce the price of gas in Plainfield and vicinity from $1.15 net to $1.10 net, and if bills are paid within ten days the consumer will receive a ten per cent. discount, making the price $1. This price has been in effect in Newark for the past six years, but two years ago the company announced that the same rate would become effective here on January 1, 1909, and that the change would mean dollar gas for Plainfield and adjoining towns.

While the new rate for gas will go into effect generally January 1, there are instances of where it will become effective at once. This will apply to the quarter meters in use in this vicinity. The company, to conform to the reduced price for gas is compelled to change the quarter meter boxes, installing a twenty tooth wheel for the one now in use. A charge of five cents a tooth is made. Wherever the new wheel is changed for the old, the new rate becomes effective at once. This work had to be started now in order to complete the work by January 1.

According to officials of the company this is a marked reduction, as there are few suburban towns and cities that have dollar gas. The change here will make a big difference in the bills of the consumers, as well as the receipts of the company from the gas department.

No change is announced in the rate for electricity. The company reduced the price for electric consumption a year ago, and there will be no further reduction for some time to come. The company has for a long time received its supply of gas from the large plant at Camden, and owing to better facilities is able to cut the rate on gas.

DR. CORNWELL WEDS MISS ELIZABETH JOHNSON

In the presence of a small gathering of relatives and friends in the Chantry of Grace church, New York, at 2 o'clock this afternoon, Dr. Frank Wilbur Cornwell, of this city, and Miss Elizabeth Fairfax Johnson, of New York, were united in marriage The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington.

Miss Johnson was given in marriage by a relative, Nicholas Snowden Hill, Jr., of New York, and was unattended. The best man was Dr. VanAlstyn Hartwell, a former well-known resident of Trenton, and the following were ushers: Dr. Herbert C. DeVere Cornwell, of New York; Calvin Freeman Cornwell, of Morristown, cousins of the groom; John Lutz Cornwell, of this city, a brother, and William A. DeLong, Jr., also of Plainfield. There was no reception. Dr. and Mrs. Cornwell will return from a wedding trip on Christmas day and will reside at East Seventh street and Watchung avenue.

Miss Johnson is a native of Virginia and a member of the Colonial families of Johnson and Fairfax. She has been making her home in New York for some time. Dr. Cornwell is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Robbins Cornwell, of this city, and is one of the most successful of Plainfield's younger practitioners. He is a graduate of the Plainfield High school and the New York Homeopathic College, class '00.

Negotiated Hotel Deal.

John H. Kitchen negotiated the deal for the transfer of the Hotel Kensington business from W. J. Poulson to John Burns, of Flemington. In part payment, Mr. Poulson got a handsome home in Flemington where he will reside. Mr. Burns will take possession of the hotel as soon as the license can be transferred to him.

Christmas Box for the Sailors.

Any person wishing to contribute articles for the Christmas box which will be sent to the sailors in New York, may do so by sending their donations to Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, of 117 Elmwood place, not later than Monday, at which time the box will be forwarded to Captain Benn, who has charge of this work in New York.

MISS BLIMM THE BRIDE OF GEORGE O. STRAYER

Miss Mary Katherine Blimm and George O. Strayer were quietly married yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Blimm, only the immediate members of the two families being present. Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church, officiated.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Edward O. Clark, and her brother, Harry Blimm, acted as best man. A traveling gown of London smoke material was worn by the bride and a maroon colored gown with hat to match was worn by the bridesmaid.

The parlors were prettily decorated with ferns and white flowers Edward O. Clark played the wedding march. A reception and supper followed the ceremony and the couple left on a wedding trip to Washington and Philadelphia.

On their return in two weeks Mr and Mrs. Strayer will reside on Darrow avenue in a house recently built for them. The groom has lived in Plainfield for several years and is a machinist employed by the Pond Company. His parents live at Williamsport, Pennsylvania.

JOHNSON'S SENTENCE SEVEN YEARS IN PRISON

Thomas Johnson, the Plainfield negro, who shot his wife with murderous intent after fracturing her jaw with a blow from his fist, was arraigned before Judge Atwater in the Union county court, this morning and sentenced to seven years at hard labor in the State prison. He received the court's judgment with the same stolid indifference that has marked his demeanor since he gave himself up to the police after committing the crime. He will be taken to Trenton within a day or two.

Richard J. Grant, the bogus piano tuner who pleaded non vult on two charges of obtaining money from Plainfield people under false pretenses, was also arraigned this morning, and committed to the Rahway reformatory. The length of his imprisonment will depend upon his conduct and the action of the court at some future date. Grant pleaded hard for leniency and petitions in his behalf were presented by New York friends. During his operations in Plainfield he ruined several instruments he was supposed to repair two of them being valued at $1,000 each. He claimed to be a representative of the Steinway company and gained entrance to the homes of the wealthiest residents of the city and borough.

The crime for which Johnson was sentenced was one of the most brutal the local police have ever encountered. He returned to his wife's home after practically deserting her for seven months and then found fault with all she and her children did. He claimed that the latter "sassed" him and determined to wreak vengeance on Mrs. Johnson because she upheld them. He waited up for her at the home while she was out consulting white friends as to what she should have done with him and picked a quarrel with her as soon as she returned. He had a pistol in his pocket and after giving her a terrible beating, shot her in one of the eyes. She was discharged from Muhlenberg hospital last Saturday, but will never fully recover.

Funeral of Hugh Laing.

The funeral of Hugh Laing was held yesterday afternoon at the residence of William F. Williams, of Westervelt avenue. The service was private and was conducted by Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church. The floral tributes included an offering from the Painters' Union and the following members of the organization acted as pall bearers: Andrew Love, George Mead, Fred Hale, George Rockefeller, Edward Chargois and Thomas Stack. Burial was in the North Plainfield cemetery.

Notified of Father's Death.

Robert F. R. Huntsman, of East Front street, and John F. Huntsman, Jr., of Watchung avenue, received word by telegram this morning that their father, John F. Huntsman, had died suddenly at his home in Providence, R. I. He was general agent in that city of the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company and a prominent resident. He is survived by four sons and four daughters. Robert Huntsman left for Providence at once.

—Leave orders for holiday goods with Neuman Brothers. They have prepared mince meats, plum puddings, fancy fruits, assorted nuts and many other things. Prompt deliveries assured.

"M. O." REPORT FINDING

Public Ownership of Water Supply Deemed Advisable Under Certain Conditions.

ALTERNATIVE, BETTER TERMS.

Final Approval of Document Last Night—To Be Presented to Next Common Council.

Unanimous approval of its report was made at a meeting last night of the Bi-municipal municipal ownership commission, which has investigated the feasibility and desirability of public water supply control, and the document is now in the hands of the printer. It was originally intended to present the report to the City's Common Council at a special meeting on Monday night, but the plans have been changed and the report will be made to the incoming body next month.

While every effort is being made to keep the findings as secret as other reports of the present administration before presentation to the governing body, it is commonly reported that the commission favors public ownership provided the city can obtain the present facilities of the Plainfield-Union Water Company and that it can get permanent and exclusive control of the water supply in this city. This, it is reported, is made conditional on the voters' approval, and on the removal of all legal barriers.

The law committee of the commission has submitted an extensive report dealing thoroughly with every phase of the question and its finding is that the legal obstacle is not insurmountable. The engineering committee, guided largely by Joseph O. Osgood and William E. Saunders, has also gone deeply into the subject pointing out the difficulties confronting the attainment of the scheme.

If public ownership is not finally favored, it is said that the commission recommends that the city fathers obtain a better contract from the private company for the benefit of the consumers. If such be the case a demand will be made for water meters.

Those at the meeting last night were Mayor C. J. Fisk, Joseph O. Osgood, William A. Coddington, George P. Mellick and John B. Dumont.

TO EXPLAIN OBJECTS OF A BENEVOLENT ORDER.

The Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association will meet Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in St. Mary's School Hall on Liberty street, to discuss plans for the winter. The aims and objects will be explained by Mrs. M. T. Quinn, supreme trustee and Mrs. Jane Dougherty of the New Jersey Advisory Senate. This association has now over 125,000 members and a reserve fund of over $1,000,000.

The New Jersey Advisory Senate composed of delegates from the branches of this association will have its banquet in Newark, on February 22. It promises to be one of the largest gatherings of the kind ever held.

Mrs. Adelaide D. Drayton.

Mrs. Adelaide D. Drayton, widow of John B. Drayton, died at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. Henry Depew, on Hillside avenue, following a long illness. During the past month she failed rapidly. For several years Mrs. Drayton has been living with her daughter. She had been a resident of Plainfield about thirty years, having moved here from Jersey City. She was a faithful communicant of Grace church and prior to her illness was actively engaged in the work there, and was also a liberal contributor to various church and charitable objects. She is survived by three sons, William H. Drayton and J. Wiswell Drayton, of this city, and J. Gilmore Drayton, of Niagara Falls; also one daughter, Mrs. R. Henry Depew. The funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Wanted—A Xmas Tree.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Harry Montgomery, who will appear as a talkative negro servant in "Mary's Lamb" when Richard Carle brings his newest musical comedy to the New Plainfield theatre next Friday night is a brother of David Montgomery, of Montgomery and Stone, now playing in "The Red Mill." He and his brother began their stage careers together, appearing in vaudeville made up like Pullman porters. Harry, who is perhaps better known as "Scamp" Montgomery, has been with wagon and tent shows and in every kind of stage entertainment. Once he played the drums in Sousa's band. He has created three great negro characters—Eaton Ham in "George Washington, Jr.," Low Down Smith in "Cape Cod Folks" and Sylvester Q. Nightingale in "Mary's Lamb."

The production of C. M. S. McLellan's "The Pickpockets," with Arnold Daly as star, at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night, will be made additionably notable by the appearance in Mr. Daly's support of Katherine Kaelred, the latest of the Liebler & Co. "discoveries." The list of these "discoveries" is no short one, containing, among many others, such names as Eleanor Robson, William T. Hodge, Mabel Taliaferro, Ada Dwyer, Olive Wyndham, Katherine Grey, Edmund Breese, and Lillian Albertson. Miss Kaelred is a Norwegian girl, who has appeared with some success in England, but was practically unknown here until she made her appearance with "The Pickpockets."

Ramsay Morris' stage story of the Indiana prairies, under the title of the "Ninety and Nine," will be the offering at the New Plainfield theatre for Xmas matinee and night. The selection of a leading woman for the part of Ruth Blake was one of the difficulties that confronted the management in the endeavor to offer a company that would assure the proper handling of the play. The part is one of the strongest ever created in a melodrama and requires a woman of splendid histrionic ability to interpret it. While the field was a large one to choose from, the selection of Miss Bayonne Whipple assures the friends of the piece a splendid performance. Miss Whipple's experience as a stock star has ably fitted her for the trying role of the heroine of Mr. Morris' master effort and the event of the production bids fair to make an epoch in the season's history at the local play house. Miss Whipple has an excellent company in support of her, in fact a major portion of the original cast that appeared during the run of the piece at the Academy of Music, in the city of New York, will be seen here.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Friends First-day school will hold its Christmas entertainment between Christmas and New Year's.

The Christmas service will be held at the Congregational church Sunday, December 27, with a special program of music and a sermon by the pastor.

"Work Among Foreigners," will be the subject at the W. C. T. U. meeting tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The regular meeting during Christmas week will be omitted.

The Christmas service and exercises by the Sunday-school will be held at the First Baptist church on Sunday, December 27. The Sunday-school service will be held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Under the direction of Superintendent L. W. Randolph, the Sunday-school of Faith chapel is preparing an elaborate Christmas celebration, including a Sunday service and entertainment during the week following.

Both during Christmas and New Year's week the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will combine its meeting with the mid-week service on Wednesday, owing to the fact that those holidays fall on the society's meeting night.

The annual meeting of the parents and others interested in children will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. William D. Murray will speak on "The Use of Bible Stories in Cultivating Children's Imagination."

Millinery Up-to-Date

Widest Variety Here to Choose From

It is generally known and admitted in the trade that this house carries all thru the season by odds the largest collection of hats in the State—many times more than any other store shows at this time. It is the policy of most millinery shops to let the stocks run down, and those who have hats to buy in mid-season find the average millinery store a very uninviting and unattractive place.

We are in the millinery business thruout the year, and we are ready at all times to satisfy every desire of our patrons. If you need a hat now we are prepared with generous assortments of the very latest styles from which you can pick with pleasure and profit.

If there is one reason more than another for the great millinery business we do it is the immense stocks we carry, and the wide variety you have to choose from at all times. The business we do in December outrivals the business done by most houses in October.

Knowing us to be always alive and alert to our opportunities, manufacturers and importers come to us with their goods and big lots when they wish to unload, knowing that we can sell them for them to the best advantage. That brings to you, our patrons, the best millinery bargains that any house can offer, of which the following are examples:

Trimmed Hats—An immense assortment to choose from; regular prices up to $5; special priced at only 95c.

Another Lot of Trimmed Hats—Regular prices up to $10; will be sold for only $1.95.

Still Another Lot of Trimmed Hats—Regular prices up to $15; will be sold at the little price of $2.95.

Trimmed Hats—Worth to $20; go at $4.95.

Trimmed Hats—Worth to $30; may be picked up at $6.95.

Misses' and Children's Trimmed Ready-to-Wear Felt Hats—In all popular shapes and colors; regular prices 98c to $2, at the astonishing price of 47c.

Untrimmed Felt Hats—In the most up-to-date shapes and colors; regular prices $1 to $1.50, are to go tomorrow at only 25c.

Untrimmed Hats—In all the most desirable shapes and colors; $1.75 to $2.50 kinds, have been marked 47c.

Untrimmed Hats—In many desirable materials, shapes and colors; regular prices running from $3 to $6—an astonishing bargain at 93c.

Big Sale of Waists

NEW AND BEAUTIFUL, YET JUST HALF PRICE

Advance 1909 Models—about twenty-five styles in all—and the sheerest Persian and Batiste Waists from one of our best makers; elaborately trimmed with the daintest of imported embroideries and Filet and German Valenciennes laces; some with all-over embroidery; others covered with dainty pin tucks; all with newest long trimmed and tucked sleeves—most distinctive styles everyone of them; size 34 to 44; offered at these prices—

$2.00 Waits $1.00.
$3.00 Waists $1.50.
$3.50 Waists $2.00.
$4.50 Waists $2.50.

Calendars

10,000 IN A GREAT SALE

PRICES ONE-THIRD AND LESS THAN USUAL.

We have just closed out a prominent publisher's entire line of calendars, embracing an enormous variety of kinds—some simple in construction, yet very beautiful; others in novel cut out effects; calendars to please grown folks and children as well; just opened up and placed on sale at one-third the prices the publisher intended them to sell at.

50c. Calendars for only 12c.
75c. Calendars for only 25c.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

BASEBALL.

Roger Bresnahan, the Giant's star catcher, is the central figure of a three-cornered deal consummated Saturday. Bresnahan has been traded to the St. Louis National League Club, which he will manage. The deal was arranged by Manager McGraw, of the Giants; W. S. Robison, owner of St. Louis, and Clark Griffith, the new manager of the Cincinnati Club.

By the deal, the New York club will get Catcher Schlei of Cincinnati, Outfielder Murray and Pitcher Raymond of St. Louis. For Schlei the Cincinnati Club gets two pitchers, Karger and either Fromme or Lush. Robison was so anxious to secure Bresnahan to manage St. Louis that he was willing to make almost any sacrifice, and the deal was easily arranged.

Bresnahan is one of the best catchers in the country. He was particularly effective in handling young pitchers. Schlei is a Cincinnati catcher, and had been on the team for about four years. He was developed in the Western League, and batted .220 for eighty-eight games last season against .283 by Bresnahan. Schlei's fielding average was better than Bresnahan's, however. He is an excellent player.

Murray has played left field two years for the Cardinals. He developed into a good college catcher at Notre Dame, but after joining St. Louis was placed in the outfield. Last season his batting average was .282. As an extra base hitter and base runner, Murray is second only to Wagner. He played in every game last season and made 167 hits for a total of 237 bases.

Raymond started his baseball career about four years ago and has been a successful pitcher. It is McGraw's intention to play Murray regularly in the left field, and Schlei will be New York's main dependence behind the bat.

GOLF.

The annual exodus of golf professionals from the big Northern clubs to the sunny South has begun, and many of the clubs which are partially closed for the winter season have witnessed the departure of their professionals for the coming tournaments in the South. Frederick McLeod, the open champion, has gone from his Chicago club to San Antonio, Texas, where he has spent several winters and finds an increasing number of amateurs every year. Willie Anderson, the ex-National open champion and present holder of the Western title, has charge of the St. Augustine links. Among the Eastern professionals who are now putting Southern greens in order for the army of visitors after the first of the year is Jack Hutchinson, professional of the St. Andrew's Club, and who has charge of W. C. Carnegie's splendid private course at Dungeness, Fla.

Golf is showing no tendency to take a vacation, and while no one has yet given any reason for it, the fact remains that more golf courses and much better ones will be found south of Mason and Dixon's line this winter than ever before. The Florida Country Club is laying out a fine new eighteen-hole course at Jacksonville, which will be in charge of the metropolitan "pro," Dave Honeyman, and on the West Florida Coast the Bellair course has been extended to eighteen holes. A new eighteen-hole course is being laid out at Augusta, and at Pinehurst two eighteen-hole courses will be used.

A great deal of work has been expended upon the new eighteen-hole course, and it is the boast of the Pinehurst Golf Club that it possesses the finest links in the South. Donald and Alexander Ross, the Boston professionals, will, as formerly, be in charge at Pinehurst, and the series of tournaments will open early in the new year. There will be a special holiday tournament for the early arrivals at Pinehurst, beginning December 28, and the annual mid-winter tournament at medal and match play will begin January 11. Among the well-known professionals who have gone South are the following, with the courses which they will have charge of this season:

Nassau, Jack Norton; Palm Beach, Arthur H. Fenn; Ormond, George Merritt; St. Augustine, Willie Anderson; Magnolia Springs, Philip Honeyman; Jacksonville, Joe Mitchell; Bellair, Fla., Lawrence Auchterlonie; Dungeness, Fla., Jack Hutchinson; New Orleans, Alexander Baxter; San Antonio, Fred McLeod; Houston, Texas, Tom McNamara; Hampton Terrace, Ga., David Ogilvie; Aiken, Jack Mackrell; Camden, S. C., Willie Wilson; Atlanta, James Maiden; Summerville, S. C., Willie Weir; Pinehurst, Donald Ross and Alexander Ross; Southern Pines, N. C., Martin O'Loughlin.

William Henry, of West Fourth street, who has been at Muhlenberg Hospital, under suspicion of having typhoid fever, was discharged yesterday. He had the symptoms of the disease, but it did not develop.

Mr. Bryan must be murmuring "it is to laugh."

The Crimes Commission favors Sunday selling, while the Excise Commission opposes such an innovation. So there you are.

When does a joke cease to be a joke? When it has received a prize from an art jury.

"When it's one on me; then it's a lie.—T. R.

Union county's court seems to be gaining a reputation as a mixer of mercy with justice. That fake piano tuner today was sentenced to spend some time in a reformatory.

Undoubtedly the majority report of the Excise Commission is a splendid document, but in this year of grace or in those of the near future, there is little chance for its adoption.

Mr. Roosevelt is "shooting off" a few editors just to get in trim for that lion hunt in Africa, but if he fares no better in that dark country his magazine employers will regret that they paid the price.

And isn't it enough to bring blushes of shame to National pride when one realizes that the man who bombards Congress with such rot holds the lofty office of President of the United States?

Local option got two black eyes yesterday. One was delivered by the majority and the other by the minority in the State excise probers' reports. Coming right on top of the blow delivered at the recent election, the cause is pretty well used up though still in the ring.

County Chairman Frank H. Smith has no reason to complain of the treatment accorded him yesterday at Trenton. In the distribution of Senate plums, Union got the journal clerk, bill clerk, clerk to corporation committee and doorkeeper, while in the House it landed the journal clerk, doorkeeper and page.

TRINITY SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHERS NAME OFFICERS

Officers were elected, committees appointed and other important matters were considered at the annual meeting of the officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, held at the church, last night. There was a large attendance and considerable interest shown in the business of the evening. Superintendent F. E. Smith presided.

Mrs. Virginia Chickering and Miss Mabel Wilson who were delegates from the school to the State Sunday-school convention, presented a brief but interesting report, full of encouragement. They laid special emphasis on the importance of training members of the school for teachers.

It was decided to hold the Christmas service on Sunday, December 27, and the annual Christmas entertainment of the school on Tuesday night, December 29. The annual reports of the school will be presented later.

These officers were chosen for the year:

Superintendent, F. E. Smith; assistant superintendent, Horace J. Martin, Sr.; secretary, Chauncey F. Colthar; assistant secretary, Clarence Rittenhouse; treasurer, Charles M. Dolliver; superintendent Junior department, Miss Mabel Wilson; superintendent Primary department, Mrs. J. M. Tier; superintendent Beginners' department, Mrs. H. E. Gayle; librarian, H. C. Van Emburgh; first assistant, Clarence Rittenhouse; second assistant, LeRoy Woodhull; third assistant, William Trembath; fourth assistant, Bertram Leggett; superintendent Home department, Mrs. Henry Van Name; assistant, Mrs. George Saums; secretary, Mrs. H. F. Crawford; precentor, Horace J. Martin, Sr.; pianist, Miss Lillian A. Force; executive committee, William F. Oliver, J. P. Laire, Miss Mabel Wilson; library committee, Robert A. Meeker, H. F. Crawford, Mrs. Frank P. Storr; music committee, Miss Lillian A. Force, Miss May Randolph, Elmer P. Wheeler, Mrs. Arthur P. Caleen, Horace J. Martin, Sr., Miss Eliza Dufford; committee on teachers, Horace J. Martin, Sr., George L. Van Emburgh, Mrs. Virginia Chickering; committee on athletics, Robert A. Meeker, Clarence Rittenhouse, Chauncey F. Colthar.

CAT LOST ITS LIFE IN BRUNSWICK CHURCH FIRE

In the ruins of St. James' M. E. church at New Brunswick yesterday was found the body of a black cat which had been suffocated. The cat had made its home in the church for some months, sleeping in the furnace-room. The officials of the church have secured the hymn books in the pews and will preserve them as souvenirs. All of the numbers on the seats have been removed by souvenir hunters, and even some of the pipes in the organ have been carried away.

The pulpit Bible was dug out of the ruins yesterday morning and found to be in fairly good shape, although the covers had been burned off.

No decision as to the future plans of the church have been arrived at yet. The courthouse has been offered the congregation and also every other Protestant church in town. The suggestion has been made to secure another site on Livingston avenue. The present location is too near the Pennsylvania Railroad elevated tracks. Decisive action as to the future of the church may be taken Monday night, when the official board meets with the district superintendent.

WOMAN GETS VERDICT AGAINST A JUSTICE

Mary A. Connor, obtained a verdict for $5,000 yesterday in the Hudson county Supreme Court against Henry Bossett, a justice of the peace of Newark, for false imprisonment and assault and battery. She lived at No. 77 Bank street, Newark. Her story on the stand, and which was corroborated by her mother, Mrs. Mulcahy, was that a man named Hobson, who had been appointed as caretaker for the property by the administrator, and his wife started a disturbance on the night of September 26, 1906, and that Bossett, Constable Smith, Hobson and three other men forced their way into the house and without a warrant dragged her out, took her to a justice's court and then lodged her in the county jail, where she was confined until 5 o'clock the next afternoon, when she was haled before the Criminal Court and discharged.

Justice Bossett denied that he touched the woman and that the arrest was for assault and battery. He failed to produce the complaint and warrant and the other papers, and the jury was out less than five minutes.

In Bride-elect's Honor.

Miss Noel Bullock, principal of the Franklin school entertained her teachers at her home in West Sixth street last night. The party was given in honor of Miss Alice C. Miller, in anticipation of her approaching marriage to Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring. Near the close of the evening Miss Miller was presented with a handsome set of table linen.

YOUNG SWINDLER PLEADS GUILTY.

Arnold Brewer Admits He Fleeced Women in Newark.

Arthur Brewer, the young swindler of Baltimore, who, on the police docket was recorded as Harold E. Brewer, pleaded guilty yesterday to three charges in the Special Sessions Court and was remanded by Judge Ten Eyck at Newark for sentence on Monday.

Brewer is the young man who made a practice os swindling women—widows chiefly—by representing to them that he could get their sons good jobs in a financial institution, and then inducing them to put up a sach bond. He married two months oga Miss May Bowden, of Monroe, N. Y., who knew nothing about his crookedness until after his arrest, although he had served three years of a seventeen year sentence in Baltimore for swindling.

Deeds and Contracts.

These contracts have also been filed: John Rafferty with Wyckoff & Herrlich, entire work, new building, Grant avenue, Plainfield, $3,453; Same with John A. McNally, entire work, new building, Grant avenue, $3,478.

Oil Fire Near Fairmount.

Califon, Dec. 16.—A leak occurred yesterday in the oil pipe line of the Tide-water Pipe Line Company extending from the oil fields in Pennsylvania to Bayonne. A length of pipe burst on the Emanuel Apgar farm near Fairmount. A large quantity of oil ran away before the pumping station at Changewater was advised of the break. The oil ran to the low lands and was burned. The flames and dense smoke attracted the attention of farmers for miles around, who drove to the scene, thinking farm buildings were on fire. Repairs were made today.

ON EXPLORATIONS IN THE FAR EAST.

While we are busily plodding along in the twentieth century, several eminent archaelogists are bringing the past ages to light in the Holy Land.

Professor David Gordon Lyon, Hollis professor of divinity and curator of the Semitic Museum at Harvard University, who has returned from an archaeological expedition to Samaria, reports the finding of specimens of Greek and Roman pottery in what is supposed to be a temple erected by Herod the Great. The site where the discoveries were made, says the New York Herald, is near the modern village of Sebastiyeh, and is marked by a cluster of standing columns. The results of the summer campaign are regarded as gratifying. Ample provision has been made by Jacob H. Schiff, of New York, who endowed Harvard with the funds to carry on the work for three or four years, for taking up the work of excavation anew next spring, about the end of April, at the close of the rainy season in the Holy Land. It is expected that Professor George Reisner, of Harvard, in whose name the permit for excavation stands, will be in charge.

Brief, but Expressive.

School Teacher—Johnny, I hear that you have two little twin sisters at your home this morning.

Johnny—Yes, ma'am; and we've got names for 'em, too.

School Teacher—Why, how nice, I suppose one of them is to be named after your mamma; but what is she going to name the other?

Johnny—No, they ain't got girl names. Pa called them "Thunder and Lightning" as soon as he heard about them.—London Opinion.

Logic.

"Madam," said the attorney for the other side, "you seem to have an exceedingly sharp temper."

"Yes, sir," answered the complaining witness in the divorce case. "It comes to me by direct inheritance from my husband's ancestors."

"That's absurd, madam. How could you inherit an irritable disposition from your husband's ancestors?"

"I inherited my husband from them, didn't I?"—Chicago Tribune

Children, Try It.

Cut a turnip or a carrot in half, use the blossom end for the vessel and hollow it out. Fill with a sponge, covered with bird seed or mustard seed, and keep it moist. The turnip will sprout leaves that will curve upward to cover the turnip, and the mustard will sprout and make a pretty top. A carrot produces a prettier leaf than the turnip.

A Coat Suit.

Fashions may come and fashions may go, but the always becoming and supremely convenient coat and skirt costume, like Tennyson's book, goes on forever. Just at the moment there is a vogue for coats of a three-quarter length, of Empire tendency so far as the short-waisted effect at the back is concerned but cut frequently with long points in front and trimmed always with silk braid and a quantity of buttons.

Appropriate.

"Yes," said the amateur inventor, "I am thinking about building an airship of the dirigible balloon type. What do you think would be an appropriate name?"

"Call it 'Theory,'" laughted the facetious friend.

"And why 'Theory'?"

"Because a theory is so easily exploded."—Chicago News.

Matter of Duty.

Shopper—What makes these goods so expensive?

Clerk—The duty, ma'am.

Shopper—Oh, then they are imported.

Clerk—No, they are domestic goods. But the proprietor thinks it his duty to increase his bank balance.—Exchange.

Marriage Tie for Flat Dwellers.

Aunt Mary—I hope, Emily, that you and Charles will never become cold and distant.

Emily—We have got cold, auntie, but I am sure there is no danger in our becoming distant. We intend to live always in a flat.—Puck.

On a Street Corner.

"My friend," began the seedy stranger.

"Nothing doin," interrupted the solid citizen.

"I don't want a cent."

"Then I am indeed your friend. Go ahead with your remarks."—Boston Globe.

A Queer Boston Girl.

"The meterological conditions," ventured the Chicago girl, "are very inclement."

"Yes," responded the Boston girl, "this is sloppy weather."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Difference.

"A roseate tale may be easily capitalized for a million dollars."

"Well?"

"But it's hard to realize over five cents on a hard-luck story."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Consultation.

First Doctor—This is a most mysterious case. I can't make anything out of it.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The meeting of the preparation committee for the ball to be given by the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company on Friday night, met last night in the fire-house. The principal business of the meeting was the report of the music and refreshment committee. The music will be by Guttman's orchestra of Plainfield. The report of the supper committee was favorable. The regular monthly meeting of the company will be held tonight and the last meeting of the preparation committee will be held tomorrow night.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Minnich, who were recently married, were serenaded by a large party of friends last night. The serenaders called the night before but were disappointed to hear that the couple were not at home.

P. F. Kaine has moved from his residence on Lehigh avenue to the Stewart house on Lakeside avenue This house, one of the oldest in the village, has recently been remodeled and all modern improvements installed.

Mrs. John Dingler and family have returned to their home in Perth Amboy after an extended stay with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Arrowsmith.

Miss Sadie Geary has returned to her home in Metuchen aften a short visit with her friend, Mrs. Harry Soffield.

Mrs. Walter Harris, of Metuchen, a former resident of this place, visited friends in the village yesterday.

Lewis Ryno, of Tenefly, who owns considerable property here, called in the village on business yesterday.

Mrs. Thomas Johnson, of Terrill road, has returned to her home after a visit with out-of-town friends.

A meeting of the teachers training class of the Baptist Sunday-school was held last night.

Miss Mabel Arrowsmith is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Dingler, of Perth Amboy.

Rose Horan is suffering from a severe attack of bronchitis.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The water company is laying pipes on Second street, between Farlee avenue and Terrell road. This will enable the residents in that section to make connection with the main at a much smaller cost than in the past as it was necessary to tap the Front street main and pipe through to Second street.

The members of the B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church held a business meeting last night in the church parlors. At the close of the business session a social hour of music and chat was enjoyed. Refreshments were served.

The Buckwell property on Mountain avenue is undergoing improvements. The house is receiving a new coat of paint and improvements are being made on the interior.

The condition of Mrs. Nancy Wilcox, who is critically ill at her home on Front street, remains unchanged, but little hopes are entertained for her recovery.

One of the large windows in the postoffice building was accidentally broken by children while waiting for the evening mail yesterday afternoon.

Township Committeeman Scott Terry is having the roads in his district in the lower end of the township covered with crushed stone.

The passing of Fanwood Council, R. A., leaves but one fraternal organization in town, Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M.

Will Chase the Hounds.

The Watchung Hunt Club will meet the hounds Saturday afternoon at the Mt. Pleasant Schoolhouse at 2:45 o'clock, and the chase will lead over a new territory covering a distance of eight or nine miles. It is expected that an unusual number of riders will be out, including many out-of-town guests.

Dancing Class at Holy Cross.

Mrs. Marie Kelley will start the dancing class in the parish house of the Church of the Holy Cross tomorrow night, under the auspices of the Holy Cross Club. The class will be for boys and girls and will meet under proper patronage of women of the church.

Canal Closes Today for Winter.

The Delaware and Raritan Canal was closed to navigation at Bordentown yesterday morning. All vessels in the canal between Bordentown and New Brunswick will be given time to get out at either end, but no more boats will be allowed to enter the waterway.

Placed With Children's Board.

Franklin S. Washington, the West End colored boy recently in the city court, has been put in the care of the Children's Board of Guardians by Mrs. Lewis Peterson until further arrangements can be made for him to be put in a suitable institution.

REVIEWS A HERO'S LIFE

H. C. Krebs Talks on Career of Stonewall Jackson to Men's Club.

WON SOBRIQUET AT BULL RUN.

General Lee Recognized Confederate's Great Ability, He Declares —Was Believer in Providence.

H. C. Krebs, superintendent of the North Plainfield public schools, delivered an interesting address on the life of General Sonewall Jackson before the Men's Club of the Seventh-Day Baptist church last night. He said, in part:

"There is special interest in the life of 'Stonewall' Jackson because of his intense practical religion, his mysterious attacks in battle, and his death in the forefront of his greatest victory. His early life was spent amid frontier surroundings in western Virginia. He lost both father and mother before the age of eight. His regard for his mother was such that she was seldom absent from his thoughts even on the battle field, and her memory kept him good and noble amid much that was rough in his early associations.

"When appointed to West Point he was by no means qualified from a scholastic point of view. His class work the first year was below the average. But his earnestness was so great that he won the respect of his fellows and professors in spite of his deficiences. He graduated well up in his class; and a classmate stated that if the course had been one year longer, he would have gained first honor.

"Soon after graduation he was sent to join Scott's army on its wonderful march to Mexico. In this campaign he was promoted from brevet second lieutenant to major, the most rapid promotion won during that war.

"For ten years prior to the Civil War he was a professor of physics and military tactics at the Virginia Military Academy, Lexington. As a teacher he had much success with bright boys, but could do little with slower students. He maintained a Sunday-school for slaves during this time, and worked faithfully in the Presbyterian church as a deacon. He performed all duties devolving upon him with a conscientiousness rarely equalled. The most trivial affairs of life were made the subject of prayer. In later life his military dispatches are full of a recognition of Divine Providence in the affairs of man. 'I trust that an ever kind Providence will bless us with great success,' was his last dispatch to Lee at Chancellorsville. 'Providence has blessed our arms with great success,' he telegraphed from the Shenandoah Valley. 'General Lee is very kind, but he should give the glory to God,' was his comment on a congratulatory dispatch.

"As is well known, the sobriquet 'Stonewall' was bestowed at the first battle of Bull Run because of the solid front he showed when the Confederate left wing was retreating early in the day. Jackson was grievously disappointed that, after this battle, the Confederates failed to cross the Potomac and attack Washington from the west and north. Northern military writers now believe that such a movement as Jackson urged would at that time probably have resulted in the capture of Washington and the recognition of the Confederacy.

"Jackson's rapid marching and fighting in the Shenandoah Valley in 1862 caused 60,000 men to be occupied, though he never had more than 18,000; and it prevented McClellan from receiving McDowell's 40,000 men, which, added to his 110,000, then before Richmond, might have caused the fall of Richmond and the ending of the war long before it closed in 1865.

"'At the battle of Chantilly, where our own General Kearny was killed, an officer reported to Jackson that he must retreat because the heavy rainfall had wet his men's cartridges. 'Tell him he must hold his ground,' replied Jackson, 'if his guns won't go off, neither will those of the enemy.'

"Jackson never made a mistake on the battlefield. He never changed a dispatch that he wrote during a battle. His mind seemed to work with marvelous precision during the most trying moments of fighting.

"When Jackson fell at Chancellorsville, his left arm was amputated. Lee remarked, 'Tell Jackson that he must get well. He has lost his left arm but I have lost my right.' Lee also wrote to Jackson, 'If I could have ordered events, I would have chosen, for the good of the country, to fall in your stead.' Lee also stated after the war, 'If I had had Stonewall Jackson at Gettysburg, I would have won a great victory.'

"Jackson was 39 years old when he died. His body was laid in state at Richmond, and was interred with military honors in the cemetery at Lexington, where a statue rises above his grave."

"The Pickpockets" a Strong Drama.

A drama that will have more than an ordinary appeal, will be Arnold Daly's vehicle during his forthcoming engagement at the New Plainfield next Saturday afternoon and night. It is the latest play from the pen of C. M. S. McLellan, the author of "Leah Kleschna," and is entitled "The Pickpockets." It concerns itself with the greatest of economic question now confronting the nation as a whole, the eternal clash in business and trade between the strong and weak, and the question as to whether the strong are deserving of that mighty social position won for them by virtue of a mere instinct, the money-making instinct, which in itself is less desirable than many other instincts such as these that lead to the appreciation of the ture and the beautiful.

Chief Doane's Good Advice.

Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, ever on the lookout for the safety of people as well as property, makes a timely suggestion for the holiday season. He says that women with children are accustomed to shop in the various stores and at the same time leave their children in baby carriages in the entrance passage or just inside the store, and if there should be a fire or accident they would stand but little chance for escape. He urges a little more care on the part of mothers or other persons in charge of children in this respect and thus help to prevent a calamity.

Berstein Author of "The Thief."

Charles Frohman's production of "The Thief," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, is by Henri Bernstein, the author of New York's present reigning success, "Samson," now being played by William Gillette at the Criterion theatre. "The Thief" was presented in New York all last winter and will come to this city with the complete cast.

Sent Back to Reformatory.

James Mershon, of Perth Amboy, was sent back to the Reformatory yesterday by Judge Booraem at New Brunswick for breaking his parole. He confessed to breaking into the store of H. Wolff & Co., of South Amboy, and stealing $200 worth of goods last month. The goods were recovered.

Fell and Fractured a Rib.

John Nelson, of 550 South Second street, was taken to the hospital yesterday suffering from a fractured rib, the result of a fall on the ice near his home. Mr. Nelson is sixty-four years of age. His condition today is said to be favorable.

Plainfielders Attend a Dance.

William Bogert, of Highland Park, gave a strawride and dance Saturday night to sixty-five of his friends. Among those present were Miss Olive A. Randolph, Mrs. Frank Pursel and William Peacher, from Plainfield.

Christmas at Hunt Club.

The Watchung Hunt Club is planning for a big time at the clubhouse on Christmas day. The festivities will include a feast of good things to eat, music and several novelties, to which all of the members are invited.

—Finest assortment of holiday goods in the city at Neuman Brothers. They have prepared mince meats, Gordon & Dilworth's, Heinze's and Brick's Nonpareil; prepared plum puddings, candied fruits, Malaga grapes and assorted nuts.

—No abatement is noticeable in the attendance at Proctor's popular theatre. On the contrary a constant stream of ingoing and outcoming audiences goes merrily on, due no doubt to the daily change of pictures and frequent change of songs and lectures. There will be an entirely new show tonight.

Query.

Two neighbors were recently battling over the club links. All went fairly well, although bogey remained practically intact, until they reached a tee overlooking a pond.

Each drove furiously, then cautiously, a half dozen balls into the muddy depths of that pool.

Standing nearby was a little girl, stupid but curious. After the twelfth ball had plunged to rise no more, she queried, blankly, but sincerely, of the golfer:

"Mister, what is the fun in this game?"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

FOWLER'S MILD ATTACK ON PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Although there will be no legislation until after the Sixty-first Congress convenes in special session soon after the inauguration of President-elect Taft, Congressman Chas. N. Fowler will soon make a speech on his new tariff bill before the present Congress.

The First district representative speaks most enthusiastically of his new tariff measure and is confident of its support by his colleagues. His bill provides for the appointment by the President of a commission of seven tariff experts, whose term of office shall be fourteen years and whose duties shall be the fixing of actual tariff rates on all commodities between maximum and minimum rates that are to be fixed by Congress. The rates fixed by the commission are not to become operative until eighteen months after their promulgation.

The author of the bill and some of the best statisticians in the country are of the opinion that the passage of the measure will result in a revision of the tariff without disturbing the business conditions of the nation, because, while the power of fixing the maximum and minimum rates will be vested in Congress, the expert commission will have an opportunity to give business men a hearing and learn the immediate needs of the country by a study of conditions before fixing the actual rates. The elapse of ten months between the fixing and announcement of the rates and their operation will give the national commercial interests ample time to adapt themselves to the new conditions and obviate any disturbance of business. Because of affecting the revenues of the Government, all acts of the commission would of necessity be subject to the approval of the President.

Asked for an opinion respecting the President's recent message, Mr. Fowler said that while he recognizes in Mr. Roosevelt a man who has accomplished much for the good of the country, he feels constrained to take exception to the President's reference to Congress with regard to the Secret Service appropriation. In this connection Mr. Fowler said:

"I think it most unfortunate that the President of the United States should resort to personal attacks, not only on individuals, but even the United States judiciary and Congress itself, whenever their opinions are not in complete harmony with his own."

The final session of the present Congress, Mr. Fowler says, will be entirely occupied with the appropriations bill, and no legislation will be undertaken until the special session of the Sixty-first Congress, which will convene within a day or two after the inaugurating of Judge Taft as President.

ANOTHER SURGICAL FEAT; TURNS FINGER INTO A NOSE.

If a surgical operation performed in Paterson proves successful, Cornelius Snyder will be going around before long with one of his fingers sewed to the place where his nose used to be.

Snyder suffered from cancer of the nose for several years, and about a year ago the greater part of his nose was amputated in order to remove the cancerous growth. There have been no symptoms of a recurrence of the disease.

When Mr. Snyder was informed by physicians that it was possible to replace the lost nose with a finger, he decided to have the operation performed, and it took place last week at the Paterson General Hospital, being performed by Dr. John C. McCoy. The third finger of Snyder's left hand was used.

It is expected that within three weeks the flesh of the finger and the nose will have united. The finger will then be amputated at the middle joint and when the wounds are healed Mr. Snyder will have as good a new nose.

LUCY STONE'S ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION AT ORANGE.

The fiftieth anniversary of Lucy Stone's protest against "taxation without representation," first made in Orange December 15, 1858, was observed yesterday afternoon at Orange by the Political Study Club, an organization of women.

Dr. Mary D. Hussey, of East Orange, a well-known suffragist, had charge of the anniversary observance. Mrs. Eugenie M. Ray Smith of New York, a member of the bar, and active in the suffrage movement, spoke on "College Woman's Equal Suffrage;" Miss Marie Nelson Lee read some of Lucy Stone's addresses, and the Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell gave reminiscences of Lucy Stone's life at Oberlin College.

Mrs. Stone, on receipt of her tax bill, flatly told the collector that she would not pay it. Later her furniture was sold to satisfy the city's claim. Among the furniture was the cradle of Mrs. Stone's baby girl, now Alice Stone Blackwell, one of the editors of The Woman's Journal of Boston.

After the business of Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., tomorrow night there will be a quoit match with the members of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M.

REST MADE EASY.

There Will Be Less Sleeplessness When Plainfield People Learn This.

Can't rest at night with a bad back,

A lame, a weak or an aching one.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for bad backs.

They cure every form of kidney ills.

From common backache to diabetes.

They are endorsed by Plainfield people.

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says "Though I have had no occasion to use Doan's Kidney Pills in the past few years, I value them as highly as ever. My kidneys were in a weakened condition for years and the backache I endured were of a severe nature. Many nights I was unable to sleep at all and when I awoke in the morning, my limbs would be so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Every cold I caught settled in my kidneys and increased my aches and pains. I doctored with physicians but none of the medicines I used did me any good. At length I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured them at Randolph's Pharmacy and began taking them. They went directly to the seat of my trouble, dispelling the pain and making me feel like a new person."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

STATE'S BIRTHPLACE WAS NOT HADDONFIELD

In spite of the fact that the Legislature of 1900 appropriated $18,500 for the purchase of the old tavern property at Haddonfield, Camden county, and the place is now cared for by a historical society as the hallowed spot in which the Provincial Congress of New Jersey, in 1776 decided to change the name from "Colony" to "State," Dr. Carols E. Godfrey, historical attache of the adjutant-general's department, has just unearthed documentary evidence proving that it was in Trenton that this change was made.

The place of the congregational meeting at that time was either in the tavern of Rensellaer Williams, called "The Royal Oak," or the tavern of Mrs. Rachel Stelle, both of which were on what is now North Warren street and both of which have long since been torn down. The change of name was made here on July 18, 1776.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Convulsions caused the sudden death in Camden yesterday of George Hooper, forty years old, of 236 Division street. Coroner Litchfield gave a certificate.

William Kindle, a glassworker of Clayton, fell under a wheelbarrow load of broken glass Saturday and received a gash in his leg that required ten stitches to close.

Receiving word late Saturday night that the law prohibited the keeping of cattle in a car longer than thirty six hours, a record run was made with a car from Vineland to the Millville Stock Yards of seven miles in less than six minutes.

A mass meeting of the citizens of Monmouth, Ocean and Burlington counties is to be held at Meiers' hall, New Egypt, Saturday night, for the purpose of making arrangements for the completion of State roads joining the New Egypt-Lakewood road now being built.

When a stove exploded at the confectionery shop of A. Michael, at 1204 Broadway, Camden, yesterday afternoon, Policeman Brothers carried the stove into the street, and Policeman Haines extinguished what there was left of the flames with a broom. The damage was slight.

Burglars robbed the cottage of David Wile, on Pacific avenue, Atlantic City, last night, and set fire to the house to cover their tracks. The cottage was badly damaged. The family, who were on the Boardwalk, cannot tell the amount of jewelry and other loot obtained by the thieves.

When Clara Short refused to leave the home of Mervine Turner yesterday the husband of the woman shot them both. Mrs. Short's injury was in the right knee and Turner was shot in the right arm. The shooting took place at Turner's home, Thirtieth and Howell streets, Camden. All are negroes.

A sensation was caused in the social set in Atlantic City when Thos. J. Dickerson, former banker and department store proprietor, announced that he intended to settle permanently in the Philippines. Mrs. Dickerson is going with him. His son-in-law, L. G. Salmon, bank director, and his wife contemplate going away with them to the other side of the world.

Plunging headlong down the steps of St. Paul's M. E. church, Atlantic City, Saturday, John R. Mason, an aged resident, broke his kneecap, and laid in agony on the sidewalk until he was discovered by others of the congregation attending a special service. He was taken to the hospital, where surgeons fear that the shock and suffering may have serious results.

A little boy hurried into police headquarters, Paterson, last evening and said his father had a knife above his mother's head and was threatening to kill the woman. As soon as Sergeant Perry learned the name of the offender, Walter Drummond, he inquired for no further particulars, but dispatched the wagon to 83 Cross street. Drummond was removed and placed in the lockup.

All last night Woodbury's three policemen, with a score of twenty specials, searched for the man who robbed the home of Walter L. Howdy, in Cooper street, early in the evening. The family had been away all day. Three gold watches, with other jewelry, are missing. A quantity of silverware had been wrapped ready for removal, but the return of the family frustrated the thief's plans.

"It is easier to secure contributions of money from the average congregation today than it is to secure individual assistance in the administration of spiritual and other works of the church," was the declaration of the new minister, Rev. Birney S. Hudson, to his congregation of the First Baptist church, Atlantic City, Sunday. He came here from Hastings, Neb., and is known for his independence of thought.

Plainfield Council, No. 294, Jr. O. U. A. M., at its meeting Monday night made nomination of officers. They were left open for two weeks. The election will be held Monday night, December 28.

"Maybe I'm stupid, Millicent, but I confess I don't know what you mean."

"Really, there's no reason why you should, Bertie. That's why I was so anxious to see you—in time, so that I might explain to you—might put you on your guard."

"Yes?" the colonel submitted; he never hurried a woman.

"I'm going to visit dear Amy—you remember she was married two years ago and lives in Pasadena; she has a dear little baby and the loveliest home! It's charming. And she was so delighted with your wedding gift, it was so original. Amy never did care for costly things; these simple, unique gifts always pleased her. Of course, my main object is to see the dear child, but I shall not go to-night unless Aunt Rebecca Winter is on the train. If for any reason she waits over until to-morrow I shall wait also."

"Ah," sighed the colonel very softly, not stirring a muscle of his politely attentive face; "and does Aunt Rebecca expect to go on the train?"

"They told me at the Pullman office that she had the drawing-room, the stateroom and two sections. Of course, she has her maid with her and Archi—"

"Does he go, too?" the colonel asked, his eyes narrowing a little.

"Yes, she's taking him to California; he doesn't seem well enough, she thinks, to go to school, so he is to have a tutor out there. I'm a little afraid Aunt Rebecca mollycoddles the boy."

"Aunt Rebecca never struck me as a mollycoddler. I always considered her a tolerably cynical old Spartan. But do you mean there is any doubt of their going? Awfully good of you to wait to see if they don't go, but I'm sure Aunt Rebecca wouldn't want you to sacrifice your section—"

Mrs. Melville lifted a shapely hand in a Delsartian gesture of arrest; her smiling words were the last the colonel had expected. "Hush, dear Bertie; Aunt Rebecca doesn't know I am going. I don't want her to know until we are on the train."

"Oh, I see, a surprise?" But he did not see; and, with a quiet intentness, he watched the color raddle Mrs. Melville's smooth cheeks.

"Hardly," returned the lady. "The truth is, Bertie Melville and I are worried about Aunt Rebecca. She, we fear, has fallen under the influence of a most plausible adventuress; I suppose you have heard of her companion, Miss Smith?"

"Can't say I have exactly," said the colonel placidly, but his eyes narrowed again. "Who is the lady?"

"I thought—I am sure Melville must have written you. But— Oh, yes, he wrote yesterday to Boston. Well, Bertie, Miss Smith is a southerner; she says she is a South Carolinian, but Aunt Rebecca picked her up in Washington, where she was with a kink of cousin of ours who was half crazy. Miss Smith took care of her and she died"—she fixed a darkling eye on the soldier—"she died and she left Miss Smith money."

"Much?"

"A few thousands. That is how Aunt Rebecca met her, and she pulled the wool over auntie's eyes, and they came back together. She's awfully clever."

"Young? Pretty?"

"Oh, dear, no. And she's nearer 40 than 30. Just the designing age for a woman when she's still wanting to marry some one but beginning to be afraid that she can't. Then such creatures always try to get money. If they can't marry it, and there's no man to set their caps for, they try to wheedle it out of some poor fool woman!" Millicent was in earnest, there was no doubt of that; the sure sign was her unconscious return to the direct expressions of her early life in the middle west.

"And you think Miss Smith is trying to influence Aunt Rebecca?"

"Of course she is; and Aunt Rebecca is 80, Rupert. And often while people of her age show no other sign of weakening intellect, they are not well regulated in their affections; they take fancies to people and get doting and clinging. She is getting to depend on Miss Smith. Really, that woman has more influence with her than all the rest of us together. She won't hear a word against her. Why! when I tried to suggest how little we knew about Miss Smith and that it would be better not to trust her too entirely, she positively resented it. Of course I used tact, too. I was so hurt, so surprised!" Mrs. Millicent was plainly aggrieved.

The colonel, who had his own opinion of the tact of his brother's wife, was not so surprised; but he made an inarticulate sound which might pass for sympathy.

"We've been worried a good deal," pursued Mrs. Melville, "about the way Aunt Rebecca has acted. She wouldn't stay in Fairport, where we could have some influence over her. She was always going south or going to the seashore or going somewhere. Sometimes I suspect Miss Smith made her, to keep her away from us, you know."

"Well, as long as I have known Aunt Rebecca—anyhow, ever since Uncle Archibald died—she has been restless and flying about."

"Not as she is now. And then she only had her maid—"

"Oh, yes, Randall; she's faithful as they make 'em. What does she say about Miss Smith?"

"Bertie, she's won over Randall. Randall swears by her. Oh, she's deep!"

"Seems to be. But—excuse me—what's your game, Millicent? How do you mean to protect our aged kinswoman and, incidentally, of course, the Winter fortune?"

"I shall watch, Bertie; I shall be on my guard every waking hour. That deluded old woman is in more danger, perhaps, than you dream."

"As how?"

"Miss Smith"—her voice sank portentously—"was a trained nurse."

"What harm does that do—unless you think she would know too much about poisons?" The colonel laughed.

"It's no laughing matter, Bertie. Rebecca is so rich and this other woman is so poor, and, in my estimation, so ambitious. I make no insinuations, I only say she needs watching."

"You may be right about that," said the colonel thoughtfully. "There is Haley and the boy for your bags!"

The boy picked up the big dress-suit case, the smaller dress-suit case and the hat case, he grabbed the bundle of cloaks, the case of umbrellas, and the lizard-skin bag. Dubiously he eyed the colonel's luggage, as he tried to disengage a finger.

"Niver moind, young feller," called Haley, peremptorily whisking away the nearest piece, "I'll help you a bit with yours, instead; you've a load, sure!"

Mrs. Melville explained in an undertone: "I take all the hand-luggage I possibly can; the overweight charges are wicked!"

"Haley, they won't let you inside without a ticket," objected the colonel. But Haley, unheeding, strode on ahead of the staggering youth.

"I have an English bathtub, locked, of course, and packed with things, but he has put that in the car," said Mrs. Melville.

"Certainly," said the colonel absently; he was thinking: Mrs. Winter, the boy, Miss Smith—how ridiculously complete! Decidedly something will bear watching.

CHAPTER II.

Aunt Rebecca.

No sooner was Mrs. Melville ushered into her section than the colonel went through the train. He was not so suspicious as he told himself he might have been, with such a dovetailing of circumstances into his accidentally captured information; he couldn't yet read villainy on that college lad's frank face. But no reason, therefore, to neglect precautions. "Hope the best of men and prepare for the worst," was the old campaigner's motto.

A walk through the cars showed him no signs of the two men. It was a tolerably complete inspection, too. There was only one drawing-room or stateroom of which he did not manage to get a glimpse—the closed room being the property of a very great financial magnate, whose private car was waiting for him in Denver. His door was fast, and the click of the typewriter announced the tireless industry of our rulers.

But if he did not find the college boy or the man with the moles he did get a surprise for his walk; namely, the sight of the family of Haley, and Haley himself beside their trig, battered luggage, in a section of the car next his own. Mrs. Haley turned a guilty red, while Haley essayed a stolid demeanor.

"What does this mean?" demanded the colonel.

"Haley felt he would have to go with you, colonel," replied Mrs. Haley, who had timid, wide, blue eyes and the voice of a bird, but a courage under her panic, as birds have, too, when their nests are in peril. "We've rinted the house to a good man with grown-up children, and Haley can get a job if you won't want him."

"Yis, sor," mumbled Haley. He was standing at attention, as was his wife, the toddling Nora being held in the posture of respect on the plush seat.

Bowling and General Sports

BOWLING.

Rolling three games over the two hundred mark, Ed Britton defeated John Conklin in their match game at Campbell's alleys, last night, and had little trouble in doing so. The pins fell hard for Conklin and he suffered from splits on apparently good hits, while Britton on the other hand got all he hit for.

The winner averaged 221. The scores:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Conklin | 169 | 160 | 170 |

Conklin's aspirations as a match game bowler received a set back last night.

Walter Crowley seems to "have it" on Wilson Gary in Duck Pins.

These two had another little session last night and the former was again the victor.

Wetumpka and the Bicycle Club come together in the Fraternal League tonight.

An ounce of luck is worth a pound of cleverness in the bowling game.

The Knights of Columbus Bowling team will roll a match game at Campbell's alleys tomorrow night against a team from the New York Stock Exchange.

Watchung Council, Knights of Columbus, will roll their first series in the Knights of Columbus League at Jersey City on next Monday night.

BASEBALL.

The impression has prevailed that Pitcher Warhop, secured last fall from the Tri-State League by the New York Americans, is a full blooded Indian, but it turns out that such is not the case. Warhop is an assumed name which the young man took when he was pitching for an Indian team. The twirler is a plucky Irish American who answers to the name of Flynn and who is regarded as a comer. In the Tri-State last year he won twenty-nine games and lost seven, and Catcher Jack Kleinow, who handled his curves here last fall, said yesterday that he had never seen a more promising young pitcher. Kleinow also thinks that the other youngsters, Pitcher Wilson and Second Baseman Gardiner, will be stars on the hilltop next season.

Will Bresnahan make good as a manager? Many baseball men think that he will and give as a reason that he is a fighter, a great player, an intelligent student of the game and a clever judge of human nature. But in getting Bresnahan the St. Louis National League club has dealt the Cardinals a hard blow in surrendering Raymond, Murray, Karger and either Fromme or Lush. Bresnahan will probably catch as many games as possible. He will prove a big drawing card, especially at the Polo Grounds.

Manager Stallings of the New York Americans had a confab with President Hanlon of the Baltimore club yesterday, but had nothing to say for publication. Hanlon sold Shortstop Knight to the Highlanders last fall and declares that this young player will be an agreeable surprise to local fans next year.

A report is current among major league men that the world's series may be abolished next year. It was said yesterday that when the magnates meet for the schedule sessions in Chicago in February a determined effort will be made to get a motion through to do away with the series. Those who are opposed to the games will use as an argument that the recent ticket scandal and the demands of the players for more money have not benefited the game at all. Those who favor a continuation of the series say that it might be well to limit the amount of money to be received by a single player to $500. It looks as if some of the magnates wanted to pocket the bulk of the world's championship receipts themselves, which is not at all surprising, as many club owners in years gone by have been noted for their greediness.

GOLF.

Aleck Smith after some years of faithful service with the Nassau Country Club, during which period he won the national and the metropolitan open championships, has gone to the Wykagyl Country Club, New Rochelle, as professional. He has been in his new berth for two weeks and the course pleases him very much. There were over 100 players on the course for informal matches on Saturday and nearly as many in spite of the snow on Sunday. No successor to Smith has as yet been appointed at Nassau, for one reason because the committee finds it difficult to find a man who will be as good a player and as popular with the members. Isaac Mackie, who first was to go South and later decided to revisit Scotland, now thinks on account of the mild weather keeping up business briskly that he will remain at Fox Hills throughout the winter.

The British amateur championship will be played at Muirfield during the week of May 24. The length is of 5,937 yards and the course is kept up by the Honorable Company of Edinburgh Golfers, which formerly held forth at Musselburgh. The open championship will be at Deal, June 8, 9, 10 and 11. This is the course of the Cinque Ports Golf Club and has recently been included in the championship wheel of courses, the others being St. Andrews, Sandwich, Holyake, Muirfield and Prestwick.

I was playing golf last week, says a correspondent of the British Sporting Times, with a gentleman whose handicap was 30, but whose language was about plus 4. It is hardly surprising that the caddie's moral character underwent a severe shaking during the round under the circumstances. That may or may not be a valid excuse for the caddie but the fact remains that on my acquaintance (not friend) playing his ball into a truly awful position and asking the caddie's advice, the latter retorted: "Well, sir, if I was you I should spit on it and call it 'cashui water.'"

Borough Team at Essex Falls.

The North Plainfield basketball team went to Essex Falls today to play the Kingsley school five. Coach George Webster accompanied the boys.

PERSONAL.

Brockholst Kip Miller, of Watchung avenue, has been admitted to practice as an attorney at law in the Supreme Court of the State of New York.

Miss Ethel A. Searing, of Park avenue, is now able to sit up a short time each day, following a long and severe attack of typhoid fever, during which she suffered a relapse.

Mrs. Theodore Gray, of West Front street, who has been ill at Muhlenberg Hospital for a number of weeks with typhoid fever, was discharged cured today and returned to her home.

Marguerite Grannatt, the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Grannatt, of West Fifth street, who was operated upon at the hospital for appendicitis, is reported to day as doing well.

Kneisel Quartet Here Tonight.

One of the musical events of the season will be the appearance of the Kneisel Quartet at the Hartridge School auditorium tonight, under the auspices of Joseph McIntyre, of this city.

ENJOY KNEISEL PROGRAM

Quartet is Given Great Ovation by Audience Which Packs the Doors.

AT HARTRIDGE AUDITORIUM.

Works of Three Recognized Composers are Heard—Dvorak, Claude Debussy and Beethoven.

The Kneisel Quartet made its appearance here last night for the first time in four years and the throng of music lovers that greeted these finished musicians at the Hartridge School auditorium overflowed the hall, it being impossible to seat all who desired to hear the program. The outpouring of people must have been pleasing to the artists, although it is no new thing to them of late.

Everywhere the musicians are playing to capacity audiences, being recognized as the foremost in the rendition of classical works. This was one of the series of the McIntyre Chamber Music concerts, and there was every indication that Mr. McIntyre's efforts to give Plainfield the best was genuinely appreciated.

The audience, comprising those who appreciate the best in music, was delighted with one of the most perfect performances of chamber music that has been heard here in many years. If anything the program was too short. Encores were earnestly requested, but the quartet steadfastly declined to respond. Throughout the renditions of the evening there was that perfect balance for which the quartet has become famous throughout the country. Its interpretation of the selections was true to the conception of the composers and everyone realized that the artists were putting their very best effort into every line. It was ensemble playing of the best sort, really the product of a perfection of art and of technical accomplishment.

Mr. Kneisel and his associates played the more vigorous lines with a spirit that aroused everyone, while in the more quiet passages the audience was entranced by the marvelous execution and interpretation. The instruments harmonized so perfectly that nothing was left to be desired by the audience. The quartet presented the music in its best light, a fact which all seemed to realize and appreciate.

The works of three recognized composers were heard—Dvorak, Claude Debussy and Beethoven, and the numbers chosen for the program gave ample opportunity to hear the quartet at its best. The first number by Dvorak was quartet in F major, op. 96, Allegro ma non troppo, Lento, Molto vivace and Vivace.

Then followed two movements from quartet in G minor—Andantino doucement expressif and Assez vif et bien rythme, by Debussy. The last number was from Beethoven's quartet in C major, op. 59, No. 3, Andante con moto—Allegro vivace, Andante con moto, quasi allegretto and Menuetto (Grazioso)—Allegro molto.

Mr. McIntyre announced last night that at his next concert on January 7, Francis Rogers, baritone, will be the assisting artist and Vladimir Dubinsky, 'cellist, will be the soloist.

BURNS-MOIR CONTEST PICTURES AT THE BIJOU.

The greatest event of the season in local moving picture circles will be the showing at the Bijou theatre tomorrow and Saturday of the world's champion boxing contest between "Tommy" Burns, of America, and "Gunner" Moir, of England, which took place recently in London. Four extra large reels of films are required to portray the details of the great event and they show the two men in every round, the knock-out being remarkably distinct. The films also contain the incidents directly after the contest, the handling of the men, the presentation of the money and the crowd congratulating the winner.

Elks to Be Santa Claus Again.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., is making arrangements to provide the annual Christmas entertainment for the poor children of the city. The plans are in charge of a committee composed of Herbert Buxton, H. C. Van Emburgh, David J. Carney, Lawrence W. Marshall, John J. Kenney and W. J. Counihan. Last Christmas the Elks entertained 500 children, giving useful gifts to each one after they had enjoyed a moving picture show.

To Talk on Travels.

Rev. Dr. Edward G. Read, of Second place, will address the pupils of the North Plainfield high school tomorrow morning at 10:30. His talk will be a description of countries he has traveled in, which include Europe, Egypt and Palestine.

CENTRAL DISCHARGES EIGHT CONDUCTORS

Following an investigation covering a period of many weeks, there has been a great shakeup among the passenger conductors on the New Jersey Central. As a result eight of the oldest "knights of the punch" have been discharged from their positions. In some instances the men have been in the employ of the company since 1883 and were considered most trustworthy. The reasons for the wholesale discharge are varied.

In some cases the conductors were accused of being short in their accounts, while numerous other infractions of rules were charged against others. One conductor, it is said, was accused of failing to give a passenger a refund slip in return for fare paid on the train. His explanation was that he was carrying such a large number of passengers that it was almost a physical impossibility for him to do this and collect all tickets before arriving at the destination.

Another conductor, it is said, was accused of carrying friends free, and when confronted with the statement replied that if he could not occasionally pass a friend he did not want the job. The shakeup has caused considerable anxiety among the other conductors as well, and it is said that the company is not yet through with its investigation. Most of the information concerning the discharged conductors was obtained by "spotters."

FURNACE BOILER BURSTS UNDER DUNELLEN BANK

A boiler explosion in the basement of the First National Bank at Dunellen yesterday afternoon startled the entire borough, jarred the buildings on all sides and endangered at least twenty lives.

The water supply had become exhausted through carelessness, while there was a heavy fire in the furnace and the steam dial climbed up into the hundreds. The first thing to give way was the safety plug on the outside of the building and it was driven almost through the wall of Paul Reusch's bakery, thirty feet distant. It is to this plug alone that the occupants of the store and offices in that vicinity owe their escape from serious injury, for had it not been for that weak spot the steam would have accumulated more force and wrecked the entire plant.

The crash and shock was followed by a loud roar of rushing steam and a frantic scramble of the people to get into the street.

No one was injured and the damage to property was slight, but the shock to the nerves was considerable.

PLAINFIELD ARTISTS' WORK HIGHLY PRAISED.

In its comment of the landscape paintings now being exhibited at the Academy of Design, New York, The Evening Post, of last night, says: "Two of the most striking landscapes in the exhibition are "Two of the most striking landscapes in the exhibition are 'The Storm' and 'The Last Gleam,' by Jonas Lie. In 'The Storm' dark clouds scud across the sky, leaves, torn from the bending trees, fly across the hills; in the second picture there are dark clouds in a deep blue sky just tipped with the last gleam of the setting sun. Both are rich in color and each expresses in a masterly manner that phase in nature which the painter intended."

The following comment will also be of interest to many Plainfielders: "In 'Seats of the Mighty,' George Wharton Edwards shows some well painted rocks," Mr. Edwards, who has been a leading exhibitor at the Academy as well as several other places in New York, has received flattering comment concerning his work.

Pastor Broek's New Home.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has made arrangements to make his home at 720 Watchung avenue, next to the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. He will move there within a few days. Today he is visiting his former home at Asbury Park for the purpose of sending his goods to this city.

K. of P.'s to Nominate.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., will nominate officers at the regular session, tomorrow night, and will transact considerable important business. The lodge is making plans for a series of social affairs during the next three months.

A Smoker Tonight.

A smoker will be held at the church of the Heavenly Rest parish house tonight. All men are invited.

ADOPT STATE AID ROADS

Union Freeholders Action Today Means an Expenditure of About $60,000.

PLAINFIELD MUCH BENEFITED.

Improvements Will be Made Gradually—Final Meeting of Board on December 31.

Union County Board of Freeholders this afternoon at Elizabeth favorably acted on a report of the committee of the whole on the advisibility of adopting three roads in various parts of the county as county or State aid roads. The committee reported in favor of the improvements and recommended the adoption of all three roads. This was decided by the members of the committee after touring the roadways in automobiles last week.

The roads recommended for improvement under the State aid road act are Jefferson avenue, in this city; Springfield avenue, in Cranford, and the road running from Rahway to Westfield, comprising about six and one-half running miles of roadway. To improve these roads an expenditure of about $60,000 will be necessary, one-third of which amount will be paid by the State.

The county has already ordered the expenditure of about $75,000 on roadways and the addition of the three new roads will make the total expenditure for the year appear heavy, but it is not expected that all three of the roads will be improved immediately. The money for the total amount to be paid for road improvement for the year will be raised by bond issue and not by tax levy, as is the custom in the case of small sums.

After today's meeting there will be only one more meeting this year, which will be held December 31, when bills will be ordered paid and County Collector Leavitt will make his annual report.

This meeting will be the final one for several of the minority members of the board whose time will have expired and in whose places others have been elected. As the meeting is the final one for the year, Director King, County Attorney Coddington and Clerk Ryno will also go out of office, as will other minor officeholders in the board.

January 1—New Year's Day—at 12 o'clock noon, the board will reorganize and the offices which on the day before became vacant with the closing of business by the old board will be filled by election. It is generally understood that the present officers will be retained.

FIRST BAPTIST GRANTS LETTERS TO FAITH'S FLOCK.

At a largely attended meeting of the First Baptist church, last night, letters of dismission were granted to 106 members of Faith chapel, a branch of the church, for the purpose of constituting an independent organization.

Those who withdraw to form the new church have been already identified exclusively with the work in that society so that this present action does not practically effect the strength of the First Baptist church, which wil still be one of the largest of that denomination in the State.

Within a few days there will be a meeting of the members of the church to complete the details of organization, including the election of officers, so that the new order of things may become effective January 1, the date originally decided upon.

Miss Anastasia Flynn.

Miss Anastasia Flynn, who until a short time ago resided with her mother on McDowell street, died Tuesday night at her home in Stewartsville, Warren county. She was twenty-two years old and leaves beside her mother, a brother and a sister. The body will be brought to Plainfield on the 8:36 train tomorrow morning and the funeral will be held in St. Mary's church directly afterward. Burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Dr. Grenfell to Lecture.

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, master mariner, surgeon and magistrate of Labrador, will lecture on his life and work among the deep sea fishermen of that desolate coast, in the Plainfield High School auditorium, Tuesday night, December 22, at 8:15 o'clock. Tickets can be had at the drug stores of L. W. Randolph, T. S. Armstrong, Frank Rowley and Dudley S. Miller.

Young People's Social.

The Young People's Society of the First Baptist church will hold a social at the church tonight. There will be an interesting program of entertainment and refreshments will be served.

TUBERCULOSIS DISCUSSED

Plainfield Well Represented in Important Conference at Big Exhibition Today.

GOVERNOR J. F. FORT PRESIDES.

Mayor, Health Board President and Health Board Officer Among Those Attending the Great Great Meeting.

This was New Jersey day at the great international tuberculosis exhibit, being held at the American Museum of Natural History in New York, and among those attending from this city are Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, president of the local Board of Health, and Leon R. Thurlow, health officer.

The meeting began at 2 o'clock and was presided over by Governor Fort. An extensive and interesting program was married out under the arrangement of members of the New Jersey Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis.

"The Danger of Apathy in Tuberculosis" was the subject of a discourse delivered by L. R. Thurlow, health officer of this city. Other notable features of the program include: "What New Jersey Has Done to Prevent Tuberculosis," William C. Smallwood, executive secretary of the New Jersey Association; "The Responsibility of the Church in the Tuberculosis Campaign," the Rt. Rev. James A. McFaul, bishop of Trenton; "The Responsibility of State and Municipalities in the Tuberculosis Campaign," Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, president State Charities Aid, of Elizabeth; "New Jersey's Need of Sanitoria, and Hospitals for Consumptives," Dr. Henry H. Davis, of Camden; general discussion, Dr. Gordon K. Dickinson, Jersey City; Dr. Luther M. Halsey, Williamstown; Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, president of the Board of Health, this city, and Selskar M. Gunn, of Orange.

The big fight now being carried on against consumption is interesting persons in all departments of life, and from all over the State there are gathered in the auditorium hall of the Museum of Natural History today men and women of importance in the affairs of New Jersey and the nation. Special representatives from the State and local boards of health, as well as the educational boards, churches, Y. M. C. A. and department stores, are there.

Tonight there will be held at Newark a conference of citizens and societies interested in the cure and the prvntion of th spread of tuberculosis, under the auspices of the Board of Associated Charities, at the Public Library building.

The exhibition in New York is the greatest the world has ever known, every European country and many States being represented. Every device conceivable for the prevention and the cure of tuberculosis is set forth, and thousands of Jersey people are present today to witness the exhibition.

The campaign for the prevention of tuberculosis in the State has assumed large proportions during the past year. One of the most important subjects to be brought up for discussion is the framing and adoption of a uniform policy throughout the State for the care of moderate and advanced cases of the disease. At present, the only provision is an almshouse, and it is the hope of the convention to remedy these inadequacies and provide more suitable arrangements for the caring of the patients.

At the recent International Congress the one dominant note was the importance of adequate hospital care for the prevention of infection and thereby control the disease, and it is highly probable that the State will adopt some comprehensive policy upon this subject. Other States have already moved in this direction—Illinois in the line of county hospitals for tuberculosis under the board of managers appointed officially therefor, and Massachusetts in the line of three State hospitals for advanced cases.

Will Give Fencing Exhibition.

A fencing contest will be given at Saengerbund Hall tomorrow night, between Prof. Generoso Pavese, holder of the Police Gazette Championship belt, and Prof. E. Waterling, champion of Germany. Prof. Pavese taught President Roosevelt the art of fencing and was highly complimented for his proficiency by the latter.

Giving Away Fountain Pens.

The presentation of a fountain pen with every purchase of a certain amount has caused a great rush to the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co. store on West Front street. The pens are worth more than the price of goods required and an excellent opportunity is offered to get one at a moderate price. ***

DOG'S BITE COSTS $250.

Westfield Man Must Pay Damages to S. E. Frazee Who Asked for $500.

DISTRICT COURT SO DECIDES.

Judge Newcorn Says The Defendant Knew That His Bulldog Was Vicious.

The fact that John H. Kimball, of Westfield, kept a bulldog that he knew to be vicious and yet did not use reasonable care to prevent it from biting people, was largely responsible for a $250 verdict for damages being rendered against him by Judge Newcorn, in the district court this morning. The award was made in favor of Sidney E. Frazee, of this city, who was badly torn by the canine and who brought suit to recover $500. The case was heard in the District court last week.

In rendering his decision, Judge Newcorn stated that the evidence showed that Kimball was fully aware of the bulldog's tendency to bite people and yet he allowed it to roam about at will, affording it every opportunity to exercise its savage temperament. The animal was on premises other than that of its owners when it sprang upon Frazee as he entered the yard to deliver a grocery order. The Plainfielder was bitten repeatedly before assistance arrived and the dog was driven off.

Frazee was compelled to relinquish for several weeks and was under a doctor's care as a result of the injuries he received. He showed in his case that he did not molest the animal, that he had a right to be where he was and that the dog did not and that on previous occasions the canine had attacked other people. The court accepted the testimony and also that Kimball had been warned that if he did not keep his animal tied up, somebody would be badly hurt. The last mentioned point was an important factor in the summing up and the award of $250 to the plaintiff.

Frazee's side of the case was handled by Isaac P. Runyon while Kimball was represented by Winfield S. Angleman. The decision was given orally and until it is filed in writing it cannot be stated as to whether an appeal will be taken or not.

MR. HUNTSMAN PROMINENT IN HIS RESIDENCE CITY.

In its issue of last evening, the Providence, R. I., Journal contained the following with reference to the death of John F. Huntsman, well known to many Plainfielders and the father of Robert F. R. Huntsman and John F. Huntsman, Jr., of this city, showing the prominence he enjoyed in his residence place:

"John F. Huntsman, for many years prominent in the business, religious and social life of this city, died at his home, 37 South Angell street, at an early hour this morning of angina pectoris. He had been ill only since last Friday, though for some time past his health had not been very good.

Mr. Huntsman was born near Burlington, Burlington county, N. J. He fitted for a teacher in the State Normal school of that State, and taught for a time in Newark Academy. In 1863 he became identified with the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company, in the home office in Newark.

He married Miss Zerrie S. Fitz-Randolph of Newark. In 1880 the family came to this city and Mr. Huntsman became the representative of the Mutual Benefit Company in this locality. He retained this office for many years, retiring from active participation in business about two years ago.

Mr. Huntsman was active in many good works. He was a deacon in the High Street Presbyterian church of Newark for many years, and at the time of his death held the same office in the Union Congregational church of this city, where he was universally beoved.

"He was president of the Rhode Island Home Missionary Society for 20 years and had been a member of the executive committee of the National Congregational Home Missionary Society since its reorganization two years ago. He was also a member of the Art Club, the Economic Club, and was a member and former president of the Congregational club.

"Mrs. Huntsman and eight children, four sons and four daughters, survive him."

Will Make Christmas Gifts.

The junior members of the Y. W. C. A. will meet at the rooms tonight to fill net stockings with pop-corn to be sent to the Little Missionary Day Nursery, New York, of which Miss Sara Curry is the matron. They will be distrubted at the Christmas celebration.

DISTRICT COURT TRIALS FEW; 31 CASES ON LIST

Judgment for the defendant for $16 was given by Judge Newcorn in the District Court, this morning, in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Apgar against Frank Legge. The plaintiff sought to recover $15 which she claimed was due her for rent, but the defendant filed as an off-set a claim for $31 for rent over-paid. Judge Newcorn in giving the defendant a verdict, explained that the plaintiff had failed to substantiate her claim.

A considerable part of the morning session was taken up by the suit of Mrs. Mary Johnson against Louis Pollock, in which she tried to recover $25 for a horse she sold the defendant. The latter was not represented by counsel, while Francis J. Blatz appeared for the plaintiff. In the opinion of Judge Newcorn the contract for the sale of the horse was plain and he gave judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed.

Judgment was given the plaintiff for $128 in the suit of the New Jersey Structural Company against C. P. Sebring. J. H. Crane represented the company and W. L. Hetfield, Jr., the defendant. In the case of the Biglow Varnish Company against John Hensey, judgment for $24 was given the plaintiff.

There were in all thirty-three cases listed for trial today, but a large majority of them were put off until next week's session of the court, some for the reason that the contestants were not ready for trial.

MRS. FANNY SUTPHEN DIES OF HEART FAILURE

Following a brief illness with heart failure, Mrs. Fannie A. Sutphen, widow of Dr. John C. Sutphen, who was the fourth elected mayor of Plainfield, died suddenly at her home on East Seventh street, near Watchung avenue, early this morning. She had been in frail health for some time but had been confined to her bed only for the past few days. She was sitting up a part of yesterday and though it was known that her illness was one to cause alarm, the end was not expected so soon by the members of her family.

Mrs. Sutphen was born at Liberty Corner seventy-years ago and moved to this city with her husband in 1868. Dr. Sutphen, at that time, was one of the best known practitioners in the county and was considered one of the first residents of Plainfield. He was associated with Dr. Gilbert, who gained fame as an inventor and designed the first elevated railroad built in New York. Their office was located on Front street where the Schwed building now stands.

The Sutphen homestead was on West Second street, opposite No. 1 fire house, where the family resided for many years. Though kept very busy by his medical practice, Dr. Sutphen was induced by the citizens to run for mayor on the Democratic ticket in 1874 and was elected, serving two years. He died in 1878. The family moved to Seventh street about ten years ago.

Mrs. Sutphen was a member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and had always been identified with its work. In early life she was a member of many local organizations and was prominent in social affairs. With all she was a woman devoted to her home and she will always be kindly remembered for numerous acts of a charitable nature and a disposition that endeared her to all with whom she came in contact.

Mrs. Sutphen is survived by three daughters and six sons, all living in Plainfield with the exception of two, Mrs. Walter Bass, of Little Silver, and Julian Sutphen, of Brooklyn. She spent the entire summer at Mrs. Bass' home and returned here only two weeks ago. The funeral will be held at the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

"The Thief" Tonight.

The sale of seats indicates that a large audience will greet Charles Frohman's production of "The Thief" at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The drama is one of the strongest put on in several seasons and brought fame to Henri Bersten, the author. The same cast and equipment that marked the Broadway run will be seen in Plainfield.

Rev. E. V. Stevenson Officiated.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, and not Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, the rector of Grace church, New York, officiated at the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Fairfax Johnson, of New York, and Dr. Wilbur Cornwell, of this city, on Wednesday in the Chantry of Grace church, New York.

NO PICTURE OF LINCOLN

Mr. Ackerman Tries in Vain to Have Martyr-President's Portrait Kept on Stamps.

HE INTERESTS THE PRESIDENT

Chief Magistrate Finds That New Plates Are Made and Nothing Can Be Done.

The decision of the postal authorities to make a change in postage stamps, substituting the face of George Washington on all but the one cent stamp, upon which will be continued that of Benjamin Franklin, led State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman to use his influence to have Lincoln's picture retained on the five cent stamp, especially as next year the birth centennial of Lincoln will be celebrated.

Mr. Ackerman took the matter up by correspondence with President Roosevelt, as did also United States Senator John Kean, with a view to having Lincoln's picture continued on the stamps. The President sent a courteous reply and said that he would confer with Postmaster-General von Meyer about it. He was informed by Mr. von Meyer that all the plates for the new stamps were completed and that a change would now be impossible. Mr. Ackerman was promptly notified of this fact.

The Senator is one of the two American members of the Royal Philatelic Society, and it was for this reason as well as the fact that he is a member of a committee having in charge a celebration of Lincoln's birthday, that he became interested in the matter.

Mr. Ackerman is a member of the Union County Lincoln Celebration Committee.

PASTOR AND WIFE CELEBRATE 10th WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Finn, of East Ninth street, celebrated the tenth anniversary of their wedding on Tuesday and that night they were given a genuine surprise by members of the Park Avenue Baptist church congregation. A company numbering about seventy-five people suddenly and without warning dropped into the parsonage, bringing with them tinware of every description.

The guests were hospitably received by Mr. and Mrs. Finn and an enjoyable evening was spent. Congratulations were offered and refreshments served and as the guests departed one and all were heartily thanked for their generous remembrance of the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Finn were married ten years ago at Eagleville, Pa., the home of Mrs. Finn. Both are graduates of Bucknell College. Mr. Finn is now serving his fourth year as pastor of the local Baptist church and has been very successful.

NEWARK FLOCK WANTS REV. DR. VANCE TO STAY.

Resolutions urging Rev. Dr. James I. Vance to remain as pastor of the North Reformed church, Newark, were adopted at the annual meeting of the congregation Tuesday night. An engrossed copy of the resolutions will be presented to Dr. Vance, who has not yet reached a decision regarding the call tendered to him by the Central Presbyterian church at Atlanta, Ga.

Frederick Frelinghuysen presided at the meeting and submitted the resolution, which expressed the appreciation of the church of Dr. Vance's work and the regret the members would feel if he should give up the pastorate.

Don't Forget Your Taxes.

Owing to the fact that December 20 falls on Sunday this year, taxes which are due on that date, can be paid Monday, December 21, although everyone is urged to settle before if possible and thereby lessen the troubles of Tax Collector W. R. Townsend, who is a pretty busy man these days. He reports that taxes are coming in steadily every day and that up to the present time the general amount received is ahead of that received the same time last year.

Y. M. C. A. Minstrels Ready.

One of the funniest features of the Y. M. C. A. minstrel show, to be held in the association hall Friday and Saturday nights, is the "dance of the jumping jacks." Director J. C. Roeber, who comes out from New York to conduct the rehearsals, is well pleased with the talent that he has found among the boys of the local association, and also in the way that they have completely mastered their parts.

$250,000, exclusive of the site and furniture, was inspected yesterday afternoon by Mayor McBride and officials of Paterson. Points that will enable the Paterson authorities to rearrange the plans for the proposed building in the Silk City were gained by the visitors.

Three days' notice was served on Poor Overseer Risley Barlow by Atlantic City's Council Monday night to either take instructions from Council or resign. Barlow was present when the resolution was adopted without a dissenting vote, and prior to its presentation he said he would not accept any instructions from Council nor tolerate interference with his office from the chamber. If at the end of three days the overseer does not surrender, a substitute will be elected by Council.

Mainland farmers who claim they are losing thousands of dollars because of the enforcement of an Atlantic City law against carting away kitchen refuse brought a half-starved porker to exhibit to Councilman William Riddle yesterday as an example of the result. The farmers claim that their pigs are starving because they cannot afford to buy grain feed. They were prevented from carrying the thin porker before Council during their appeal for abrogation of the rule, which was ignored.

The finding of several horses and wagons in the woods near Carmel and the arrest of a man who is now in jail at Bridgeton, is believed to be the first step in the exposure of a "Black Hand" society and regularly organized band of horse thieves. It is said that there is a "Black Hand" organization which meets in a village in this county every Sunday, their object being to prey upon industrious Italians. "Black Hand" letters and horse stealing are both a part of their regular depredations.

CLEVELAND FUND IS NATIONAL IN SCOOP

A meeting of the Cleveland Monument Association was held yesterday afternoon in the office of former United States Senator John F. Dryden, president of the Prudential Insurance company at Newark.

The best means of completing plans for the erection of a monument to the late former President were discussed, and it was finally decided to form a permanent corporation, with a board of twenty-five trustees, whose names will be given out on their acceptances of the office. Early in January another meeting will be held, at which final steps will be taken and the corporation duly formed.

It was decided to raise a fund of $100,000, and also to have residents of other States contribute to the memorial. Many letters have been received from societies and private citizens of other States asking that arrangements be made to handle their contributions to the fund, and asking that the movement be made a national one rather than one confined to the State of New Jersey.

Interest in the movement to honor one of the greatest Presidents the country has ever known has been shown very strongly over the country, and the gentlemen having the matter in hand so far have not the slightest doubt that the entire amount decided upon will be very easily obtained. New York, as the State in which Grover Cleveland occupied the highest offices in the gift of the people, New Jersey as his birthplace and residence after retirement, and the United States in general, over which he ruled for eight years—all are sure to be represented in the list of contributors.

Dr. Abraham Morrell Cory.

Dr. Abraham Morrell Cory, one of the oldest physicians in New Jersey who died at his home in New Providence yesterday, was perhaps one of the best known residents of the State. His mother was of French Huguenot descent, her ancestors settling in Piscataway. Dr. Cory was a representative of the "old school" physicians, who kept abreast of the times and the advances of science.

KENILWORTH'S TROUBLES

Odd Assessments on Whole Borough to Be Reviewed by State Board.

OF STATE-WIDE IMPORTANCE.

Union County's Newest Municipality Presents an Unique Case for the Taxing Officials.

Property owners in Kenilworth borough, Union county, secured, through their counsel, Franklin W. Fort and Frederick L. Lehlbach, yesterday, an order for a review of the current year assessment on their property that is of State wide importance.

Saturday was fixed as the day for review by Major Carl Lentz, president of the State Board of Equalization of Taxes, because December 20 is the date on which each municipality is required by law to pay out of its first tax receipts all the money assessed for State and county purposes.

In Kenilworth borough this amounts to about $2,000, and so far as the 759 petitioners involved are concerned, if the State board had not agreed to hear the appeal before December 20, their only recourse would have been a suit at law, costing more than the amount involved.

Notwithstanding the comparatively small amount of money at stake, the hearing will be an important one, because of the principal involved, which affects both the State school tax and the levy for county purposes. As a result, Attorney General Wilson and the representatives of the thirty-nine taxing districts in Union county have been cited to attend the hearing on the appeal in the Union county court house at 11 o'clock Saturday morning.

The case is unique in many respects and a sequel to the "New Orange" land speculation scheme of a few years ago, which has a court record including foreclosures of general and individual mortgages, followed by a change of name to the borough of Kenilworth.

On the assessors' map the territory includes 276 acres, divided into 1,075 lots, and the total assessment objected to is levied on a valuation of $985,199.55, or about $3,300 an acre, while property elsewhere in the county alleged to be of equal value is assessed at $100 an acre.

This condition, the plaintiffs allege, is due to an unusual cause, the fact that the assessor, John W. Codd, whose whereabouts, it is alleged, is unknown, had no actual knowledge of the real value of the borough property, and was made assessor because no other person was willing to accept the position.

The assesor, according to the information furnished to the State board, is a retired missionary, and his tax duplicate now in the possession of the State board, is more voluminous than that of the city of Elizabeth, where the valuation taxable is $51,955,374.34, exclusive of second class railroad property.

TALLEST FLAGPOLE IN STATE DEDICATED AT JAMESBURG.

The great flagpole presented by David Baird, of Camden, to the State Home for Boys was dedicated at Jamesburg when the beautiful flag presented by Quartermaster General C. Edward Murray was for the first time run up to its top. The two gifts cost about $600.

The flagpole stands 122 feet above the ground and is imbedded beneath it in a concrete base about eight feet deep. It is the tallest flagpole in New Jersey and is the handsomest ever sent out from Mr. Baird's great spar making establishment.

Lincoln Celebration Speakers.

Senator Samuel K. Robbins, who will be the next President of the Senate; Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, Republican choice for leader of the Senate; John D. Prince, the next Speaker of the House, and Griffith W. Lewis, Republican leader of the Assembly, have accepted invitations to speak at the Lincoln's Birthday dinner at the Hoboken Republican Club. Vivian M. Lewis, clerk in chancery; State Treasurer Daniel S. Voorhees and David Baird have also promised to be present. Governor Fort will speak at the Union League Club dinner in Brooklyn on Lincoln's Birthday.

Raritan Man Must Pay $1,500 for Trifling With Miss Sher's Affections.

FAIR PLAINTIFF MUCH ELATED

She Told the Jury That He Had Not Only Jilted Her But Had Borrowed $300.

It is going to cost Samuel Glazer, of Raritan, $1,500 for trifling with the affections of Miss Mary Sher, of Perth Amboy, in addition to the costs of suit and his two counsel, unless he secures a reversal in a higher court. The jury which heard the unusual breach of promise suit in the Circuit Court at New Brunswick, returned with a verdict for that amount for the fair plaintiff.

The jury took about a half an hour to consider the case. Judge Lloyd held court longer than usual and missed his train home to Camden in order to finish the case and send it to the jury yesterday afternoon.

When the jury returned Clerk Watson put the usual questions and asked Foreman Walter Green, of Madison, how it found. Mr. Green has served on grand juries in the past and was accustomed to finding bills of indictment, so he answered, "We find a bill."

"What is the verdict?" demanded the clerk.

"We find a bill," repeated the foreman.

"You mean you find the defendant guilty and how do you assess the damages?"

"$1,500 for the plaintiff," replied the foreman.

Miss Sher and her family seemed elated. There was gloom across the court room where Glazer and the members of his family were sitting. The lawyers for the defense at once prepared to take out a rule to show cause for a new trial.

Miss Sher had charged that Glazer had not only promised to marry her and jilted her, but that he had induced her to sell her profitable business at Perth Amboy and loan him $300. The defense had claimed that she had given him the $300 to buy diamonds; that she now had those diamonds and that it was she who had repudiated the contract to marry.

The bunch of letters which were introduced in the case were not ardent love missives. They were principally brief notes, stating that he would call, or asking her to call. There were no endearing terms, excepting the formal "Dear Mary" in the introduction, and "Yours lovingly," at the conclusion.

Collins Sues Elizabeth Journal.

The Elizabeth Daily Journal is defendant in a libel action for $15,000 brought by General D. F. Collins, treasurer of the Democratic State Committee. The action is based on a story and an editorial alleged to have been published in that paper on October 15, in which General Collins, who was then a candidate for Mayor, was charged with attacking the churches and with referring to the editor of The Journal as a "prayer meeting editor." General Collins lost the mayoralty fight.

NO REVIVAL OF CHAIR VICTIMS TO BE ALLOWED

Attorney General Wilson, in reply to an inquiry for an opinion on the duty of the head keeper of the State prison at Trenton, as to what disposition must be made of the body of an executed prisoner, has informed Head Keeper Osborne so fully on the law that it is to be doubted if there will be heard any more intimation that a county physician will attempt to resuscitate a man after he has been legally executed. Dr. Frank G. Scammell, county physician at Trenton, had made arrangements for setting at rest the idea that a criminal shocked to death is really not dead until the knives of the surgeon enter his body or he is smothered in quicklime, by an effort to revive Gicinto Ricci, who is to be executed next week.

In his opinion the Attorney General recites the statute and says:

"I find no warrant in the law for a post-mortem examination. It is mandatory on you immediately after the execution to deliver the body to some relative or to immediately inter the same. If no such person claims the body then it may be turned over to the incorporated society for the advancement of medical and surgical science."

When Dr. Scammell will get such a society to claim the body or not he is not prepared to say. The body will not be turned over for twelve hours after execution.

"TRY OUT" NIGHT DRAWS BIG AUDIENCE AT THEATRE.

A capacity audience at the New Plainfield theatre, last night, was greatly pleased with the "try out" program provided. Ten acts were put on by Nelson, the well known vaudeville agent, and if applause is any criterion, everyone made good. The awarding of first and second prizes was in doubt for several minutes as there were many favorites to consider. Another "try out" will be held next week.

Mr. Kelley has taken charge of the amateur night performances on Fridays at the New Orpheum theatre and will have a bunch of talent on hand tomorrow night. He will bring several aspirants for fotolight work from New York and there are four local entries to help out.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Henri Bernstein's great play "The Thief," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Richard Carle, the author comedian of "Mary's Lamb," which is to be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night, comes from Boston. Not long ago he revisited the suburb in which he was born. His mother said to him, "Richard, you must call upon Mrs. Newton. Now, the comedian had not the remotest idea who Mrs. Newton was, and he ventured to tell his maternal guide as much. He was informed that this venerable woman was the motherly party who used to run out to the corner when Richard was on his way to school and hand him a red apple every morning. Mrs. Newton had read of the rising young comedian's fame, and she was most anxious to have the honor of a call from him. So Mr. Carle, who was attired in gentlemanly afternoon garb, went over to make the call on the lady who never in her long life had either seen the inside of a theatre or come in contact with an actor. After painfully expressing his great joy in again beholding the apple lady of his youth, and saying other incredible things, a youngster—the youthful daughter of the house—came in and stood close to Mr. Carle with jaw dropping in expectant wonder. As the comedian was about to knew how little Pip used to feel ment, the youngster said, blubberingly, "be funny." Then Mr. Carle kne who wlittle Pip used to feel when Dickens' Miss Faversham said, "play."

While the unique personality of Arnold Daly has heaped upon his young head a lot of good natured ridicule, there are few who would not be pleased to see the young man assert himself finally in a play quite worthy of his undeniable fundamental ability. C. M. S. McLellan, in whose new play, "The Pickpockets," Mr. Daly is to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night, has on one previous occasion, at least, supplied an unusual personality and temperament with a vehicle that turned out to be an immense popular success. That was when he wrote "Leah Kleschna" for Mrs. Fiske. In the present instance, Mr. McLellan has invaded a field even more fruitful of dramatic suggestion, than that of the psychology of criminology, for he has written "The Pickpockets" as the result of an intimate investigation of the greatest of the economic problems now confronting this country, the proper adjustment of the relative rank of the strong and the weak in business life, that is those who have, and those who have not the money-making instinct. At the same time, the author, to use his own words, has "realized the tremendous advantages of the stage over many of the other accepted means of bringing social, moral, and kindred ideas before the public, yet the dramatist must use methods far-removed from those of the preacher or the editor.

A simple, every-day, heart-touching story of the sort that concerns real people and deals with real situations and the realities of life instead of the impossibilities, is the kind that the playwright has woven into an interesting rural drama in the "Ninety and Nine," which takes its theme and title from the far famed hymn of the singing Evangelist, Ira D. Sankey. It tells a heart-rending tale of a fallen man, drink ridden and despondent and his subsequent redemption through the influence of a noble and trusting woman actuated by her love of the man and guided by that instinct that seems to be woman's gift to see with the eyes of love the spark of manhood hidden beneath an exterior crime coated by the demon drink. The unwinding of the love story and the dash of nature that the writer has infused into this stage creation by his splendid characters, makes it an offering of more than passing interest. It will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre Christmas afternoon and night.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Young People's Association of the First Baptist church will hold a social in the Sunday-school room tonight.

The C. E. Society of the Congregational church is arranging an entertainment under the direction of Miss Aimee Emmons.

The Mission Study Class of the First M. E. church will meet this evening with Mrs. G. M. Rittenhouse, of Sandford avenue, at 8 o'clock.

Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, will speak on "Young People's Work," at the First Baptist church Sunday night, before the Young People's Association.

The Men's Club of Hope chapel has authorized Rev. L. R. Howard, James Penny and John Slorah to arrange for the publication of a weekly church bulletin, beginning January 1. It will contain all the news of the chapel, including meetings, entertainments and socials.

Rev. D. B. H. Randolph, of Sandford avenue, district superintendent of the Elizabeth district of the M. E. church, has returned from Livingston, where he made an address at the anniversary of the M. E. church.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"And I suppose you took the furniture money to buy tickets?"

"Yis, sor."

"And you're bound to go with me?"

"Yis, sor," said Haley.

"You ought to be ashamed of yourself, sergeant," said the colonel; but he was glad at the heart of him for this mutinous loyalty.

"Yes, sor,' said Haley.

"Well, since you are here, I engage you from to-day, you understand."

"Yis, sor," said Haley. Mrs. Haley whimpered a blessing; but the only change in the soldier was that his military stolidity became natural and real instead of forced.

"Sit down on this seat over here with me and I'll tell you what I want. You fraud, letting me say good-by to you—"

"I didn't want to take the liberty, sor, but you made me shake hands. I was afraid you'd catch on, sor. 'Tis a weight off me moind, sor."

"I dare say. You always have your way with me, you old mule. Now listen; I want you to be on the watch for two men"—thereupon the colonel described his men, laying special stress on the moles on the face of one, and the other's dimple.

Having set Haley his tasks, he went back to his car in better spirits.

By this time the train was moving. He had seen his kinswoman and her party enter; and he found the object of Mrs. Melville's darksome warnings sitting with a slender lad in the main body of the car. Aunt Rebecca was in the drawing-room, her maid with her. Mrs. Melville, who had already revealed her presence, sat across the aisle. She presented the colonel at once.

Miss Smith did not look formidable; she looked "nice" thought the colonel. She was of medium height; she was obviously plump, although well proportioned; her presence had an effect of radiant cleanliness, her eyes were so luminous and her teeth so fine and her white shirt waist so immaculate. There was about her a certain soft illumination of cheerfulness, and at the same time a restful repose; she moved in a leisurely fashion and she sat perfectly still. "I never saw any one who looked less of an adventuress," Winter was thinking, as he bowed. Then swiftly his glance went to the lad, a pale young fellow with hazel eyes and a long, slim hand which felt cold.

The boy made a little inarticulate sound in his throat and blushed when Col. Winter addressed him. But he looked the brighter for the blush. It was not a plain face; rather an interesting one in spite of its listlessness and its sickly pallor; its oval was purely cut, the delicate mouth was closed firmly enough, and the hazel eyes with their long lashes would be beautiful were they not so veiled.

"He has the Winter mouth, at least," noted the colonel. He felt a throb at his heart. Had his own boy lived, the baby that died when it was born, he would be only a year older than Archie. At least, this boy was of his own blood. Without father or mother, but not alone in the world; and, if any danger menaced, not without defenders. The depression which had enveloped him lifted as mist before the sun, burned away by the mere thought of possible difficulties. "We will see if any one swindles you out of your share," said Rupert Winter, compressing the Winter mouth more firmly, "or if those gentlemanly kidnapers mean you."

His ebbing suspicion of the boy's companion revived; he would be on his guard, all right.

"Aunt Rebecca wants to see you," Mrs. Melville suggested. "She is in the drawing-room with her solitaire."

"Still playing Penelope's Web?"

"Oh, she always comes back to it. But she plays bridge, too; Rupert, I hear your game is a wonder. Archie's been learning, so he could play with you."

"Good for Archie!"—he shot a glance and a smile at the lad's reddening face—"we'll have a game."

"Lord, I wish he didn't look quite so ladylike," he was grumbling within, as he dutifully made his way to his aunt's presence.

The electric lights flooded the flimsy railway table on which were spread rows of small-sized cards. An elderly lady of quality was musing over the pasteboard rows. A lady of quality—that was distinctly the phrase to catch one's fancy at the first glimpse of Mrs. Winter. Not an aged lady, either, for even at 80, that elegantly molded, slim figure, that abundance of silvery hair—parted in the middle and growing thickly on each side in nature's own fashion, which art can not counterfeit, as well as softly puffed and massed above—that exquisitely colored and textured skin, strangely smooth for her years, with tiny wrinkles of humor, to be sure, about the eyes, but with cheeks and skin unmarred; that fine, firmly carved profile, those black eyebrows and lashes and still brilliant dark eyes; most of all that erect, alert, dainty carriage, gave no impression of age; but they all, and their accessories of toilet and manner, and a little prim touch of an older, more reticent day in both dress and bearing, recalled the last century phrase.

A soft gray bunch of chinchilla fur lay where she had slipped it on her soft gray skirts; one hand rested in the fur—her left hand—and on the third finger were the only rings which she wore, a band of gold, worn by 60 years, and a wonderful ruby, wherein (at least such was Rupert's phantasy) a writhing flame was held captive by its guard of diamond icicles. The same rings admired by her nephew ever since he was a cadet—just the same smiling, inscrutable, high-bred, unchanging old dame!

"Good evening, Aunt Rebecca; not a day older!" said the colonel.

WINNING PARK BOWLERS DEFEAT ROSELLE TEAM

The Park Club five is setting the pace this season in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament with ten victories and only two defeats out of twelve games rolled. The team is bowling exceptionally well, and in every game the scores are above the average. Last night the team rolled against Roselle Casino, at the latter place, and took the first two games by scores of 817 to 738 and 908 to 772, and then dropped the third game by a score of 712 to 764.

What caused the slump in that last game it is hard to explain, but Mulford the veteran was the only member of the team that held his own, putting up a score of 168. Daniel was the high man of the evening, rolling a 192 in the second game, while Barlow was next with a 185 and then Ball rolled 183. Contrary to the usual thing not a double century was rolled in all three games. The scores:

KINGSLEY SCHOOL HAS FAST BASKETBALL TEAM.

The North Plainfield basketball team lost to Kingsley School at Essex Fels yesterday, 26 to 15. The winning team played a remarkably fast game and some of their shooting was described as phenominal.

Steiner and Becker were unable to accompany the local five and their places were filled by Smith and Parsons.

The lineup: Steine and Conroy, forwards; Overton, centre; Smith and Parsons, guards.

BASKETBALL.

The members of the evening classes at the Y. W. C. A., will meet tonight for basketball practice with a view to forming a permanent team.

The Young Men's club basketball team of Hope chapel will meet the Somerset A. C., of New Brunswick in Hope gymnasium Saturday night at 8:15 o'clock.

The Hope Boys' Club basketball five will play the Netherwood A. C. at Hope chapel, tomorrow night. The game should be a good one, as the Netherwoods recently defeated the Whittier School five.

Class Teams Play Today.

The Stillman School five will meet the North Plainfield High School sophomore class team at Debele hall this afternoon at 3:30.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Schott, of this city, have been visiting friends in East Rutherford.

Miss Marjorie Burtis, of Fairview avenue, who has been ill for two weeks, has recovered.

Mr. and Mrs. George O. Strayer, of this city are registered at The New Bingham Hotel, Philadelphia.

Miss Mary Runkle, of West Eighth street, was a guest at the fortnightly dance in Oration Hall, Newark, on Monday night, where debutantes were well represented.

Mrs. W. C. Duyckinck and granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth Tucker Duyckinck, of Crescent avenue, have returned home after spending a week with relatives at Yonkers, N. Y.

Mrs. Black and her daughter, Miss Black, have returned to their home in Charleston, S. C., after spending several weeks with Mrs. Black's daughter, Mrs. H. M. Fisher, of Sycamore avenue.

Among the guests at a dance in Newark Monday night where Mrs. John H. McCracken and her daughter, Miss May E. McCracken, were hostesses, were Harry Hanson and Walter Long, of this city. The announcement of Miss McCracken's engagement to William Newell, of Montclair, was made on that occasion.

Arnold's Daly's Success.

Arnold Daly, who comes to the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night in his new play, "The Pickpockets," is one of the best known actors on the American stage. He gained great prominence in his exploitation of Bernard Shaw's plays and has since attained emphatic success in "The Regenration" and Mark Twain's sketch, "Becoming an Ediot."

Approaching Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. William Addis, of Orange place, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Jeannette Gertrude Addis, to Dwight VanDoren, of this city. The event will take place Thursday afternoon, December 31, at 5 o'clock at Grace church, and will be followed by a reception at the home of her parents, 310 Orange place from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock.

Meyers vs. P. S. C. Adjourned.

The action in tort of Christopher Meyers against the Public Service Corporation, which was set down for a third trial in the District court, today, was put off until Thursday, January 7. There is a possibility that the husband may join his wife in this suit and that the case may be tried at Elizabeth.

WHY WOMEN RESIGNED CRIMES COMMISSION

Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, of Elizabeth, who, with Mrs. C. B. Alexander, of Hoboken, resigned from Governor Fort's Crime and and Dependency Investigation Commission, denied yesterday reports to the effect that she had withdrawn because of personal differences among members of the commission.

"Mrs. C. B. Alexander and I resigned," she said, "simply because we believe that the work of the commission is completed. The other members believe the law requires them to continue and to make another report, and so it is simply a question of the letter of the law. We concur with the majority of the members of the commission, and the only difference in opinion in the commission was on the excise question, which we thought wass a matter for the State Excise Board to deal with, and not for us. From this Commissioner Boom dissented, and saw fit to sign a minority report.

"I see one of the Trenton morning papers is responsible for the statement that Mrs. Alexander and I resigned because Commissioner Ransom was a member of the commission. That is absolutely untrue, and without the slightest foundation in fact. The personnel of the commission had absolutely nothing to do with the resignations."

Referring to the report that she had had a stormy interview with Governor Fort, she said:

"There have been no 'stormy interviews,'" she said, "between either Governor Fort and myself or any other member of the commission. As a matter of fact, I was not in Trenton yesterday, so that is absurd."

"The report that Mrs. Williamson and I had resigned from the Crimes Commission because of any disagreement is erroneous," said Mrs. C. B. Alexander, of Castle Point, Hoboken, last night. "Mrs. Williamson is a probation officer of Union county, and I am a probation officer of Hudson county. We cheerfully served on the commission until it had completed its labors and made its report, when we resigned because we found that the work had been at a sacrifice to us, as it interfered with our duties as probation officers. It was impossible for the commission to arrange its meetings to suit our conveniences, and this forced us to absent ourselves from court on days when duty, a duty for which we are paid, demanded our presence and also interfered with our office duties. We therefore decided, as the work of the commission was practically completed, to retire from the commission, merely a temporary body, and devote ourselves to our permanent probationary work."

Funeral of Mrs. J. B. Drayton.

The funeral service of Mrs. Adelaide Denison, widow of John B. Drayton, who died yesterday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. R. Henry Depew, of Hillside avenue, will be held from the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

CHRISTMAS DINNER COST

Timely Hints for the Housewife on Prevailing Prices for the Usual Menu.

NO GAME IS SOLD HERE.

Turkey No Higher than a Year Ago—Meats Reasonable; Eggs High; Staple Goods Low.

As the Christmas dinner hour approaches and the children's toys have been skillfully hidden away in the attic, along with a new mask and set of sleigh bells for Santa's costume, the housewife turns her busy mind to things eatable. Of course there will be turkey. The bird's popularity at this season will not cause the supply to fail, dealers say, and the price is about the same as last year, 28 and 30 cents for the best Maryland raised. Others are quoted at 20 cents and up, but they are not so plump. Some very good Jersey fed are offered at 25 cents.

Chickens suitable for roasting range in price from 18 to 24 cents, and others which are fresh killed, but better for stewing are sold at 14 to 18 cents.

The absence of wild game at this time on account of the State laws, limits the variety of bird meat. Beef, mutton and pork are at about the normal figure for December, but cured meats are higher by about two cents. Hams are quoted at 14 to 18 cents and shoulders at 8½ to 10 cents.

The finest select oysters are sold at 80 cents per hundred, or 30 cents per quart, which is about the same as last year, while lobsters are away up, being 25 to 30 cents, as against 20 to 25 cents last year. This increase is due to a scarcity.

Big dealers like Roth & Co., the West End Market, W. L. Smalley & Co., Frank Neidig, and C. W. Applegate are expecting a greater Christmas trade than in former years and have made preparations accordingly. They will thus be able to supply their customers at the lowest prevailing prices.

When the purchaser has made her selections at the butcher's and gets around to the grocery store she will be confronted with signs reading: "Eggs, 50 to 60 cents!" Those prices are for strictly fresh Jersey eggs, of course. The G. A. & P. Tea Co. has a large shipment from Western States, not cold storage, and which only an expert can distinguish from those produced here, selling at 31 cents. Last year at this time the best variety was selling at 35 cents. These prices are gleamed from a visit to S. Scheuer & Co., Neuman Bros., B. R. Barnes, Marchant Bros. and Brokaw Creamery.

Cranberries, also, are becoming scarce and more expensive. A year ago they were 12 cents per quart, while now 14 cents is asked and they will go higher yet. A demand greater than the supply is responsible.

Grapes that sold at 10 cents per pound are now 15 cents, but oranges and other fruits are about the same. S. Scheuer & Co. have many varities, as have also Neuman Brothers, and R. W. Barnes. These stores are especially well stocked with delicacies of all kinds, everything desired for the Christmas table. The prices of staple goods are low as they have been in recent years at this season, and so the economical buyer will have no difficulty in preparing a bountiful spread at no great expense.

Hunt Club Discuss Plans.

Lewis E. Waring, master of the hounds of the Watchung Hunt Club, was among the representatives of hunt clubs that attended a meeting of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association held in New York on Wednesday. Representatives of thirty-one hunt clubs and amateur racing associations out of a total of forty-two responded to the invitation to be present for a conference on the question of arranging a circuit and for protection and increased facilities. Charles Pfizer, New Jersey; Redmond Stewart, Maryland; A. J. A. Devereux, Pennsylvania; Westmoreland Davis, Virginia and Fletcher Harper, New York, were appointed a committee to carry out the provisions of a resolution to decide upon the best methods by which amateur racing can best be promoted and strengthened.

Affects July 4 Winnings.

The recent decision of the National Trotting Association relative to Adam C. Blair's horse, "Aaron B," and its appearance at the driving club on July 4, last, refers only to the winnings of the horse for that day and not the whole season as some believed. Mr. Blair last summer paid the required fee of $50 and had his horse registered under the name of "Aaron B," changing it from "Leon," under which it was known in the West.

BOARD OF TRADE'S BANQUET COMMITTEE

The banquet committee having in charge the arrangements for the annual dinner of the Board of Trade, met last night in the office of Secretary A. S. Herr and the various sub-committees were appointed to assist in the work of planning the affair. Judge William Newcorn was chosen chairman of the general committee, and he then announced the following committees:

Speakers—Henry L. Hall, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Alexander Gilbert, William L. Saunders and Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield. Entertainment—A. E. Force, Edward C. Hardingham and Ralph L. Morrow. Place of dinner and menu—J. Hervey Doane, Francis J. Blatz, Milton Mendel and Edmund Rushmore. Tickets and printing—Eugene M. Laing and J. Fred MacDonald. Press—A. S. Herr, Hugh B. Sweeney and J. Herbert Case. Service—A. E. Force.

The members of the general banquet committees comprises William Newcorn, chairman; Alexander Gilbert, Ralph L. Morrow, Edmund Rushmore, A. E. Force, Henry L. Hall, A. S. Herr, Eugene M. Laing, Francis J. Blatz, Charles J. Fisk, Samuel Townsend, Hugh B. Sweeney, J. Fred MacDonald, William L. Saunders, Edward C. Hardingham, J. Herbert Case, Milton Mendel and J. Hervey Doane.

After the appointment of committees there was a general discussion of plans, but nothing definite was decided upon. The committee adjourned to meet subject to the call of the chairman.

HEAVENLY REST CHURCH MEN'S CLUB IS FORMED

In connection with a smoker and entertainment held in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, last night, a men's association was formed under the direction of the rector, Rev. Charles Townsend, with a membership of twenty-eight. Much interest was shown.

The organization was effected by the election of these officers and committees:

President, ex-officio, Rev. Charles Townsend; president, Harry B. Suydam; secretary, W. J. Ochiltree, treasurer, John B. Forster; entertainment committee, J. M. Hull, chairman; L. M. Leek, P. J. Mauger, R. A. Larmour, G. T. Dunham; house committee, E. E. Brown, chairman; Fred Harris and Paul Johnson.

It was voted to hold regular meetings on the second and fourth Thursday in each month in the parish house. There were about forty men present at the smoker and one of the features of the evening was a fine musical program by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan's orchestra of seven pieces. Refreshments were served and a social hour was enjoyed.

IROQUOIS CHEF PROVIDES FINE SEA-FOOD DINNER.

A complimentary sea-food dinner was given at the Hotel Iroquois, last night, by Chef Louis Morris, for a number of his friends. Mr. Morris was formerly a member of the Perth Amboy Common Council and recently took charge of the restaurant at the Iroquois. Covers were laid for nineteen and a fine menu was provided. Robert Newton Crane was the toastmaster, and after the feast a number of speeches were made.

John Moore a Local Visitor.

John Moore, a former well known resident of Plainfield, now living in Newark, is spending a few days with friends in town. Mr. Moore's father, the late William Moore, was at one time the owner of the Iroquois hotel and the Marsh building at Park avenue and Second street.

Specimens of New Stamp Issue.

State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman has obtained several specimens of the new issue of one, two and five cent postage stamps, and they have been much admired by those who have seen them. They will be put on sale within a short time.

In the City Court.

Charles Hawkins, colored, arrested yesterday for helpless intoxication on Somerset street, was given his choice of $8 or twenty days in the city court this morning. He will eat Christmas dinner with Warden Dodd.

MISS URSULA AUTEN BRIDE OF LEWIS SAUMS

Miss Ursula Auten, daughter of Mrs. Ursula Auten, of West Fifth street, and Lewis Saums, also of this city, were quietly married Wednesday morning. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck at his home on West Front street and was witnessed only by immediate relatives. There were no attendants.

Miss Auten wore a navy blue traveling suit with hat to match. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Saums left for a wedding trip that will include Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. On returning they will make their home on West Fifth street.

Mr. Saums is a carpenter by trade and enjoys a wide local acquaintance. His bride is a member of Trinity Reformed church and Sunday-school and is equally well known.

SOMERSET TAX BOARD IS IN SESSION TODAY

The Somerset Board for the Equalization of Taxes is in session at the Washingtonville hotel this afternoon hearing taxpayers of North Plainfield township who desire their assessments reduced. The board will meet again next week at Somerville, where it held an interesting session on Monday.

Clarence Case, as counsel to the Township Committee, appeared before the board on Monday at Somerville and stated that he held in his hands a batch of taxpayers' appeals into the merits of which he did not propose to examine, as he had neither the time nor inclination, but would submit them as a whole to the board for their consideration. But he wished to state however, that he believed that a majority of them were based on very flimsey pretexes, or excuses of a frivulous nature, in order that they might avoid paying their just taxes. And he further proceeded to admonish the board that unles they did their duty and collected all taxes as they were originally assessed the county was liable to become bankrupt and unable to pay its bills, and earnestly requested therefore that no reductions be made.

Former Mayor N. B. Smalley replied that the Tax Board understood its duties and that Mr. Case's remarks would have no influence or bearing on his action in the discharge of his duties. The taxpayer who paid the bills, in his estimation, was entitled to first considerations, and not the county officials who simply spent the money. They were merely the county's servants and if they did not have so much money to spend they must get along with less like the taxpayers had to.

WATCHUNG HUNT CLUB ENJOYS MUSHROOM DINNER.

Members of the Watchung Hunt Club and their wives enjoyed a mushroom dinner at the clubhouse, last night, prepared and served by Henri Pedefious. The menu was excellent. It was the first time that he has been persuaded to leave his hotel in the mountain and the club considered itself fortunate in being able to secure his services.

There were about thirty guests, among those present with guests being Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Righter, Mr and Mrs. W. B. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Butler, Mr. and Mrs. W. deLaR. Anderson. After the dinner bridge whist and dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

Will Hold One-day Kennel Show.

Although the plans are not fully matured yet, sufficient is known to assure Plainfield of an annual one-day open-air dog show. It is proposed to hold the bench exhibition either immediately following or just preceding the annual horse show at the horse show grounds. The chances are strongly in favor of holding the event just after the horse show and the club feels sure that entries from all parts of the Metropolitan district, including Long Island, will be attracted here. Suitable prizes will be offered in the various classes.

Big Demand for Stamps.

The first supply of Red Cross stamps received by L. W. Randolph, of West Front street, having been exhausted, another lot was received yesterday. The proceeds from the sale of these stamps go into a fund to fight the "white plague" and the people of Plainfield are showing much interest in the movement to battle against tuberculosis.

Mrs. John Manley, of Park avenue, is convalescing from an illness that has detained her at home for several days.

GOOD FRIDAY INNOVATION

Local Ministers' Association Takes Early Action Departing from Usual Program.

ORATORIO TO BE FEATURE.

To Dispense With Sermonettes on "The Seven Words from the Cross"—As to Religious Census.

At the monthly meeting of the Plainfield Ministers' Association in the parish house of Grace church, yesterday, there was a general discussion regarding the character of the Good Friday service to be held during holy week, and it was finally decided that instead of following the usual program of addresses on the "Seven Words of the Cross," which has been the custom for many years to hold a musical service and plan for the rendition of an appropriate oratorio by a chorus choir, comprising a selection of the best singers from the various churches, the program to be under the direction of a well-known musical leader.

It was also decided to hold the service in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church by which time the new organ will be installed. Rev. Dr. John S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, was named the chairman of committee of arrangements, he to select the other members. The matter was taken up at this meeting so that there would be plenty of time to arrange the details. It was the belief among the members that the change from the customary program would be a welcome one.

The association also received a report from Rev. W. T. Thyrrell, who has been engaged in taking the religious census of the city and borough. This work is about completed and the returns have been placed in charge of a committee comprising Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring and Rev. C. S. Kemble, who will tabulate the same and present the statistics to the association within a short time.

The statistics will show the total number of non-church-goers, the number of people who are members of churches, together with the church preferences of those who are not identified with any religious body. After the final report is presented the names of those not members of churches will be turned over to the pastors of churches according to the preference indicated and then the pastors will immediately take up their work of getting in touch with such persons.

DAUGHTER WILL CARE FOR HOMELESS MOTHER

The aged Italian woman, Mrs. Celistina Broco, has at last found a home and the borough officials feel that their efforts and worry in her behalf have ended and with credit to them for their perseverance. The woman's troubles began several weeks ago when in a fit of anger she hit herself in the head with a broken bottle. She was then living alone at 16 Duer street and was taken to the hospital, where she recovered from the wound, but it was found that she was a chronic invalid. The hospital does not handle cases when they have reached that stage and notified the borough officials to take her away. There was no place to take her, however, where she could be taken care of, and when her son in New York was finally located, he declared he had no place to shelter his mother and refused to provide for her. He was found to be running a barber shop in the Bronx with one small room in the rear, in which he lived.

Just as his mother was about to be forced upon him, a daughter was located at Raritan, and she, though extremely poor, promptly made a place for the old lady, who now is living comfortably and happily in her new home, no more to be tossed about the world, it is hoped.

Michael Walsh.

The funeral service of Michael Walsh, father of Thomas L. Walsh, of East Third street, who died on Wednesday at his home at Hampton Junction, will be held from St. Ann's church, Hampton Junction, tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. Mr. Walsh was about seventy-five years of age, and was born in Ireland. He came to this country when a young man of fifteen years and for sixty years resided at Hampton Junction, where he was a successful tea merchant. He retired about seventeen years ago. It was his boast that up to seven days ago when taken down with pneumonia, that he had never had a sick day. He was highly respected by all who knew him. He is survived by a wife and four sons.

BAERMAN INJURED STEPPING FROM CAR

In alighting from a street car in New York late yesterday afternoon, F. D. Baerman, of Dunellen, was thrown and received cuts and bruises about the upper part of the body and head. He was assisted to a nearby drug store, where he obtained temporary treatment and was then able to return home. As he was getting off the train at Dunellen, he collapsed and fainted away. He was removed to his home in a cerriage, where he is now under the care of a physician. His condition is not serious.

Mr. Baerman is a chicken fancier and conducts a large chicken farm near Greenbrook. He is about fifty-five years of age and very stout. In explaining the accident, he said that he had signalled the conductor to stop and before he could step off the car it started and threw him into the street.

DR. RICHARD MOLDENKE IS HURT IN A RUNAWAY

Frightened by a passing train, a spirited horse driven by Dr. Richard Moldenke, of Watchung, became unmanageable at Watchung avenue and East Third street, this morning, and before the animal could be gotten under control he upset the buckboard in which the doctor and his hired man were riding and the former was thrown a distance of ten feet into the roadway on Watchung avenue, striking his head on the trolley tracks. At the same time part of the wagon passed over his legs. The hired man quickly regained his feet and caught the horse before he had a chance to get away.

Several passersby ran to the assistance of the doctor and he was taken to Cadmus Brothers' drug store, where Dr. M. B. Long was summoned. A hurried examination showed that apparently no bones were broken and that the doctor was suffering mostly from bruises and shock. At his suggestion he was taken to his home in the ambulance, Dr. Long accompanying him. Dr. Moldenke's condition is not serious and he will only be detained at home a short time.

Dr. Moldenke was on his way to the North Avenue Station to take a train for New York when the accident happened. He drove through East Third street toward Watchung avenue. The sudden passing of the train over the Watchung avenue bridge frightened the horse just as he was turning into the avenue and this together with the slippery condition of the street, resulted in the upset of the buckboard. The damage to the rig was slight, and Dr. Moldenke's man escaped injury.

GIRLS CARRY SAMPLES FOR SISTERS OF MERCY SALE.

The Sisters of Mercy of Mount St. Mary's College, are simplifying the task of selecting Christmas presents, for those purchasers who are looking for hand made fancy articles by sending out young women to call at homes in the city with samples.

An exhibition of the work, all done by the sisters, is being conducted at 13 Manning avenue, where everybody is welcome to call and inspect it. There are beautiful tapestries, hand painted china, doilies, large and small table centre pieces, and fine needlework.

The sale will continue at this address until after Christmas. The Sisters announce that anyone wishing one of the young women to call at the house with samples, should make the request by 'phone, No. 718-J.

Played Progressive Games.

Under the auspices of the Young People's Association of the First Baptist church, a social was held in the lecture room of the church, last night. The evening was spent playing progressive games of all kinds, after which ice cream and cake were served. Harold Robins was chairman of the entertainment committee, while Miss Bessie Flanders was chairman of the refreshment committee, assisted by several members of the society.

Panhandlers Arrested.

Frank Stewart and John Murphy, hailing from Philadelphia, were arraigned in the city court this morning, on a charge of vagrancy preferred by Detective-Sergeant Flynn. The officer caught them panhandling on Watchung avenue, early last night. They told hard luck stories that had the ring of truth and Judge Runyon let them go on suspended sentence.

WEATHER INDICATIONS.

Rain this afternoon; generally fair tonight and Saturday; colder. Max., 49; min., 29.

RICH BOOKINGS FOR THE LOCAL THEATRE

Manager W. J. Counihan has obtained some of the choicest bookings for the New Plainfield theatre and from now on until the close of the season the local public will have no cause to complain that they are not getting the best attractions on the road. Tonight, Richard Carle will be seen in "Mary's Lamb," and tomorrow afternoon and night Arnold Daly will appear in "The Pickpockets."

For Christmas day, "The Ninety and Nine" will be seen here. George M. Cohan's "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" will be the performance on New Year's eve, and on New Year's day Digby Bell will be presented. May Robson will follow the next day in "The Rejuvenation of "Aunt Mary." On January 4, Robert Edeson in "The Call of the North," and on January 5, Annie Russell in "The Stronger Sex" will be produced. "Polly of the Circus" is coming on January 9. Other good shows to follow include Al G. Fields' minstrels; Victor Moore in "The Talk of New York; Edward Abeles in "Brewster's Millions;" Grace Van Studdiford in "The Golden Butterfly;" Rose Stahl in "The Chorus Lady; "The Old Homestead; "In Old Kentucky;" Yorke and Adams; Geo. M. Cohan in "The Yankee Prince;" Marie Cahill; George Evans and His Honeyboy Minstrels; William Collier; Fred Niblo with his great series of lectures; William Hodge in "The Man from Home;" Eddie Foy in "Mr. Hamlet of Broadway;" Blanche Walsh; The Third Degree; "The Three Twins."

TRUTHFUL WITNESS SURPRISES COMPLAINANT

John Cronin, a man past sixty years of age, appeared in the city court, this morning, as complainant against James Ennis, a youth of twenty, who he charged with committing a brutal assault upon him during which he attempted to use a knife. The defendant asserted that he had been glad to escape with his life and showed marks on his face and hands to verify his statement as to rough treatment. When he had finished speaking Judge Runyon asked if he had any witnesses and he pointed to Mrs. Margaret Hensey, seated among the spectators, as one who saw the whole affair.

"She's a nice, good lady, Your Honor," said Cronin; "and she'll tell you the truth about the way I was abused. She's a fine lady; yes, she is, Your Honor."

Mrs. Hensey told the truth as predicted but it gave Cronin an awful shock. She declared the complainant had first attacked Ennis without provocation and had taken the knife from his own pocket to cut the boy. When Ennis wrested it from him he grabbed up a bread knife to renew the attack and was then knocked down in self defense.

"That's not so, Your Honor," Cronin called out; "the truth of this matter has not been told you; the boy has a spite against me and tried to kill me once before."

"I think Mrs. Hensey has told the truth," Judge Runyon remarked; "at any rate you gave her such a good recommendation I'd be tempted to believe her if she wasn't. It seems to me you were to blame and I'll fine you $50 but suspend sentence as long as you behave yourself. Ennis is discharged."

"Mrs. Hensey is a fine lady," Cronin commented as he went out; "but the truth has not been told."

MORRIS FARBMAN PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO CHARGE.

Morris Farbman, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel, was arraigned before Judge Schenck in the Somerset county court, this morning, on the charge of maintaining a disorderly house. Through his counsel, William G. De Meza, Farbman entered a plea of not guilty, and he was held in $500 bail for trial, which was set down for January 11. Bail was furnished by Charles Jensen, of North Plainfield.

Tree for the Children.

The Board of Managers of the Children's Home has received a large Christmas tree for the annual celebration as a result of the appeal made in The Daily Press. At the same time a check for $5 was also sent to the board. According to the annual custom, the women in charge of the Home make an appeal to the people of Plainfield to contribute useful articles for the children, such as underwear, gloves, boots, shoes, stockings, caps, etc., and all such contributions will be gratefully received.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis K. Hyde, of "Oakmont," are parents of a son born to them on Tuesday.

THREE TRACKMEN KILLED

Victims All Residents of Dunellen Meet Death After Midnight at Cranford.

ON JERSEY CENTRAL TRACKS.

Shifting Engine Fatally Strikes Snow Shovelling Gang—Bodies at Cole's Viewed by County Physician.

A Jersey Central drill engine, shifting cars at the Cranford yards just east of the station, at 1 o'clock this morning, backed down upon a gang of trackmen clearing snow from the switches and knocked three of them beneath the wheels. They were either killed outright or lived but a few minutes afterward, as their bodies were badly mangled. The victims were all residents of Dunellen, as follows:

John Simons, 28 years old, lived on Washington avenue, where he leaves a wife and two children.

Vincent Solan, 30 years old; lived on North avenue; leaves wife and children in Poland.

Joseph Helick; 40 years old; lived on South avenue; leaves wife and children in Poland.

The engine had been working about the yards all the time the men were busy opening the switches and the crew did not notice them shift to the tracks where the cars were being shunted. They were bending over their task totally unconscious of their danger until the tender struck the first victim. His cry was heard by some of the others in time to jump to safety but two others were too near to escape. The engine passed completely over the three men before it was brought to a stop.

The three bodies were removed to the Cranford freight house and were brought to Cole's undertaking rooms in this city later in the morning. The county physician viewed them at noon and granted a burial permit, it being established that the fatality was purely accidental.

The three men had been residents of Dunellen for several years and were formerly employed at the Dunellen stone quarry. They were laid off at the approach of the winter season and went to work for the railroad.

MRS. WELSH HURT.

Coal Hole Cover Tips and Her Leg is Scraped.

Mrs. F. G. Welsh, of McKinley place, met with an accident this morning, while passing the Hotel Kensington on North avenue. The walk was covered with ice and snow hiding a coal hole cover. As she stepped on the edge of the cover the piece of iron tipped up with the weight of the woman's body and her foot went into the hole. Her right leg was scraped and bruised almost to the knee.

D. W. Littell ran to the woman's assistance and helped her to extricate her foot from the hole. She insisted on walking home, but on getting as far as Watchung avenue, found it necessary to take a trolley car. The foot and leg were considerably swollen.

Firemen's Fair Tonight.

A straw ride party will leave the corner of Front street and Park avenue tonight at 8 o'clock, bound for the firemen's ball at South Plainfield. The indications are that it will be the biggest dance ever held in that suburb. Supper will be served at 12 o'clock. The committees: Floor, John L. McDonough, Harry Winters, Jr.; refreshments, Robert Horn, Sr., David Bigley; hat check, Edward Horn; supper, William Hamilton, Frank E. Faulks, Harry J. Manning; wheel of fortune, P. F. Kaine, Frank Greski; door, Peter J. McDonough.

Hemorrhages Prove Fatal.

Miss Katina Retonian, a servant girl in the employ of Hiram E. Woodruff, of Westervelt avenue, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital early last night, suffering with acute hemorrhages. The case was a severe one and the girl died early this morning. She was twenty years old and was formerly in the employ of E. Y. Neighfor, of Manning avenue.

Being Treated at the Hospital.

Thomas Leech, of 341 Watchung avenue, who was kicked in the head by a horse two weeks ago, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, last night, for treatment. His condition is not serious, but the attending physician, Dr. Albert Pittis, advised his going to the hospital, where he could have the advantage of trained nursing.

Literary Night at St. Mary's.

The weekly literary exercises at Mount St. Mary's College will be held tonight. The teachers and pupils will take part in the entertainment, which is called "A Night with Scott."

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

An investigating committee which had been selected by the Township Board of Education to probe charges made against Miss Beers, a teacher in the East Bound Brook school, reported at the board meeting Tuesday night that while there was much evidence to show that she had been unnecessarily severe in discipling the pupils and had also been antagonistic to the principal and supervising principal, no parent could be induced to make a formal complaint. It was decided that the teacher should be notified that unless she conformed to the wishes of her superiors her position would be declared vacant.

HOMESICK GIRL A SUICIDE.

Sends Letter to Father in Boston, Then Drinks Acid in Jersey City.

Dora Simon, fifteen years old, whose home was in Boston, committed suicide yesterday at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Stamm, at No. 200 Washington street, Jersey City, by drinking carbolic acid.

The girl sent a long letter to her father in Boston before she took the poison. The only reason Mrs. Stamm can assign for her niece's act is that she was homesick.

P. S. C. Gives Streetcar Statistics.

The statistics submitted by the Public Service Railway Company, which controls all the streetcar lines in Hudson County, to the Jersey City Board of Trade show that in proportion to the population the average number of rides per capita during the year 1907 was 339, which exceeds the average of the New York city riders for the same year—317. The table submitted by the company for the last year gives the following totals: Number of lines in the county, 16; mileage per round trip, 145.40; number of cars assigned, 316; average number of daily trips, 3,041; number of passengers carried, 84,210,861.

Herron to Die in January.

Justice Bergen has signed an order fixing the date of the electrocution of Archibald Herron, of Metuchen, for the week beginning January 25. The order was filed at the county clerk's office this afternoon. Herron's appeal was recently confirmed by the Court of Errors. He shot and killed Rev. S. B. D. Prickitt on July 15 last. C. T. Cowenhoven, counsel for the man, says that he will apply for another trial for the man to determine his sanity. He predicts that Herron will never sit in the electric chair.

Lockjaw Fatal to Newark Boy.

Louis Lindner, fourteen years old, who was removed from his home, No. 160 Charlton street, Newark, to the City Hospital there, suffering with tetanus, died last night. The boy was admitted to the hospital on Wednesday after running a rusty nail in his right foot. The injury seemed slight, and little attention was paid to it until he became violently ill. An operation was performed at the hospital, and evidence of a foreign substance was found in the wound. The boy's jaws became rigid soon afterward.

C. S. Commissioners in Pittsburg.

Civil Service Commissioners Dr. Willis Fletcher Johnson, Charles Bateman and Colonel Milliken, accompanied by Secretary Colby and Chief Examiner Frank B. Jess, left Newark for Pittsburg last night to take part in the annual meeting of the National Civil Service League. Commissioner Keeney went to Pittsburg a day ahead of the other commissioners, so as to be present at all the sessions of the league.

Girls Strike for 5-cent Raise.

Refusal to grant an increase of 5 cents a week caused a strike yesterday among about two hundred girls employed by Ackerman Brothers, silk manufacturers at Paterson. The wages were reduced recently, but a promise was made that, beginning with this month, the wages would be fixed at $6.10 until busines improved. The girls have been receiving only $6.05.

A Patent Fact.

"Why did you lead me to believe that pretty woman was a widow?"

"I didn't."

"You said she was the wife of the late Mr. Smith."

"Well, he's never early."—Washington Post.

Holiday Overcoat

OR SUIT ?

Perhaps you've delayed getting a new Winter Overcoat. But don't do it any longer. There's plenty good old fashion Winter weather coming, beside it pays to look prosperous.

No man or young man who is particular about his personal appearance can afford to go over the Christmas Holidays with an Overcoat that has seen better days, or a suit either.

The M. & B. Overcoat provision is unusually inviting this season. We are showing more exclusive patterns than ever before. Here are models that appeal to conservative men, as well as for young men who demand garments of the most striking individuality.

Men who are thinking of a Fur Garment will find their wants anticipated here at a lower price than they would naturally expect to pay for such exceptionally high qualities,

Holed Out and Pulled the Hole In After Them.

Up to about 1869 the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky was widely advertised by its owner. But the owner died that year and left the cave to thirteen heirs scattered over the country. The lucky thirteen devoted themselves to dreams of spending the big income which the cave had been earning for many years because it had been advertised. But they forgot to keep up the advertising.

Now the cave is visited by comparatively few persons instead of by many thousands annually, as in the days when it was advertised.

But the great cave conveys a lesson to every business man. If you quit advertising, your place will be ignored by the public even more than Mammoth Cave is ignored, because you are not even a natural curiosity.

See the point?

The Children's Room.

So much importance is attached to the playroom now that it is with interest one watches the gradual development of this apartment. One woman wisely had the playroom made like a conservatory, so that it could be flooded with sunshine from all sides and shaded when desired with curtains. Who but a mother would think of anything so convenient and, above all, so hygienic? If a child must play indoors it is a good idea to have an abundance of health-giving sunshine. Children are happiest when playing in a light airy room. One can select a plain furniture, but it should be substantial.

Negative Notoriety.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Hit by a falling block, Clarence Ferrell, of Gibbstown, had an arm broken in two places.

Constable and Mrs. John L. Drummer, of Wenonah, have both been confined to the house with pneumonia, but are now recovering.

William Crattiger, who tried to sell postage stamps at reduced rates, was sent to jail in Paterson yesterday for thirty days, during which time the police will investigate his record.

Two slight stab wounds, one on the breast and the other on the arm, were suffered by John Jackson yesterday when he argued with Lester Hopkins and an unidentified man at 46 Ann street, Paterson.

The new home of the Bayonne City Republican Club, a stone and brick building at Broadway and Twenty-ninth street, which cost about $50,000, was formerly opened last evening with a reception and dance.

If this mild weather continues Charles Myres, of Paulsboro, may have fresh strawberries to top off his Christmas or New Year's dinner. His patch, without any attention whatever, is in full bloom, and on some vines berries have formed.

Magistrate Charles P. Smith, of Burlington, says all moving picture films presented before audiences in New Jersey should first pass inspection of a State commissioner, and a bill embodying this idea is to be presented to the Legislature.

I. L. Cranmer, an Atlantic City fish merchant, set at rest any fears as to his welfare by returning from a gunning trip up the bay safe and sound. Reports had been started, to the effect that the man's boat had been found adrift, and that he was probably drowned.

Jumping a fence at Lawnside yesterday, Frank Williams, colored, sixteen years old, was so badly shot in the right hand by the accidental discharge of a gun that the member had to be amputated at Cooper Hospital. He was on a gunning trip at the time of the accident.

At a meeting of Woodbury Council Tuesday night a bill of $28 was presented by Mrs. J. M. T. Sitley for twenty-eight chickens killed by dogs the night before. The bill was ordered paid, but later reconsidered on the ground that the dog tax in Woodbury is not used for this purpose, but goes into the general fund.

Mercer county was made defendant yesterday in a $30,000 suit instituted by the Rocky Hill Construction Company for the recovery of money for road building several years ago. The money has been tied up because of a business dispute between the present officers and Chas. B. Walton, a former member of the corporation.

His front teeth knocked out when he was kicked by a vicious horse, Harry Whitmeyer, a young farmer, had a narrow escape from death in a Burlington blacksmith's shop. Whitmeyer had taken the horse to be shod for the first time. The blacksmith was fitting a shoe when the animal let fly with both hind feet, bowling over the mechanic and Whitmeyer.

Joseph Burke, a boy, was standing at Market and Atlantic streets, Gloucester, Tuesday evening, when he was savagely attacked by a collie dog that accompanied a woman. When Mayor Lincoln saw the wound on the leg, after it was cauterized by Dr. Bennett yesterday, he ordered Policeman Mulholland to kill the dog, which is said to be one of a troupe of trained animals.

NEW YORK POULTRY SHOW.

Opening at Madison Square Garden on Tuesday, December 29th, and closing on Saturday, January 2, the New York Poultry, Pigeon and Pet Stock Association will add another success to its already notable record by its Twentieth Annual Exhibition, for which the entries will close with Secretary H. V. Crawford, Montclair, N. J., on December 14.

It has a national reputation, and with its competition open to the world, its importance is recognized by many foreign entries, and the comparison with native bred birds is honestly made by careful judges.

No better show is given in this country than that which comes each year, with increasing demands for space, and fills the Garden with its splendid poultry, its vast array of pigeons, its superb showing of pet stock, and with every appurtenance to poultry raising as evidence of the contrast between the modern and the old time methods.

It is a show that the public likes to see, and the public's appreciation is an incentive to its exhibitors and its managers.

The Atlantic Cat Club has its seventh championship cat show for three days, December 30, 31, and January 1, for which entries will close December 18 with Miss D. B. Champion, West New Brighton, Staten Island.

There is certainly enough to see, with the poultry, pigeons, pet stock and cats, and each year the public anticipation is fulfilled.

Mrs. Jawback—Do you know I came very near not marrying you?

Mr. Jawback—Sure—but who told you about it?—Cleveland Leader.

AGED MAN SHOT AND ROBBED NEAR NEW BRUNSWICK.

Thomas Collins, eighty years old, was shot by a stranger at his home, between Old Bridge and South River, Wednesday afternoon, and is now in St. Peter's Hospital, New Brunswick, in a serious condition.

Collins was sitting in his kitchen when a man wearing a mack entered and fired a shot at him from a revolver. The bullet struck the old man on the lift side of the face and lodged in the jaw. Collins' housekeeper, Mrs. Prall, who was in the yard, heard the shot, and on running into the house found Collins on the floor. His assailant escaped.

Collins had just drawn $300 from a bank with which to pay taxes, and this was taken by the stranger. Detective Hoffman, of New Brunswick, went to Collins' home yesterday. He says he learned that a stranger had been loitering in the vicinity of the Collins house for several days. An effort will be made today to extract the bullet from Collins' jaw.

DR. VANCE RECEIVES ATLANTA DELEGATION

The Rev. Dr. James I. Vance, pastor of the North Reformed church, Newark, who was recently called to the pastorate of the Central Presbyterian church, Atlanta, Ga., the largest church of the Southern Presbyterian denomination, received a visit yesterday afternoon from four officers of the Atlanta church. They journeyed all the way North to present the wish of that congregation to the Newark minister.

It has been learned that the salary offered by the Atlanta church is smaller than Dr. Vance gets in Newark. In Newark he receives $7,500 a year and a parsonage at No. 27 Washington street, in the most fashionable section of the city. Dr Vance says it is not a question of money. He said last night that never had he received such a pressing and persistant call.

In addition to individual letters, he has received resolutions from the Ministers' Association of Atlanta, official papers from the First and Northern Avenue sessions, Atlanta, all urging him to come South. The Atlanta church will provide and furnish a manse for him anywhere in the city that he cares to locate. Central church is located in Washington street, just opposite the capitol building of Georgia.

Just when he will reach a decision Dr. Vance says he does not know. The North church, Newark, which has sixteen hundred members and is the largest of its denomination, has passed resolutions asking their pastor to stay.

Dr. Vance has been sought from many quarters. Three Chicago churches made overtures to him not long ago. To all he has answered that he was satisfied to remain in Newark.

LEGISLATURE MAY REFORM JURY LAW

Governor Fort believes that the darwing of juries should be taken out of politics, and while many people agree with him heartily there is a sentiment throughout the State and among the legislators for the adoption of a plan to abolish political influence with juries without adding more expense to the State.

There is already on the statute books a law recommended by and signed by Governor E. C. Stokes, which has worked paftial jury reform, that statute being the one which allows the judge to strike from a panel of jurors drawn by the sheriff any name he desires. He may even strike out all of the names and keep the sheriff busy for weeks drawing othed panels until he is satisfied with the members.

There is likely to be some opposition among the legislators to a believed proposition of Governor Fort to put on the statute books a law making appointive by the governor three commissioners in each county, under suitable salary, to draw grand and petit jurors.

The other part of this proposition appeared in the Legislature last winter, and was urged by the Stokes forces. It put on the judge of the county the duty of preparing an eligible list of grand jurors from which the sheriff had to actually draw the required twenty-four grand jurors. This measure was a supplement to the petit jurors statute and was recommended in the messages of Governor Stokes. It failed last winter of passage because in the last hours of the Legislature it mysteriously disappeared and the Democrats have been charged with making way with it.

The power given to the county judge to make the eligible lists of grand jurors, outside of which the sheriff maynot draw, would take the drawing of grand jurors out of politics, and the machinery thus provided would not be of any epense to the taxpayers.

Because of these things the legislators are inclined to favor the Stokes proposition rather than make berths for three commissioners of jurors in each of twenty-one counties, all drawing salaries.

The commission plan was tried prior to 1888 and proved unsatisfactory with governors appointing the members.

MR. TULP'S RESIGNATION IS ACCEPTED BY CHURCH.

The consistory of the New York Avenue Reformed church, Newark, has accepted the resignation of Rev. A. Peter Tulp as pastor. At a special meeting of the Newark Classis to be held in the North Refromed church, Newark, tomorrow afternoon formal application will be made for the dissolution of the pastoral relations. It will also mark Mr. Tulp's withdrawal from the denomination, he having decided to tenter the Protestant Episcopal ministry.

GIVE ATTENTION TO THE WRITING DESK.

The writing desk is a very fair index of your character. Therefore, beware.

Nothing is more untidy than an indiscriminate mess of writing utensils loose on the desk. One of the little boxes divided into three sections to hold stamps, elastics and pens is useful in preserving neatness.

Buying stamps in the books sold by the government is better than any other way of keeping them. There is no possibility of them getting lost or sticky and the book can lie on the blotter just beside the penholder. If a dollar's worth of stamps are bought at once, 3 cents are saved on the price of these books, as they cost a cent whether containing twelve or forty nine stamps.

If a large blotter is used do not blot the letters on it, as it makes the desk look slovenly to see it heavily blurred with ink. One of the small roller blotters is convenient, as it always on hand when wanted.

Do not cram pigeonholes in a desk. It may look important, but is far from neat. With ordinary attention to one's correspondence the bulging compartments that are seen in many desks are quite unnecessary.

If possible, have one day each week that you devote to your correspondence as a whole. Thus you will not be hounded with the thought of unanswered letters days and nights Moreover, your living-room or bedroom will benefit in neatness by the regularity.

A Queer Harvest.

It was little Ethel's first visit to church and the sermon had for its text, "As ye sow, so shall ye reap." But on her return home she could not remember it, and in consequence was chided by her mother for being stupid.

A fortnight later a seamstress came to the house to do a day's work. After watching her for a while fashion old-style garments into those that were the vogue, Ethel suddenly exclaimed:

"O, mamma, I know now what the preacher said. It was, 'What you sew in the winter you shall rip in the summer.'"—New York Times.

A Practical Movement.

"George," spoke his better half, "you are interested in the temperance movements, are you not?"

"Why, certainly I am," he answered.

"Well, suppose you go out and make a few of them with the pump handle. I am in need of a pail of water right away."—Bohemian.

SENATOR P. C. KNOX TO HEAD TAFT CABINET

Philander C. Knox, United States Senator from Pennsylvania and former Attorney-General of the United States, has been asked by William H. Taft to become Secretary of State in Mr. Taft's Cabinet, and he has consented to serve. Mr. Knox's acceptance was given somewhat reluctantly, as he believed that his abilities could be utilized better in the national legislature than in the executive government.

It is realized by those who are acquainted with the circumstances that Mr. Knox, in agreeing to take the foreign affairs portfolio, is making a great sacrifice of personal inclination. His term in the Senate will expire in March, 1911.

Among the comparatively few who know of Mr. Taft's offer and Mr. Knox's decision much gratification is expressed that Mr. Taft is showing a disposition to form a strong abinet. It is understood that he has picked out big men for other Cabinet positions, and is hopeful of getting them to serve. The Attorney-Generalship is one of the places which is already tentatively filled. Frank B. Kellogg, of Minnesota, who has been mentioned prominently for this office, has not been asked to enter the Cabinet.

Several other names have been mentioned in the gossip about the Attorney-Generalship. There are hints that it will go to Henry M. Hoyt, who, like Senator Knox, is a Pennsylvania man. Mr. Hoyt is now solicitor-general of the United States. He was a classmate of Mr. Taft's at Yale.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM CHIEFS TO HEAR COLBY.

The twenty-eighth annual convention of the National Civil service Reform League convened in ittsburg yesterday. The meetings will continue until tomorrow afternoon.

Many subjects of vital importance to the civil service movement througout the United States will be discussed by prominent men. Among the well known persons who will take part in the convention are Joseph H. Choate, former Ambassador to England, and president of the organization; Charles J. Bonaparte, Attorney-General of the United States; Richard Henry Dana, Boston; Elliott H. Goodwin, New York; Senator Everett Colby, New Jersey, and Samuel W. McCall, of Massachusetts.

A Delicious Candy.

"Nut chocolate caramels are a rich delicious confection, immensely popular," says Fannie Merritt Farmee. "Put three and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan, and when melted add two cupfuls of molasses, one cupful of brown sugar and one-half cupful of milk. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, bring to the boiling point, add four and one-half squares of unsweetened chocolate, and stir constantly until the chocolate is melted. Let boil until when tried in cold water a firm ball may be formed in the fingers. Remove from the range, add one and one-half teaspoons of vanilla and one-half pound of almonds, blanched and chopped. Turn into a buttered pan, cool and cut in small squares."

Cleaning Jewels.

Small articles of jewelry, especially the silver kind, will be difficult to clean in the hands of an inexperienced person, since dull silver is more difficult to restore to its former beauty than gold. The best method is to immerse the brooch, ring or pin in a solution of cyanide of potash, procurable at any drug store. Do not let the liquid touch the fingers. Let remain in the liquid for two minutes, remove and wash in hot soapsuds. This will be sufficient to restore the brilliancy of the metal. The best method of cleanchain bracelets or necklaces of gold is to make a paste of ammonia and whiting and rub this into the tiny links with a soft brush, afterward wash the pieces in soft water and polish with a chamois.

Judge Provides Bail for Chauffeur.

Peter Franz, a negro employed on a farm near Stelton, was run over by Frederick Dudley, chauffeur for Charles Freick, of High street, Newark, in Highland Park Wednesday night. Dudley says he tried to stop the automobile, but one wheel ran over the man. At Wells Hospital it was found that Franz was suffering from concussion of the brain. Judge Booraem held Dudley in $1,500 bail, given by Judge Herr, of Newark.

Velvet is Popular.

Every season, before far advanced brings forth its velvet gowns, in spite of protest.

All the newest velvets for the winter season are characterized by that peculiarly soft and supple texture which is inseparable from the cloths and satns, and, in fact, from all the materials which will be used for afternoon frocks of the smarter sort.

Pretty Trimmings.

Soutache and other braids figure prominently in the trimmings of the handsome velvet coat and skirt costumes, and stunning passementerie ornaments, buttons, etc., are introduced with the braiding.

NEW CLOTHES ORDERED FOR SECOND REGIMENT

At a meeting of the State Military Board yesterday at Trenton the matter of clothing the New Jersey National Guard in olive drab instead of the old blue uniforms came up and the board authorized the change from the blue to the olive drab made for the guards as fast as the national appropriation at the command of the State would permit.

As Colonel Nelson Y. Dungan brought the matter up, claiming that the late campaign at Perth Amboy almost destroyed the uniforms of his men, the Second Regiment will be the first one equipped in olive drab.

The board gave permission to the officers of the First Regiment to open their armory in Newark for an automobile show. The board cautioned the officers that the show must be held under their auspices. The exhibition will take place in January.

The bills of the late Perth Amboy riots were discussed and the order of Governor Fort as commander-in-chief of the forces of the State calling out troops were ordered filed so that the comptroller can draw warrants for the expenses. The soldiers have already been paid.

THE NEWEST IDEAS IN THE FASHION WORLD

A model of the new cutaway type, made of cloth, has a rolling collar, wide reverse and cuffs of fox fur.

An elaborate dinner gown is made of black satin, trimmed with immensely wide black soutached bands, and a yoke and sleeve arrangement of chiffon, with black sequin ornaments.

Muffs match the hats in size—therefore are quite large.

French and English coats are furtrimmed. The furs mostly used by tailors to apply directly to coat material are marten, seal, coon, mink, swansdown and chinchilla.

Evening dresses of gray chiffon have lavender or wisteria filet trimmings with the same color of flanet embroidery.

One of the newest ideas in fashionable dressmaking is to have the skirt of broadcloth and the packet made of the same color in corduroy and trimmed with very small velvet buttons.

The advantage of using ribbon fringe made from the narrowest ribbon obtainable, is this: It does not tangle like silk fringe and always looks fresh and pretty. It is made with very deep, openwork top, also very ornamental.

Forcing the Bulbs.

If you are very anxious to force bulbs into bloom at a very early period, then try this method, which is thoroughly satisfactory: Get a wooden box of any desired size, and about six inches deep. Place the bulbs low in the dirt, and cover loosely. Wet the soil with tepid water, and set the box on the closed register or radiator. At times the flowers must be carried to a sunny window to get healthy green color, and the heat must not be noticeable at the register or radiator, but just enough to keep the earth from being chilly. This will make flowers flourish in a few weeks. Yellow Easter lilies can be forced in a few weeks, also white jonquils.

Afraid It Would Be Missed.

Tommy learned to swim in Huckins' Cove, an arm of the sea. Consequently, when he twent, at his father's invitation, to the swimming pool of his father's city club he felt cramped somehow and afraid of getting in the way.

After a while that feeling wore off. He began splashing about and doing a few tricks that he thought his father might not know. Suddenly his head and shoulders emerged from the water.

"Oh, daddy," he said, in an anxious whisper, "I've swallowed some of the water! Do you think they'll mind?"—Youth's Companion.

That Midnight Ride.

The iconoclasts are now trying to demolish Paul Revere's midnight ride. They will not succeed. Longfellow immortalized Paul Revere, and he will stay among the immortals when all the iconoclasts are forgotten. But suppose he had lived nowadays! Imagine a deathless lyric beginning:

Listen, my children and you shall hear
The midnight honk of the "mobileer."—Albany Argus.

A Criticism.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, the government's famous food expert, was talking at Mackinac Island about impure whiskies.

"I once saw an old Kentuckian," said Dr. Wiley, "take up a glass of whiskey, sniff it, set it down and shake his head sadly.

"'One thing,' he said, 'was never seen coming through the rye, and that's the kind of whiskey they send us nowadays.'"—Washington Star.

The Invincible Britons.

Smith—The British, I observe, rarely make mention of our Revolution.

Jones—No; but I understand they occasionally refer to it as a conflict in which some British colonists defeated a force of Hessians.—Puck.

GEN. J. MADISON DRAKE TELLS OF WAR EXPERIENCES

General J. Madison Drake, of Elizabeth, yesterday afternoon narrated to the members of the Civic Club, in the DeWitt Clinton High School of New York, the story of his leap from a moving train of cars, near Charleston, S. C., in 1864, while a prisoner of war, and held the breathless attention of the students as he told of his thrilling experiences in escaping through South Carolina and North Carolina, to the Union lines in East Tennessee. General Drake delivered his address at the request of the club, tendered through Dr. Frank Bergen Kelly, of Elizabeth, a professor in the school, and superintendent of the City History Club of New York.

General Drake was given a rising vote of thanks by the students, concluding with the college cheer, after which a reception was held and the pupils inspected the general's numerous medals of honor, and the sabre he carried in the war, all of which he had been earnestly requested to bring with him. General Drake accepted an invitation to address the school next June.

Bleaching Muslin.

If you want to bleach unbleached muslin at home place a boilerful of deep blue water on the stove, and, unrolling the muslin, put in and let it come to a steady boil. Remove from the boiler without wringing and hang on line to drip dry in full sunlight.

When dry, iron and depend on the first washing to make it a clear white, or wash again in the ordinary way before using.

A Double Writing Table.

The furniture makers have put out a very good writing desk for a sitting-room. It has an upright centrepiece filled with pigeon-holes on both sides. There is a lid on each side which is large enough to be fitted out with the usual desk implements. Two people can sit at it comfortably without staring into each other's faces, as the centre upright is higher than the head.

For Evening Wear.

A soft gray chiffon is shot with lines of gray, silver and auve. It is made with bretelle straps of chiffon edged with velvet and velvet buttons. The girdle is also of velvet, crushed between two gold buckles.

Grease from Wallpaper.

Grease may be removed from wallpaper, also marble and wood, by rubbing gently with a soft cloth dipped in gasoline. Care must be taken not to use too much gasoline on the paper and spotting it.

The Anvil Chorus Again.

Rollo—She claims she is one of the "Four Hundred."

Tessie—She looks more like one of the fifty-seven.—Princeton Tiger.

Girls.

Girls with pretty necks dislike high collars.

W. J. BRYAN SHOWED THE GREATEST GAIN

Considerable interest and discussion followed the publication yesterday of the official report of votes cast in the recent Presidential election.

The total vote exceeded that of 1904 by 1,341,531.

The greatest gain in the party vote was made by the Democrats, Bryan receiving 1,315,211 more than the total vote cast for Parker, who headed the Democratic ticket in 1904.

President Roosevelt's total vote in 1904 was exceeded 14,190 by Taft.

Eugene V. Debs got 45,368 more votes than were given to the head of the Socialist ticket in 1904.

While the other parties show a decrease, as compared with the preceding Pdesidential election, this report cannot be accepted as final, as the minor party vote in several States may not have been complete. Returns on the Prohibition ticket from a number of States were not received in time to be included.

Mt. Vernon, Ill., Dec. 18.—The claim of Allegheny county, Maryland, that it is entitled to the trick mule of William J. Bryan because of having shown the largest Democratic gain of any county in the country, is disputed by local Democrats. They assert that the Marion county Democratic vote was sixty percentum greater this year than in 1904, Bryan receiving 4,001 votes to Parker's 2,490. Allegheny county claimed the mule because of a gain of twenty-two and a half per cent.

Site the Same; County Changed.

Although St. Paul's Episcopal church, in Rahway, is now in Union county, papers have been filed with County Clerk John H. Conger, of Middlesex county, to bring about a change in the laws of the church. At one time the site of the church was in Middlesex county, and the document affecting its organization has to be filed at New Brunswick because the original incorporation is entered upon the books of Middlesex. The change provides for the holding of the annual election of officers on the first Monday in Advent and for the election of one warden each year and three vestrymen, increasing the vestrymen to nine. Rev. Charles L. Goodes, the rector, and J. Lewis Martin, secretary of the vestry, have signed the amendments to the incorporation. The original incorporation was filed May 9, 1836. Rev. Alfred S. Ford was then rector and Edward O. Rogers secretary.

A Place for Everything.

One of the mottoes which, though good, are rarely applied, is "A place for everything and everything in its place." A London cab driver seemed to think that affairs were ordered after this pattern. As he swung down the Strand an American sitting beside him asked him to point out the spots of interest.

"Right you are, sir!" agreed the driver, touching his hat. "There's Luggit 'ill, where they 'ang 'em."

A little later: "There's Parliament houses, where they make the laws wot does it, across the way. An' there's Westminster Habbey, where they buried the good 'uns wot didn't get 'anged!"—Dundee Advertiser.

Use for Four Legs.

Wife (reading)—Isn't this funny, my dear? Here is an article which says they have found a new species of birds in Australia which have four legs. Now, whatever do you suppose they want four legs for?

Husband (yawning)—They are probably politicians, my love, and by this beautiful dispensation of their Creator they are enabled to stand on both sides of the fence at the same time.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

A Cruel Precaution.

"I have an idea that those new neighbors of ours are great gossips, but I can't find out."

"Why not?"

"You see, their cook is deaf and dumb, and none of the girls in the block understand the sign language."—Baltimore American.

Fire Ruins Give Up Skeleton.

Workmen yesterday found the bones of a human being in the debris of the fire which totally destroyed the barns of Joseph Engle, near Hanesport, early on Sunday morning. At the time of the fire nobody was reported to be missing.

Alarming.

Mrs. Highmus—I see from the fashion plates that gowns are not to be worn so long next year.

Mrs. Pneuritch—Gracious! My husband will have a fit. I never wear a gown more than once or twice, even now!—Chicago Tribune.

Merely Curiosity.

First Tramp—I've been looking for work.

Second Tramp—You don't mean it? What for?

"Oh, just out of idle curosity."—Smart Set.

Next Little Boy.

Teacher—What is a suffragette?

Wilfred—A female sufferer.—Puck.

December Clearance Sale of Women's and Misses' Tailored Suits at Half and Less.

That's the story in brief. But it may interest you to know that such decisive reductions as this December Clearance Sale affords are rarely, if ever, quoted until a month later. Another fact we wish to emphasize is, that every suit involved in this sale is strictly up-to-date in style, material and workmanship. Every one of them is self-evident of expert tailoring, and they are suits that are known for their excellency in fitting the average form.

We have arranged six groups of them as follows:

25 Suits that formerly sold from $12.50 to $17.50 at ..... $7.50
40 Suits that formerly sold from $15.00 to $20.00 at ..... $10
45 Suits that formerly sold from $25.00 to $30.00 at ..... $17.50
25 Suits that formerly sold from $27.50 to $32.00 at ..... $19.50

These Tailored Suits for Women and Misses at Half and Less will be arranged on racks convenient for inspection. All other garments have been reduced proportionately for Quick Clearance. But the sooner you come the greater the opportunity. Suit Department, Second Floor.

PORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Golf Association will be held at the Exchange Club, Boston, on Monday, January 11, at 5:30 p. m. Clubs of the association may be represented at any of its meetings by two delegates duly authorized, each of whom shall be entitled to one vote. The nominating committee has presented the following ticket:

President, G. Herbert Windeler, the Country Club; vice-president, Alfred L. Ripley, the Oakley Country Club; treasurer, Edmund B. Conant, Vesper Country Club; secretary, Richard R. Freeman, Wollaston Golf Club; executive committee, Nathaniel B. Borden, Jr., Fall River Golf Club; Edward A. Wilkie, Allston Golf Club; Charles E. Stickney, Country Club of Springfield; Charles T. Crocker, Jr., Alpine Golf Club; Charles I. Travelli, Brae Burn Country Club.

There will be a dinner immediately following the meeting, and invitations have been sent to the presidents of the United States Golf Association, the Philadelphia Golf Association, the Rhode Island Golf Association and the Metropolitan Golf Association.

Whatever is to be done about the new rules as revised by the St. Andrews committee will be done at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association in New York on January 8. The rules may be adopted as they are read or a committee may be appointed after the preceding revisions to interpret the code for American players. A matter that may come up under new business is to regulate the choosing of names by golf and country clubs to avoid confusion by a similarity of title.

The Essex County Club of Manchester, Mass., and the Essex County Country Club, of Orange, often cause confusion by the similarity in title. There is too a Beaver Valley Country Club in Pennsylvania and a Beaver Meadow Golf Club in New Hampshire. In Pennsylvania are the Edgewood Country Club and the Edgeworth Club. There is an Evanston, Ill., Golf Club and an Evanston Golf Club of Kansas City. Massachusetts has an Island Club at Haverhill and there is an Island Golf Club at Troy. An odd coincidence among unlisted clubs is that there is a Foothills Golf Club in Somerset, Ky., and one of the same name at Nordhoff, Cal. Also there are two Oakwood clubs in Ohio and Wisconsin.

Although now at the Wykagyl Country Club, the Nassau Country Club has still a friendly recollection of its former professional, Aleck Smith. He has received in invitation from H. L. Pratt, president of the Nassau Country Club, to attend the annual dinner tomorrow evening. The members have arranged to give a testimonial to Smith as an appreciation of his services while with them.

BASEBALL.

Herzog in the outfield is a plan that may be tried by Manager McGraw of the New York Nationals. There have been suggestions to the manager since the season closed that it would be a good idea to shift Larry Doyle to the outfield and keep Herzog at second, this on account of the good work Herzog did on the second bag after Doyle was hurt last season.

"When these suggestions came to me," said McGraw yesterday, "my own ideas about the two men were just the opposite. There are points about both which would make it better to keep Doyle at second and play Herzog in the outfield if either were to go to the outer garden. Herzog picks up points quicker than Doyle, and for that reason would learn the outfield job more readily. Again, as a second baseman Doyle can go further for a ground ball than Herzog and he is a quicker starter. It took me a year to break in Doyle as a second baseman, and I'd hesitate a long while before I'd take him off that bag after the way he has played it. He was playing a fine game when he got hurt, and on the last Western trip his fielding was wonderful.

"Another thing I'd hesitate about a long time before doing would be to make a trade in which I would lose Herzog. A utility man like him isn't picked up every day. As a utility man he hasn't played as many positions as Hofman, but I think he could learn the outfield quickly, and he played a better game at second base than Hofman ever did." McGraw is going South the middle of February and will devote two weeks time to his youngsters at Marlin Springs before the regulars report.

The decision of the National Baseball Commission regarding the ticket scandal arising from the world's championship games played in Chicago last fall will be made public in a few days. It appears that there has been some pretty sharp politics played in this connection. Ban Johnson and Harry Pulliam were ready to have the verdict made public during the recent conclave of the magnates in New York, but for some reason Garry Herrmann, chairman of the commission, was opposed to the plan. Since then Johnson and Pulliam have been urging Herrmann to take a stand in the matter, with the result that Herrmann has just notified them that he will come to time. Johnson and Pulliam have left Chicago for California, but on the eve of their departure both had something to say. Johnson declared that the points in the verdict were agreed upon some time ago, while Pulliam stated that it was up to Herrmann. It is hinted that the decision will cause a sensation, although President Murphy of the Chicago Cubs has insisted all along that his club officials were in no way implicated.

In Boston it is maintained that the Red Sox got the better of the Spencer-Criger deal, while in St. Louis Manager McAleer is receiving unstinted praise for exercising such splendid judgment. Incidentally, it may be said that St. Louis fans, because of the acquisition of Criger, are already laying claims to the American League pennant for the Browns.

FOOTBALL.

In the current issue of Collier's Weekly, Walter Camp has named his All-America football team for 1908. Mr. Camp's team is generally regarded as the official team and, as usual, his selection are marked by thoroughness and impartiality. Three of his backs—Tibbott, Hollenback and Coy—are the same as were chosen by nearly everybody else. There never was the unanimity before on three men. Mr. Camp names three elevens as follows:

First Eleven—Ends, Scarlett, Pennsylvania, and Schildmiller, Dartmouth; tackles, Fish, Harvard, and Horr, Syracuse; guards, Goebel, Yale, and Tobin, Dartmouth; centre, Nourse, Harvard; quarterback, Steffen, Chicago; halfbacks, Tibbott, Princeton, and Hollenback, Pennsylvania; fullback, Coy, Yale.

Second Eleven — Ends, Dennie, Brown, and Reifsnider, Navy; tackles, Siegling, Princeton, and O'Rourke, Cornell; guards, Andrus, Yale, and Messmer, Wisconsin; centre, Philoon, Army; quarterback, Cutler, Harvard; halfbacks, Ver Wiebe, Harvard, and Mayhew, Brown; fullback, Walder, Cornell.

Third Eleven—Ends, Page, Chicago, and Johnson, Army; tackles, Draper, Pennsylvania, and Northcroft, Navy; guards, Van Hook, Illinois, and Hoar, Harvard; centre, Brusse, Dartmouth; quarterback, Miller, Pennsylvania; halfbacks, Thorpe, Carlisle, and Gray, Amherst, fullback, McCaa, Lafayette.

The opinion has been expressed that Frank Hinkey will be more active than ever in the Yale football coaching next fall. An effort will be made to induce him to go to New Haven for the entire season. There will be some interesting changes in the football schedule for next year. It is planned to drop Wesleyan and Washington and Jefferson. Williams College will be taken on if possible and Fordham and Amherst will be on the schedule. A game with Fordham will be played in New Haven.

Soon after the close of last season it became known that Capt. Coy and Manager White were in favor of playing teams which could put up a stiffer game than Washington and Jefferson and Wesleyan. There probably will be onl yeight games instead of nine as this season. Yale probably will be only eight games the Massachusetts Institute of Agriculture, Amherst, Fordham and Syracuse will come next, gradually getting the team in shape to go against West Point. Brown will be a good team to follow and Princeton and Harvard as usual will wind up the schedule.

Governor's Trenton Home.

Governor Fort is planning to live at Trenton at least four days a week during the next few months and he has instructed one of his aids to look around for a suitable house for him. The Governor found it rather inconvenient traveling to and from his home in East Orange last winter, and this, together with his desire to keep in close touch with the doings of the coming Legislature, has prompted him to look for a suitable temporary domicile in Trenton. Assemblyman John D. Prince, who will be speaker of the next year's House, has leased a house in Trenton for a few months the Legislature is in session.

No Opportunity.

Mrs. Dyer—Have you had any experience in taking care of children?

Applicant—No, ma'am. Heretofore I've only worked for the best families.—Puck.

MONSTER LOCOMOTIVE FOR THE PENNSY ROAD

In order to be prepared to handle promptly whatever increased traffic may be offered during the coming year, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company has just begun the construction of fifteen locomotives of the most powerful type which has yet been designed fr use on this railroad. These locomotives will be known as "H--b" and are to be built at the Juniatta shops at Altoona, Pa.

Some idea of the character of this type of engine may be had from the fact that when the tender is fully loaded with coal and water and the locomotive is ready for service on the road, its total weight will be 384,000 pounds, nearly 200 tons. The weight of the engine proper, in working order, will be approximately 241,000 pounds or about 120 tons. The tender will be equipped to carry 7,000 gallons of water and thirteen and one-half tons of coal.

This locomotive will be a consolidated type,, having one pair of truck wheels and four pair of drivers. The truck wheels will be thirty-three inches in diameter, and the driving wheels will be sixty-two inches in diameter. In general design this locomotive will be similar to the type "H-6-b," which has been in general use for quite a number of years, but, on account of increased weight and large drivers, will be capable of hauling a heavy train at somewhat greater speed than the former types of freight locomotives.

According to the latest improved practice the Walschaert valve motion, with fourteen inch piston valves, will be used to control the steam distribution in the cylinders. The boiler will be of the standard Bellaire type, and will have a minimum inside diameter of seventy-six and three-quarter inches. It will contain 465 two-inch tubes, 180 inches long, giving a fire area through tubes of 7.77 square feet.

The total fire grate will be 55.13 square feet, and the total heating surface will be 3,839 square feet. The boiler was designed to safely withstand a pressure of 205 pounds per square inch. The total tractive power will be 42661.

WRITE SENDER'S NAME ON CHRISTMAS MAIL.

Those who mail Christmas packages to friends should always write, somewhere on the package, the name of the sender. This is not compulsory, but it is a convenience that may lead to the return of the package if the person to whom it is addressed is not found, and to notification if the package is mailed without sufficient postage.

Henry E. Phillips.

Henry E. Phillips, a retired stone cutter, who came to this city from New London, Conn., two years ago, died this morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James Andrews, of East Fifth street. He was seventy-two years old and leaves three daughters beside Mrs. Andrews. They are Mrs. Etta Morgan, of New York; Mrs. George E. Hyde, of Poughkeepsie, and Mrs. George Randall, of New London. The funeral will be held at Mrs. Andrews residence Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

Funeral of Miss Flynn.

The funeral of Miss Anastasia Flynn, a former local resident whose death occurred at Stewartsville, was held in St. Mary's church, this morning. The service was conducted by Rev. Father Schiola and was followed by burial in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall bearers were James Hurley, Jules Parent, William Wilson, Thomas Degnan, Timothy Riordan and Michael Devlin.

Mrs. Sutphen's Funeral Tomorrow.

The funeral of Mrs. Fannie A. Sutphen, widow of Dr. J. C. Sutphen, who died at her home on East Seventh street, yesterday, will be held at the late residence tomorrow aftrnoon at 2:30.

Mrs. A. E. Dawe, of 92 Somerset street, is at Muhlenberg Hospital recovering from a serious operation.

HEBREWS TONIGHT BEGIN CHANUKAH CELEBRATION

Hebrews in Plainfield in common with those throughout the world this evening will begin the eight-day festival of the rededication of the second temple. The festival recalls the soul-stirring days described in the books of Maccabees, when the Jewish people engaged in a life and death struggle for the preservation of the religion of Israel.

Although there are synagogue services, Chanukah is specially a home festival. The Chanukah lamps, or eight-branched candlesticks, that are a striking feature of the celebration, are known as Menorah. This evening one of the candles will be lighted, an additional one being lighted each evening until all are burning on the eighth day. The purpose of the lights is chiefly exterior illumination as tokens of rejoicing, so that they are set close to the windows. In ancient Palestine the lights so placed produced a general illumination of every town. The festival became known in consequence as the "Feast of Lights."

In the bloody struggle that lasted many years, Antiochus Epiphanes, King of Syria, sought to compel the Jews to abandon their religion and accept that of the Greeks. The Syrians were at first successful. They laid Palestine waste, occupied Jerusalem, desecrated the temple and polluted the altar. A statue of Olympias Zeus (Jupiter) was set up on the temple and the Jews were requested to accept the pagan worship.

The Maccabaeus family led in the struggle against the tyrant, and after sanguiniary conflicts the Jewish cause triumphed. The temple was cleansed and adorned anew, a new altar built, fresh sacred vessels and utensils provided and every trace of the pollution effaced. In the home and synagogue among Newark Jews, special prayer and thanksgiving, bearing on the great deliverance, will be recited during the continuance of the festival; the Menorah will be lighted in synagogue, as well as the home, and in the synagogues the Hallel Psalms 113 to 118 will be sung as on the great festivals. In addition to the synagogue services Chanukah week is generally made the occasion for special entertainments, some of which are mentioned below.

Enough to Scare Her.

"Bill" Smith is a Bucks county storekeeper, and last spring he came down to Philadelphia to purchase his stock of goods for the summer trade. The goods were shipped immediately, and reached his store before he did. Among the lot of cases and packages was a box shaped something like a casket. When Bill's wife saw this one she uttered a scream and called for a hammer. The drayman, hearing her shrill cries, rushed in to see what the trouble was. The wife, pale and faint, pointed to the following inscription on the box:

"Bill inside."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Dramatic Treat.

A dramatic treat is in store for local playgoers tomorrow when Arnold Daly and his company will appear at the New Plainfield theatre, afternoon and night, in C. M. S. McLellan's new play, "The Pickpockets." The production was first seen at Atlantic City last Monday night and it has since received the most enthuiastic approval. Mr. Daly's ability as an actor of the first calibre is known to Plainfielders through his clever character portrayals here in "You Never Can Tell," "Canada" and "My Mimie Rose."

Explained.

The June bride frowned.

"These tomatoes," she said, "are just twice as dear as those across the street. Why is it?"

"Ah, ma'am, thee"—and the grocer smiled—"these are hand picked."

She blushed.

"Of course," she said, hastily, "I might have known. Give me a bushel, please."—Harper's Weekly.

Mrs. Mary Paul.

Mrs. Mary Paul, who lived in this city for many years, died last night in Muhlenberg Hospital where she had been undergoing treatment for a long time. She was seventy-five years old and had no relatives in this country. She was a member of St. Mary's church and the funeral will be held there tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock when a high mass will be said.

Youthful Analyst.

Uncle (inculcating altruism)—And if you are kind and polite to your playmates, what will be the result?

Master Horace—They'll think they can lick me.—London Opinion.

Query.

I likened her ear to a shell,
But a spiteful slam
Was this thrust of a rival belle;
"Oyster or clam?"
—Washington Star.

Something Wrong.

"The whole world loves a lover."
'Tis said, so I can't see
Why the fair maid turned me down
She was all the world to me.

Mrs. H. B. Foroat, of Sandford avenue, is visiting at Green, N. Y.

AND THEN HE WASN'T PLEASED.

Wifey's Economy That Drew No Praise from Husband.

There was a pensive look in Mrs. Compton's charming eyes, but she smiled across the table at her husband when he asked her if she felt too tired to go with him to a concert. "I suppose you have been busy packing all day," he said, thoughtfully.

"Oh, yes, I've been busy," she said, with a little sigh, "but I feel satisfied, for everything is packed now, except the last things, that can't go in the trunks till to-morrow, and besides that I have done something I'm sure will please you, Henry. It will show you that I'm really learning to be thrifty and economical like you."

"I should like to hear what you've done," said Mr. Compton, with as serious an air as his wife's.

"I knew that the battery in my little electric lantern would not begin to last till our vacation was over," said Mrs. Compton, "and yet it didn't really need to be recharged yet. So rather than have that spark wasted, I went into the library at dusk, with all the curtains drawn and the shades down, and just sat there in the dark—or it would have been dark except for the lantern, I mean—and pressed one finger after another on the lantern button, changing fingers as they got numb, till at last the spark gave out. So now I can have it recharged to-morrow with a clear conscience."—Youth's Companion.

DOES HIS WORK IN PRIVATE.

Great Painter Who Wants No Witnesses to His Art.

John Sargent, the famous painter, is something of an eccentric in private life. When engaged on any important work he will suddenly disappear from London—only for a few days—and where he goes nobody knows. Then he returns from his hiding place, bringing his picture with him. One of the secrets of his wonderful lifelike portraits is that he always aims at transmitting the mind and feeling of his sitter, as well as his outside shell on to his canvas. The faithfulness of Mr. Sargent's portraits is such that Mr. Dooley was once led to remark that "No artist in our day has succeeded so well in showing up the maneness iv th' people he has mugged." By the way, Mr. Sargent is a musician of no mean order, while as a conversationalist he possesses a charm all his own.

Costly Necklaces.

The most costly necklace in the world belongs to the Countess Henckel, a lady well known in London and Paris society, the value of which is said to be $250,000. It is really composed of three necklaces, each of historic interest. One was the property of the ex-queen of Naples, sister of the late Austrian empress; the second, once the property of a Spanish grandee, while the third was formerly owned by the Empress Eugenie. Not long ago a necklace composed of 412 pearls, in eight rows, the property of the late duchess of Montrose, was sold for $60,000. The Empress Frederick of Germany is said to have possessed a necklace of 35 pearls, worth at least $200,000, while Lady Ilchester's necklace of black pearls is valued at about $125,000.

One Industry of the Pesky Ant.

Out in Burma and the far east, where sandalwood is worth its weight in silver, the pestiferous ant is a valuable assistant to the loggers of that precious timber. The hard and fragrant heartwood alone has value, but as the tree grows this valuable heart is overlaid by a soft and worthless layer forming two-thirds of the trunk. When a tree is felled and cut into lengths the loggers let the timber lie. At once the ants begin work upon the soft wood, which is sappy and sweet enough to attract them. In a few weeks, less than a month in the case of the largest butts, the ants deliver the heartwood free of all the worthless sapwood.

New Illuminating System.

A new system of illumination is offered by the discovery of Prof. Blau of Germany, which is a liquid illuminating gas to be delivered at the houses of customers at regular periods in much the same manner as coal oil and other commodities are delivered at the present time. A 22-pound cylinder of gas is sufficient to supply a 50-candle power light for four months if used four hours a day. The means of connection between the burner and the reservoir is through a fine tube no thicker than an electric light wire and just as flexible.

Hard Worked and Poorly Paid.

Siberia's best-paid clergy get about $600 a year, while the poorer clergy have often to beg for their bread. They have a great deal to do. There is always a service between four and five in the morning and there are two other services a day. There must be a service on the birth of a child and at the death of anyone in the parish. All new buildings, schoolhouses, bridges and boats must be blessed; children beginning at a school term are blessed and in time of pestilence or peril there must be continuous prayer.

Costly English Tunnel.

The new Rotherhithe tunnel under the Thames to Stepney has cost something like $10,000,000 to construct and is the largest tube boring of its kind in the world. Its total length, including the two sloping approaches, is roughly 1 1-3 miles. The length of tunnel actually under the river is about one-third of a mile.

WARNED BY THE PHOTOGRAPH.

Disciplinary Measure Adopted by Woman of Sense.

"Above my desk," said the woman who does not lie about her age, "I keep an uncomplimentary photograph of myself. I keep it there as a disciplinary measure. It prevents frivolity. My present photographic monitor makes me look about 70 years old. I am not 70, but I am more than half that age, and I look every day of my actual years. But I don't feel that old. Gay and giddy exploits still attract me. Pleasures, diversions, flirtations that for a young girl are perfectly legitimate, appeal to me, also, yet if I should rush into those gayeties as a girl does my behavior would be characterized as foolishness. Every day I hear the actions of women younger looking than myself so described.

"Then I come home and study this photograph. That destroys whatever inclination I may have had to behave like a 16-year-old. I never write a letter to a man friend—I never make an engagement without keeping an eye on that photograph.

"'Don't be a fool,' says that veracious guide. 'You can't afford to do that.'

"So I temper ardent phrases and tone down ebullient spirits generally."

BORE LOVE LOCK OF EMPEROR.

Coin Struck During Napoleon III.'s Reign Now Valuable.

There is a singular story in connection with a coin of the third Napoleon. While Louis Napoleon was prince president of France, just before he made himself emperor, a decree was issued ordering a five-franc piece to be coined bearing his image.

The dies were made, and one coin was struck off as a sample and sent to the prince president for his approval. But some time passed before he examined it. When at last he gave it his attention he was annoyed to find that he had been represented on the coin with a love lock, or hooked lock of hair on the temple, which he actually did wear at that period, but which he thought unsuitable to so dignified and permanent a representation of himself as an effigy on a coin.

The prince president sent for the director of the mint and ordered him to remove the love lock. Then he found that his silence with regard to the piece had been taken for approval, and that the stamping of the coins had begun. The work was stopped and the image deprived of its undignified lock. But the 23 coins that had already been struck off were not destroyed and are now regarded as of great value.

The Public Eye.

In a little more we came to an open space, very thronged.

"The Public Eye!" shouted the megaphone man of our party.

There were some curious people within the space, but even more curious were those just outside.

Of these latter we thought certain women especially interesting; they were busily neglecting their families in order to get into the Public Eye. A pathos attached to another group of women who had been in the Public Eye and could never be happy out of it, though they couldn't in the least tell why.

Positively funny were a few men who kept trying, by a variety of droll devices, to break into the Public Eye. "Vice-presidential candidates!" our megaphone man explained.—Puck.

Three Sabbaths Every Week.

Morocco is a country of many Sabbaths. The first three days I spent in Tangier were all Sabbaths. Arriving on a Thursday night the next day was Friday, the Mohammedan Sabbath, which was followed by the Jewish Sabbath—the Hebrew element in Tangier is considerable and strict in religious observance—and that in turn by the Christian Sunday. Subsequent comparisons, however, revealed little difference between any days of the week. On the Mohammedan Sabbath a black flag is hoisted on the minarets at the prayer of dawn, instead of the white flag that announces the time of devotions on other days. It remains up until the middle of the forenoon, by which time everybody is supposed to have found out what day it is.—N. Y. Post.

The Better Part.

A delightful little story is told of Prosper Merimee, the French author. He was once guest at a royal hunt, when hares, pheasants and other game were driven before the emperor and his followers, and the servants picked up the victims of the sport.

Among all the members of the hunting party, Prosper Merimee alone had no trophy to display.

"How does this happen?" asked some one.

"Where game is so plenty, the merit of a marksman seems to me to lie in hitting nothing," replied Merimee, with grave courtesy, "so I fired between the birds."—Youth's Companion.

Ups and Downs.

"Matrimony has its ups and downs," remarked the scanty haired benedict.

"What's the answer?" queried the confirmed bachelor.

"It keeps the wife busy trying to keep up appearances and the husband busy trying to keep down expenses," replied the other with a large, open-face sigh.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

MATTERS OF MORE OR LESS IMPORTANCE IN THE HOME.

Simple Device to Keep the Portieres from Flying Open—Removing Spots from Tablecloth—Use for Old Towels.

Portiere Fasteners.—Many times it is advisable to close the portieres, either to keep the dust in or the chill out. Yet when touched by the slightest draft near the fire they will persist in flying open. Near the edge sew two or three small socket snaps They will never be seen and will hold the two lengths of curtains securely together.

Tablecloths.—A novel and sensible way of removing a few spots from an otherwise acceptable tablecloth is to slip underneath the cloth before removing it from the table a small sized bowl, and with a small pitcher of boiling water and a clean spoon pour the water on the cloth, letting it fall into the bowl held under, and with a little swishing of the spoon take out the spot. By carefully removing the cloth and hanging it on the line until dry it is again ready for further use and is freed from spots.

Old Turkish Towels.—Many object to the economy of cutting up the better portions of old Turkish towels for wash-rags, on the ground that the hem is cumbersome. Without a hem they ravel and the threads get down the waste pipes. A satisfactory way is to buttonhole stitch the edge with white darning cotton that sinks into the mesh and holds in the threads. The stitches may be a quarter of an inch apart and taken in deep from the edge. Thus employment can be furnished for the youngest member of the family.

Mending China.—One woman's way is to powder a small quantity of lime and, after adding the white of an egg, mix into a paste. Apply it quickly to the china to be mended and hold or tie the broken pieces firmly for a few minutes; so they may become set. China mended in this way will rarely break again in the same place.

Prunes.—One mother keeps on the sideboard an attractive glass dish filled with the best quantity of prunes steamed and then allowed to dry. Beside the dish is a little glass filled with toothpicks, and the children are thus provided with the very best article of food for between-meal nibbling. Even those who profess to dislike the much-abused prunes cannot resist the temptation to eat them.

New Dish Pan.—A brown papier-mache tub of small size is found by many to be far preferable to use as a dish pan than the ordinary tin or agate ware, for the reason that with its use delicate glasses and china are less likely to be broken.

English Rhubarb Pie.

Mix and sift twice two cups flour, four teaspoons baking powder, half teaspoon salt, one-quarter cup sugar, a little nutmeg. Work in one-third cup butter and 1¼ tablespoons lard. Add one egg well beaten, one-third cup sweet milk. Roll out three-quarters inch thick, cut with small biscuit cutter and bake. Pour boiling water on cut up rhubarb and let it cool; pour off water, add more and cook gently until done, adding sugar to taste. Pour over the little crusts (one to each person) and serve hot. Apples (sour) may be used in the same manner.

Save Kid Gloves.

If you have lost one of your kid gloves do not throw the other away. If it is a short one it will come handy for stripping on the right hand when polishing stoves or doing any other rough hand work. An elbow length kid glove ripped apart to get the largest surface will in most cases serve the same purpose as a chamois polisher. I have also used the arm part of kid gloves for making infants' shoes, pocket watch protectors, and as a covering for balls of twine or knitting yarn to be used temporarily for indoor play.

Nice for Luncheon.

Beat the white of one egg until stiff, add two cups of granulated sugar, one cup chopped nuts and one-half cup raisins. Stir all well. Then spread the mixture on the large sized oyster crackers, or square soda wafers if preferred. Place these in a warm oven until brown on top. Delicious for luncheon or afternoon tea; good warm or cold.

Breaded Sweet Potatoes.

A new and easy way to serve sweet potatoes is to take cold boiled sweet potatoes and slice them lengthwise. Then take as many eggs as you think enough for the amount of slices you have and dip the potatoes in the egg and roll in cracker crumbs. You will find it makes a delicious dish for supper.

Sweet Potato Pudding.

Mix with one pound of sweet potatoes, grated raw, half a teacupful of molasses, two beaten eggs, one tablespoon of butter, with two tablespoons of sugar and enough milk to make a thin mixture; add one teaspoonful of ginger and spice to taste.

Sugar Potatoes.

Sprinkle as much sugar as salt on your potatoes when frying and note the delicious flavor.

QUITE A DIFFERENT MATTER.

A stranger went into a lawyer's office and asked, abruptly:

"If a person falls down an open coal-hole, can he sue the owner of the premises for damages?"

"Certainly, sir," replied the lawyer, "certainly. Big damages, and get them, too."

"Well," went on the client, "as my son was passing your house this morning he fell through a coal-hole and broke his leg."

"H'm!" said the lawyer, meditatingly. Then briskly: "Did he use ordinary vigilance to prevent such an accident? Did he stop and examine the condition of the pavement before treading upon it? Answer me that, sir."

"Stop? Why, no—"

"Ah!" ejaculated the man of law, triumphantly. "I thought so. The boy is guilty of criminal negligence, for he might have fallen upon one of my family under the coal-hole—might have killed us all, sir. As it is, I shall sue him for trespass!"

Not Much!

"So you are one of those who want to be let alone?"

"Yes, sir. What we want is a little sunshine and not so much tinkering with other people's business."

"What line are you in?"

"I am the owner of a number of buildings that my agents are renting to people who keep screens in front of the windows. It may be that they are not strictly moral—some of 'em—but it's not my business to go around looking through chinks for the purpose of trying to discover things I mightn't happen to like."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Happy Days.

"My happiest days," said Mr. Rockingham, as he signed a check for the purpose of satisfying one of the creditors of his titled son-in-law, "were the days when I was carrying a dinnerpail that my wife had filled with her own hands."

"Him," replied his candid fellow-millionaire, "in those days I suppose you could sit down comfortably and eat with your knife, and never had to be constantly on the alert for fear you might say you 'done it.'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Force of Habit.

"Your wife seems to have lost her old tone of command. Her voice has a soft, pleading quality now."

"Yes. She has acquired it trying to keep a maid since we moved out to our suburban home."—Chicago Record-Herald.

SURE TO COME AROUND.

Shortun—Do you think you will be seeing Jones this week?

Longun—Yes.

Shortun—You are quite sure?

Longun—Certainly. I owe him a bit.

Odd, But True.

Here's a case where extremes

When a man's dry, it seems,
He's most apt to get "soaked."

Knew the Sex.

Good Minister—I am exceedingly gratified at the wonderful increase in the attendance of men at our Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evening prayer-meetings. For the past three weeks the church has been thronged with men.

His Wife—It's house-cleaning time.—N. Y. Weekly.

Then and Now.

First Scientist—What fools those old Puritans were for believing in witches!

Second Scientist—Seems to me they must have been half-crazed. Well, we must hurry, or you'll be late for your lecture on "Hypnotism and Crime."—N. Y. Weekly.

A Useful Tool.

Gyer—Lots of inventors never fully realize the importance of their inventions.

Myer—Don't they?

Gyer—No. Take the hairpin, for example. It is said the inventor never intended it to be used in dressing the hair.—Chicago Daily News.

Poetically Described.

"This creature," said the naturalist, pointing to a picture of a cuttle fish, "ejects ink as it travels in such quantities as to bewilder its pursuer."

"Wonderful," said the man with the stained fingers. "It might be called the fountain pen of the sea."—Washington Star.

Crowded Out.

"I put myself into my playing," remarked the ardent musician.

"That," replied Miss Cayenne, "may explain why it is sometimes difficult to recognize the composer."—Washington Star

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 20, 1908.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Why was the King born?—John xviii, 33-37. A Christmas meeting.

The Christmas season has returned, and naturally devout minds turn to Bethlehem, and in our churches and other places of religious worship and study the subjects selected have to do with some phase of Christ's birth. The subject suggested for our study is an interesting and important one. Why was the King born? When we turn our thoughts to the birth of Christ we usually think of its humbleness, and yet, while He was born amid lowly surroundings, He was nevertheless a King. He was King of heaven and King of the earth and came into the world as the King of the Jews. The wise men of the east when they arrived at Jerusalem asked, "Where is He that was born King of the Jews?" When Pilate pressed the question upon Him He did not deny His kingship, but acknowledged it when He declared, "My kingdom is not of this world." Having a kingdom, He must have been a King. He further proceeds to answer the question before us: "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world that I should bear witness of the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth My voice."

Christ, the King, was born to bear witness of the truth. The transition of Christ from kingship to witness bearing is a striking one. It seems to indicate that His kingship lay in His witness bearing. His kingdom was not temporal, but spiritual. The purpose of His coming was not to teach men the true way of conducting governments, but the eternal truths of God concerning spiritual things—yea, to reveal truth in Himself—for He said on another occasion, "I am the way, the truth and the life." Being at the head of those who were to receive the truth taught by Him, He was a King in this spiritual realm, and the very purpose of His kingship was to make known by precept and example the great truths of God to man. For this purpose He left His throne in heaven and came to earth, being born as a man that He might the better perform His great mission. Well may the world therefore rejoice upon the anniversary of His birth.

But merely to witness to the truth was not the cause of the King's coming. Through witnessing to the truth He was to call to Him all who were of the truth, all who desired spiritual truth, that He might set them free from error and from bondage to sin. "The truth shall make them free." Have we accepted the kingship of Christ? Is He to us the truth, and have we found spiritual liberty and freedom in Him and His teachings? If not, "seek and ye shall find."

"Good evening, Bertie," returned the lady, extending a hand over the cards; "excuse my not rising to greet you; I might joggle the cards. Of course I'm not a day older; I don't dare to grow older at my age! Sit down. I'm extremely glad to see you; I've a heap to talk to you about. Do you mind if I run this game through first?"

The colonel didn't mind. He raised the proffered hand to his lips; such homage seemed quite the most natural act in the world with Mrs. Winter. And he unobtrusively edged his own lean and wiry person into the vacant seat opposite her.

"How far are you going?" said she, after a few moves of the cards.

"My ticket says Los Angeles; but it had to say something, so I chose Los Angeles for luck; I'm an irresponsible tramp now, you know; and I may drop off almost anywhere. You are for southern California, aren't you?"

"Eventually; but we shall stop at San Francisco, for two or three weeks."

"Do you mind if I stop off with you? I want to get acquainted with my ward," said the colonel.

"That's a good idea, Bertie."

"He seems rather out of sorts; you aren't worried about—well, tuberculosis or that sort of thing?"

"I am worried about just that sort of thing; although the doctor says nothing organic at all is the matter with him; but he is too melancholy for a boy; he needs rousing; losing his father and mother in one year, you know, and he was devoted to them. I can't quite make him out, Bertie; he hasn't the Winter temperament. I suppose he has a legal right to his mother's nature; but it is very annoying. It makes him so much harder to understand—not that she wasn't a good woman who made Tom happy; but she wasn't a Winter. However, Janet has brightened him up considerably—you've seen Janet—Miss Smith? What do you think of her?"

Winter said honestly that she was very nice-looking and that she looked right capable; he fell into the idiom of his youth sometimes when with a southerner.

"She is," said Aunt Rebecca.

"Where did you find her?" asked the colonel carelessly, inspecting the cards.

Aunt Rebecca smiled. "I thought Millicent would have given you all the particulars. She was nurse, secretary, companion and diet cook to Cousin Angela Nelson; when she died I got her. Lucky for me."

"So I should judge," commented the colonel politely.

"I presume Millicent has told you that she is an adventuress and after my money and a heap more stuff. If she hasn't she will. Get a notion once in Millicent's head and a surgical operation is necessary to dislodge it! Janet is the only mortal person who could live with poor Cousin Angela, who had enough real diseases to kill her and enough imaginary ones to kill anybody who lived with her! Janet made her comfortable, would not stand everything on earth from her—though she did stand a heap—and really cared for her. When she died Cousin Angela left her some money; not very much, but a few thousands. She would have left her more, but Janet wouldn't let her. She left some to some old servants, who surely deserved it for living with her, some to charities and the rest to her sisters, who hadn't put a foot inside the house for 15 years, but naturally resented her not giving them everything. I reckon they filled Millicent up with their notions." She pushed the outspread cards together.

"You had several moves left," said the colonel.

"Four. But then, I was finished. Bertie, you play bridge, of course; and I used to hear of your whist triumphs; how did you happen to take to whist?"

"To fill up the time, I reckon. I began it years ago. Now a soldier's life is a great deal more varied, because a man will be shifted around and get a show of the different kinds of service. And there are the exams., and the Philippines—oh, plenty of diversions. But in the old days a man in the line was billed for an awfully stupid time. I didn't care to take to drink; and I couldn't read as you do if I'd had books, which I hadn't, so I took to playing cards. I played skat and poker and whist, and of late years I've played bridge. Millicent plays?"

"Millicent is a celebrated player. She was a great duplicate-whist player, you know. To see Millicent in her glory, one should play duplicate with her. I'm only a chump player; my sole object is to win tricks."

"What else should it be?"

Aunt Rebecca smiled upon him. "To give information to your partner. The main object of the celebrated American-leads system is signaling information to your partner. Incidentally, one tells the adversaries, as well as one's partner, which, however, doesn't count really as much as you might think; for most people don't notice what their partners play very much, and don't notice what their adversaries play at all. Millicent is always so busy indicating things to her partner and watching for his signals and his indications that you can run a cross ruff in on her without her suspecting. She asked me once if she didn't play an intelligent game, and I told her she did; a babe in arms could understand it. She didn't seem quite pleased."

"How about Archie? Can he play a good game?"

"Very fair for a boy of 14; he was fond of whist until his troubles came," said Mrs. Winter, with a faint clouding of her keen gaze. "Since then he hasn't taken much interest in anything. Janet has brightened him up more than anyone; and when he heard you were coming that did rouse him. You are one of his heroes. He's that sort of a boy," she added, with a tinge of impatience in her soft southern voice. As if to divert her thoughts, she began deftly moving the cards before her. Her hands showed the blue veins more prominently than they show in young hands. This was their only surrender to time; they were shapely and white, and the slim fingers were as straight as when the beaux of Fairfax county would have ridden all day for a chance to kiss them.

The colonel watched the great ruby wink and glow. The ruby was a part of his memories of his aunt; she had always worn it. He remembered it, when she used to come and visit him at the hotel at West Point, dazzling impartially officers, professors, cadets and hotel waiters. Was that almost 40 years ago? Well, 34 anyhow! She had been very good, very generous to all the young Winters, then. Indeed, although she never quite forgave him for not marrying the wife of her selecting, she had always been kind and generous to Rupert; yet, somehow, while he had admired and found a humorous joy in his Aunt Rebecca, he wondered if he had ever loved her. She was both beautiful and brilliant when she was young, a southern belle, a northern society leader; her life was full of conquests; her footsteps, which had wandered over the world, had left a phosphorescent wake of admiration. She had always been a personage. She was a power in Washington after the war; they had found her uniquely delightful in royal courts long before Americans were the fashion; she had been of importance in New York, and they had loved her epigrams in Boston; now, in her old age, she held a veritable little court of her own in the provincial western city which had been her husband's home. He went to congress from Fairport; he had made a fortune there, and when he died, many years ago, in Egypt, back to his western home, with dogged determination and lavish expenditures of both money and wit, his widow had brought him to rest. The most intense and solemn experience of a woman she had missed, for no children had come to them, but her husband had been her lover so long as he lived, and she had loved him. She had known great men; she had lived through wonderful events; and often her hand had been on those secret levers which move vast forces. She had been in tragedies, if an inviolable coolness of head, perhaps of heart, had shielded her from being of them. The husband of her youth, the nearest of her blood, the friends of her middle life—all had gone into the dark; yet here she sat, with her smooth skin and her still lustrous eyes and her fragrant hands, keenly smiling over her solitaire. The colonel wondered if he could ever reconcile himself with such philosophy to his own narrowed and emptied life; she was older than he, yet she could still find a zest in existence. All the great passions gone; all the big interests; and still her clever mind was working, happy, possibly, in its mere exercise, disdaining the stake, she who had had every success. What a vitality! He looked at her, puzzling. Her complexity bewildered him, he not being of a complex nature himself. As he looked, suddenly he found himself questioning why her face, in its revival of youthful smoothness and tint, recalled some other face, recently studied by him—a face that had worn an absolutely different expression; having the same delicate aquiline nose, the same oval contour, the same wide brows—who? who? queried the colonel. Then he nodded. Of course; it was the man with the moles, the brother. He looked enough like Mrs. Winter to be her kinsman. At once he put his guess to the test. "Aunt Becky," said he, "have you any kin I don't know about?"

"I reckon not. I'm an awfully kinless old party," said she serenely. "I was a Winter, born as well as married, and so you and Mel and Archie are double kin to me. I was an only child, so I haven't anything closer than third or fourth cousins, down in Virginia and Boston."

"Have you, by chance, any cousin, near or far, named Mercer?"

Resting her finger-tips on the cards, Aunt Rebecca seemed to let her mind search amid Virginian and Massachusetts genealogical tables. "Why, certainly," she answered after a pause, "there was Gen. Philemon Mercer—confederate army, you know—and his son, Sam Nelson; Phil was my own cousin and Sam Nelson my second, and Sam Nelson's sons would be my third, wouldn't they? Phil and Sam are both dead, and Winnie Lee, the daughter, is dead, and poor Phil—the grandson, you know—poor boy, he shot himself while at Harvard; but his brother Cary is alive."

"Do you know him?"

"Never saw him but once or twice. He has very good manners."

"Is he rich?"

"He was, but after he had spent his youth working with incredibile industry and a great deal of ability to build up a steel business and had put it into a little combination—not a big trust, just a genuine corporation—some of the financial princes wanted it for a club—to knock down bigger game, I reckon—and proceeded to cheapen the stock in order to control it. Cary held on desperately, bought more than he could hold, mortgaged everything else; but they were too big for him to fight. It was in 1903, you know, when they had an alleged financial panic, and scared the banks. Cary went to the wall, and Phil with him, and poor Phil killed himself. Afterward Cary's wife died; he surely did have a mean time. And, to tell you the truth, Bertie, I think there has been a little kink in Cary's mind ever since."

"Did you hold any of Cary's stock?" He was piecing his puzzle together.

"Yes; but my stock was all paid for, and I held on to it; now it is over par and paying dividends. Oh, the property was all right, had it been kept in honest hands and run for itself. The trouble with Cary was that in order to keep control of the property he bought a lot of shares on margins, and when they began to run downhill, he was obliged to borrow money on his actual holdings to protect his fictitious ones. The stock went so low that he was wiped out. He wouldn't take my advice earlier in the game; and I knew that it would only be losing money to lend it to him, later—still, sometimes I have been rather sorry I didn't. Would I better try the spade, Bertie, or the diamond?"

The colonel advised the spade. He wondered whether he should repeat to his aunt the few sentences which he had overheard from Mercer and his companion; but a belief that old age worries easily, added to his natural man's disinclination to attack the feminine nerves, tipped the scales against frankness. So, instead, he began to talk about Archie: what was he like? was he fond of athletics? or was he a bookish lad? Aunt Rebecca reported that he liked riding and golf; but he was not very rugged, and since his father's death he had seemed listless to a degree. "But he is better now," she added, with a trace of eagerness quite foreign to her usual manner. "Janet Smith has roused him up; and what do you suppose she has done? But really, you are the cause."

"I?" queried the colonel.

"Just you. Archie, Janet argued, is the kind of nature that must have some one to be devoted to."

"And has he taken a fancy to her? Or to you?"

Aunt Rebecca's eyes dulled a little and her delicate lips were twisted by a smile which had more wistfulness than humor in it. "I'm not a lovable person; anyhow, he does not love easily. We are on terms of the highest respect, even admiration, but we haven't got so far as friendship, far less comradeship. Janet is different. But I don't mean Janet; she has grown absurdly fond of him; and I think he's fond of her; but what she did was to make him fond of you. You, Gen. Rupert Winter; why, that boy could pass an examination on your exploits and not miss a question. Janet and he have a scrap-book with every printed word about you, I do believe. And she has been amazingly shrewd. We didn't know how to get the youngster back to his sports while he was out of school; and, in fact, an old woman like me is rather bewildered by such a young creature, anyhow; but Janet rode with him; you are a remarkable rider; I helped there, because I remembered some anecdotes about you at West Point—"

"But, my dear aunt—"

"Don't interrupt me, Bertie, it's a distinctly American habit. And we read in the papers that you had learned that Japanese trick fighting—jiu-jitsu—and were a wonder—"

"I'm not, I assure you; that beast of a newspaper man—"

"Never mind, if you are not a wonder, you'll have to be; you can take lessons in Los Angeles; there are quantities of Japs there. Why, even in Chicago, Janet picked up one, and we imported him, and Archie took lessons, and practices every day. There's a book in my bag, in the rack there, a very interesting book; Janet and I have both read it so we could talk to Archie. You would better skim it over a little if you really aren't an expert, enough so you can talk jiu-jitsu, anyhow; we can't be destroying Archie's ideals until he gets a better appetite."

"Well, upon my word!" breathed the colonel. "Do you expect me to be a fake hero? I never took more than two lessons in my life. That reporter interviewed my teacher, who was killed in the Japanese war, by the way; he went to the army after my second lesson. He didn't know any English beyond 'yes' and 'if you please;' and he used them both on the reporter, who let his own fancy go up like a balloon. Well, where is the book?"

He found it easily; and with a couple of volumes of another kidney, over which he grinned.

"The Hound of the Baskervilles and the Leavenworth Case! I've read them, too," he said; "they're great! And do you still like detective stories? You would have made a grand sleuth yourself, Aunt Becky." Again he had half a mind to speak of the occurrence at the station; again he checked the impulse. "I remember," he added, "that you used to hold strenuous opinions."

"You mean my thinking that the reason crimes escape discovery is not that criminals are so bright, but that detectives in general are so particularly stupid? Oh, yes, I think that still. So does Sir Conan Doyle. And I have often wished I could measure my own wits, once, with a really fine criminal intellect. It would be worth the risk!"

"Good heavens!" said the colonel, hastily.

There came a tap at the door.

"Millicent!" groaned Aunt Rebecca. "I know the coming of her step. No, don't stay, Bertie; go and get Janet and a rescue bridge party as quick as you can!"

"The original and only Aunt Rebecca," thought the colonel at the door, smiling. But, somehow, the handsome old dame never had seemed so nearly human to him before.

CHAPTER III.

The Train Robbers.

When the colonel awoke next morning the train was running smoothly over the Iowa prairies, while low hills and brick factory chimneys announced Council Bluffs. The landscape was wide and monotonous; a sweep of illimitable corn fields in their winter disarray, or bleakly fresh from the plow, all painted with a palette holding only drabs and browns; here and there a dab of red in a barn or of white in windmill or house; but these livelier tints so scattered that they were no more than pin spots on the picture. The very sky was as dimly colored as the earth, lighter, yet of no brighter hue than the fog which smoked up from the ground. Later in the spring this same landscape would be of a delicate and charming beauty; in summer or autumn it would make the beholder's pulse throb with its glorious fertility; but on a blurred March morning it was as dreary as the reveries of an aging man who has failed.

Nevertheless, Rupert Winter's first conscious sensation was not depression, only a little tingle of interest and excitement, such as stings pleasantly one who rises to a prospect of conflict in which he has the confidence of his own strength. "By Jove!" he w[illegible] "whatever makes me feel so kidd[illegible]?"

His first impulse was to peep through his curtains into the car. It wore its early morning aspect of muffled berths and stuffy curtains, among which Miss Smith's trig, carefully finished presence in a fresh white shirtwaist, attended by the pleasant whiffs of cologne water, gave the beholder a certain refreshing surprise. One hand (white and firm and beautifully cared for) held a wicker bottle, source of the pleasant whiffs; her sleek black braids were coiled about her comely head, and the hair grew very prettily in a blunted point on the creamy nape of her neck. It was really dark brown hair, but it looked black against the whiteness of her skin. She had very capable-looking shoulders, the colonel noted, and a flat back; perhaps she wasn't pretty, but in a long while he had not seen a more attractive looking woman. She made him think of a Bonne Celine rose, somehow. He could hear her talking to some one behind the berth's curtains. Could those doleful moans emerge from Archie? Could a Winter boy be whimpering about the jar of the train in that fashion? Immediately he was aware that the sufferer was Randall, for Miss Smith spoke: "Bring the tea, and lie down again, I'll attend to Mrs. Winter. Don't you worry!"

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Richard Carle and "Mary's Lamb" come to the New Plainfield theatre tonight. In this lively musical gambol, Mr. Carle is said to be at his best. The play enjoyed a run of three months in New York during the summer, and was received with enthusiasm. Mr. Carle, who had the leading role of a hen pecked husband, has the support of a big and capable company, including a chorus of exceptionally pretty girls.

Arnold Daly returns to this city tomorrow afternoon and night after an absence of some time in a brand new play "The Pickpockets," by C. M. S. McLellan, best known now as the author of "Leah Kreschna," though not entirely forgotten as the Hugh Morton of countless Casino successes. The new play, like the Mrs. Fiske vehicle, is of serious intent, though, despite its title it does not go to our lowly criminal classes. The pickpockets are criminals of a higher class, the term being metaphorically applied to those to whom money has given undue elevation. The play has, on the face of it, cost the author much thought, yet it is as he set, that whatever he has to say, whatever message he has to bring, he brings through the medium of action and drama. The play's chief merit, it is said, lies in the unrelenting piling up of situation upon situation, the steady forging on towards a crucial point where the intensity becomes almost nerve-racking, and the unflagging fusillade of points that reach home invariably. The play may teach, but it certainly does not preach. It has the same directness and the same timeliness, and the same power that has driven home plays on like subjects of the past few years. Arnold Daly's appearance in a new role, of a nature somewhat different from those with which he has generally been associated is awaited with interest. The part of David Murray calls for all the enthusiasm and fervor of this able young man, and is more than likely to be chronicled among his biggest personal successes. His leading lady, a young Norwegian actress named Katherine Kaelred, is new to our stage. Charles A. Stevenson heads the male side of the supporting roster, which also includes such competent players as Albert Bruening, Robert McWade, Gordon Johnstone and Frank Gheen.

When Ira D. Sankey whistled the tune of the "Ninety and Nine" mid the hills of Old Scotland, more than thirty years ago, he little dreamed that his song would one day furnish inspiration to a playwright for one of the best melodramas in recent years. The theme while it is by no means a new one permits of many possibilities and Ramsay Morris has woven a score or more of the characters one sees in every village replete with that characteristic freshness of the rural community and toned from the commonplace, by some really excellent scenic and mechanical effects. It enjoyed a run of more than five months at the Academy of Music in the city of New York, and the original cast and production assure a more than ordinary offering when it comes to the New Plainfield theatre Christmas afternoon and night.

THE PRUDENTIAL GIRL OF 1909.

The 1909 Girl is unusually attractive and portrays the true Prudential spirit shown when a person takes out life insurance to protect the home. She is sincere and homelike, honest and beautiful.

With soft blue eyes, strongly marked eyebrows, a well-moulded nose, full red lips, and a mass of dark chestnut hair, the 1909 Prudential Girl is sure to attract the public, as well as win a prominent place in the homes of The Prudential's millions of policy holders.

On the back of the calendar is a complete list of months and days for 1909 and a statement that you should protect your home through life insurance in The Prudential.

The company announces that a free copy of the calendar will be sent to any one who writes to the Home Office, Newark, N. J.

VELVET AND EMBROIDERY.

Many effective afternoon frocks for home wear are being made in soft velvet with plain close-fitting skirts, continued high above the line of the waist, in the form of a Princess corsage, and having the top of the bodice and the long close-fitting sleeves made of tucked net in the same shade as the velvet, and arranged in such a way that through the veiling of net insertion bands of fine gold and silver lace may be seen.

Other velvet gowns are adorned with elabarate embroideries carried out partly in shaded silks and partly in fine metallic threads, chosen in very soft colorings, so that the whole effect is that of some rich piece of Oriental work, faded and subdued by time. On a velvet gown in a soft tone of old blue, embroideries of this kind may be seen, with pale pink and green, mauve and gray among their colorings, the complicated design outlined with fine threads of copper and aluminium.

A Seasonable Dish.

All kinds of cooked game can be used for this dish. Free it from skin and bone and cut into neat slices; season them with cayenne, paprika, salt and a few drops of lemon juice; dip them into melted butter and cover with brown bread crumbs; lay the slices on a well-buttered baking tin and put them into a hot oven for a few minutes to get browned. Care must be taken that the meat does not get dried up. Serve in a circle. Fill the centre with fresh watercress previously seasoned with salt and lemon juice. Serve hot.

DUYCKINCK FAMILY STORY

Lineal Descendant Spends Twenty Years in Compiling Geneological Tables.

MANY FAMOUS RELATIVES.

Intermarry with the De Peysters, Vanderbilts, Van Wycks, Ludlow and Other Families.

After twenty years of preserving but fruitful labor, Whitehead Cornell Duyckinck, of this city, collaborating with Rev. John Cornell, both of whom are members of the New York Geoneological and Biographical Society, has published a record of the descendants of Evart Duyckinck, who settled in New Amsterdam, now New York, in 1638. The volume entitled, "The Duyckinck and Allied Families," is handsomely gotten up and is illustrated with portraits of famous members of the family. It also contains the family arms in colors. The introductory is written by John Cornell. A map of the original grants of village lots from the Dutch West India Company to the inhabitants of New Amsterdam is among the interesting illustrations.

These grants were made in 1642 and lie below what is now Wall street. The volume is published by Tobias A. Wright and is limited to 25 copies. It is peculiarly interesting to people of New Jersey inasmuch as many of the family live in this State.

Evart Duyckinck, or as the name occurs in the various records Duycking, Duyckingh, Duyckens, Duyken, Duicking, came to America from Borken, Holland, in 1638. He was in the service of the Dutch West India Company and was stationed in 1840 at Fort Hope, which occupied the present site of Hartford, Conn. In 1843 an English grant of land in New York was made to Evart Duyckinck, and there are also on record transfers made by him in that city. The records show that he was a portrait-painter, glazier and burner of glass.

This ancestor became a member of the Dutch church in New York in 1649. In 654 Director Stuyvesant gave him a patent for lands in Flatbush and ten years later he took the oath of allegiance to the English. At various times he occupied the offices of fire warden, and committeeman for public buildings. He died about 1702.

The New Jersey branch of the family settled in and around Somerville, Raritan and Lamberton. Among the original grants in this State was one of seven hundred acres to this family. One branch of the family was located in New Brunswick. W. C. Duyckinck, who is one of the compilers of the volume, resides here.

The Duyckinck family in tracing its ancestry claims relationship with such well-known families as Provoost, Van Wyck, Rutgers, White, Scott, Armour, Constables, De Pysters, Roosevelts, Hoffman, Duncans, Dodges, Hunts, Cornells, Pierreponts, McVickars, Knoxs, Van Renselaers, Bartows, Whitneys, Vanderbilts, Olcotts, Huntingtons, Phelps, Wolcotts, Shepards, Campbells, Thompsons, Prices, Websters, Van de Waters, Ludlows, Mortons, Crooke, Duanes, Powells, Lees, Verplanck, Livingstons, Bleecker, Sanders, Williamsons and the Halls.

Unity Lodge, K. of P. Elects.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., elected these officers Thursday night: Chancellor commander, Walter L. Hetfield; vice-chancellor commander, Samuel Rothberg; prelate, George Dean; keeper of records and seal, Frank Putnam; master of finance, Horace J. Martin, Sr.; master of exchequer, Samuel E. Umpston; master of work, Jeremiah Van Winkle; master at arms, A. E. Causebrook; inner guard, Robert Fitz Randolph; outer guard, Charles E. Harris; representative to grand lodge, A. E. Causebrook; alternate, George Dean; trustee for three years, Eugene V. Lorton.

Delta Upsilon Club Elects.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Delta Upsilon Club was held last night at the home of Lindsey Best, of Madison avenue, when officers were elected for the coming year. Lewis M. Booth, Swarthmore, '99, of Watchung avenue, was elected president; Rev. L. R. Howard, Williams, '98, of West Fifth street, vice-president, and Harold C. Fenno, Williams, '08, of Watchung avenue, secretary.

CHRISTMAS OBSERVANCE AT FIRST PRESBYTERIAN

In connection with the observance of Christmas at the First Presbyterian church, tomorrow, there will be special music at both the morning and evening services. The morning service will be under the auspices of the Sunday-school, at which time there will be carols by the school, anthems by the quartet choir, recitations by members of the intermediate and primary departments, short addresses by former superintendent, I. B. Hill and E. M. Cave and a short sermon by the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring.

The evening service will be entirely musical, and will be the first of a series to be given each month by the quartet under the direction of Clifford S. Braider, organist and choirmaster. Mrs. Guy Bender, soprano, will take the place of Miss Annie L. Case, who is detained at home by illness, while Miss Clara Van Fleet will be the pianist and Anton Gloeckner the violinist. The program follows:

Violin and piano, Berceuse-Godward; anthems, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," Nevin; "O Babe Divine," Dressler; "Star of the Orient," Shelley; "Arise, Shine,' Stephenson; trio, "Largo," organ, piano and violin, and the following solos: "Nazareth," Gounod, baritone; "Prince of Peace," Bullard, contralto.

ARRANGE TO CELEBRATE CHRISTMAS TOMORROW

The Park Avenue Baptist church has arranged an elaborate Christmas program for tomorrow, for both the morning service and for the session of the Sunday-school in the afternoon. The church and Sunday-school room will be appropriately decorated for the occasion. In the morning the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn, will preach a Christmas sermon and this musical program under the direction of Robert E. Humpston, organist and choirmaster, will be rendered by a chorus of twenty voices:

Organ prelude, "Pastoral Symphony," Handel; anthem, "Behold! Bring You Good Tidings," Geibel; anthem, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," Hall; response, selected; anthem, "The Angels are Singing,' Lacey; anthem, "Glory to God in the Highest," Simper; organ postlude, selected.

In the afternoon this program will be given under the direction of Superintendent George E. Hall:

Opening selection, orchestra; carol, school; responsive reading and prayer, Rev. A. E. Finn; carol, school; "The Christmas Story," Mrs. D. M. Runyon; "O, The Little Town of Bethlehem," quartet; carol, school; offertory, orchestra; carol, school; recitation and carol, primary department; solo and chorus, Miss Nora Schenck and school; recitation and carol, primary department; carol, school; remarks in connection with gifts from the school to The Plainfield Day Nursery, Superintendent G. E. Hall; carol, school; selection, orchestra; benediction, pastor.

A prominent place on the program has been reserved for the gifts from the school to the Day Nursery, such as provisions, clothing, toys, games, books, etc. Superintendent Hall has asked the school to make this a "giving Christmas," instead of a "receiving Christmas," and he has arranged to have the Day Nursery reap the benefit of the plan.

Columbia Lodge Entertains.

Columbia Lodge, No. 58, Ancient Order United Workmen, held its final meeting of the year last night, and in connection with the retirement of the present officers, Master Joseph D. Moon arranged for an informal entertainment, given by a clever sleight-of-hand performer of New York. He occupied the greater part of the program, after which refreshments were served. The officers-elect will be installed on Janaury 15.

Arnold Daly Here Today.

Supported by a specially selected company, Arnold Daly, the versatile actor and producer, comes to the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight in his new play, "The Pickpockets." The company includes Charles A. Stevenson, leading man for Mrs. Leslie Carter, and Miss Katherine Kaelred, the popular Norwegian actress.

Horse Breaks Shaft in Fall.

Ahorse belonging to William Campbell, the borough liveryman, slipped on the ice as it was going up the hill leading to the East bound Central station, this morning, and fel heavily. One shaft was broken and the harness was slightly damaged.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS' MINSTREL

In Darky Garb, Win Plaudits of Big Audience with Jokes and Songs

NOTED ACTORS ARE IMITATED.

Thirty-five in Chorus, with Association Orchestra, Add to Life of Performance—Will Repeat Tonight.

The Y. M. C. A. boys' department gave a pleasing minstrel entertainment at the association hall last night. A good sized audience was present in spite of the bad weather. The show will be repeated tonight and it is expected that the auditorium will be crowded.

The end men's antics drew continuous applause. Their songs were especially good. Arthur Stutsman represented that impoh'tant pusson, Miss Cluffy Puffles, and J. W. Lyman was "a real lady with fine clo's." There couldn't have been much love between the two, because they had to be held apart at times, and Cluffy insisted on calling Miss Lane "a nigger wench." The dancing of these two was especially well received.

C. B. Batchelor as Ephraim Thompson, and Clarence Steiner as Rastus Johnson, had a large supply of jokes which were fresh enough to have a pure food stamp on. One of the hits was when Ephraim brought Interlocutor John Loizeaux's imaginary brother from Chicago by 'phone, dumping a person on the stage, who proved to be W. R. Richards, with a trumpet harmonica, on which he played some pleasing selections.

Carroll C. Taylor sang a solo, called "Mandy Lane;" and Arthur S. Martin sang "Roses, Roses, Roses." "Down in Spaghetti Row," was sung by Raymond Manley, and "I Know That I'll be Happy Till I Die," by Augustus Peterson.

End songs, "Why was I Ever Born Lazy?" by Arthur Stutsman; "Give Me a Big Bass Drum," by Clarence Steiner; "Take Plenty of Shoes," by J. W. Lyman; and "All Wise Chickens Follow Me," by C. B. Batchelor, called for encores.

One of the principal features of the show was a sketch, "Rogers Brothers on Football and Other Things," by Wallace Day and C. B. Batchelor.

An Arab love song, by Alfred P. Manley, and "Some Heart is Sighing," by Howard Riley and several songs by the entire chorus completed the program of music. The entertainment closed with "The Dance of the Jumping Jacks," by these boys: Ruskin Watts, Arthur Martin, W. Brower, Raymond Manley, Craig Blair, Allen Diman, Theodore Champlin.

The members of the minstrel chorus were: Raymond Manley, Arthur Martin, Alfred Manley, Carroll Taylor, Howard Riley, Augustus Peterson, Cedric Ostrom, Charles Taylor, Craig Blair, Frank Dunning, Bert Naylor, Rae Boice, Roy Love, Theodore Champlin, William Brower, Richard Taylor, Charles Martin, Gilbert Lewis, Walter Cuming, Donald Smink, Irving Manley, Paul Manning, Donald Updyke, Henry Zook.

The orchestra: Miss Elsie Knowlton, piano; Mr. F. Howard, Mr. C. Fisher, violins; Mr. J. Emery, cornet; Mr. J. P. Faber, flute; Mr. C. Lawson, trombone; Mr. P. Hapney, drums. The performance was in charge of J. C. Roeber, of New York, who choached the entertainers.

MISS LOUISE BOOTH IS INTRODUCED TO SOCIETY.

Miss Louise Booth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Booth, of Central avenue, was formally introduced to society at a reception given at her home Thursday night. The debuntante was assisted in receiving by Miss Mary Runkle, Miss Lillian King, Miss Marguerite Carpenter, Miss Marion Browne, Miss Van Vliet, Miss Mary Perkins and Miss Caroline Martin.

Miss Booth was the recipient of a large number of beautiful flowers. The Neapolitan Orchestra, of New York, furnished the music for the affair.

A Superb Calendar.

"Congenial Friends" is the title of The Plainfield Trust Company calendar for 1909 and is from the original of William Verplanck Birney. It depicts a company of friends at a gentleman's country house. They are grouped around a cheering open fire while one of the company reads from a favorite author. It breathes the charm of a delightful English country house with its ample fire places and old time furniture. This calendar may be obtained by depositors of The Trust Company if they will apply personally.

RAHWAY OFFICE TO GO AFTER THE MAN

Governor Fort and the members of the New Jersey Reformatory Commission have selected a new head for the Rahway Reformatory, but refuse to say who he is. He will not be, however, one of the many applicants for the position The man is from North Jersey, but not a Newarker.

Every member of the commission was present at a meeting held in the office of Edward D. Duffield, one of their number, in the Prudential building yesterday afternoon, and President Richard H. Wilson, of Metuchen, was in the chair. The main business was the selection of a successor to the late Joseph W. Martin as superintendent of the Rahway Reformatory, but former Governor Voorhees declared that the discussion of that subject took very little time, and that most of the time was spent preparing the annual report of the commission to the Governor.

About 100 applications were received for the position of superintendent of the reformatory, but the choice had narrowed down to four It was not expected, though, that the commission would be a unit on the choice to be made, as there had been a difference of opinion as to the qualifications of the four aspirants, and the selection seemed to be the only logical solution of the problem.

After the meeting was over it was declared that nothing was to be given out for publication, but former Governor Voorhees later declared that the commission had succeeded in selecting a man who was not an applicant for the position, and inasmuch as the commission did not know whether he would accept the position, his name could not be given. The salary for the position as fixed by law is $3,000.

BOY GETS FIVE YEARS.

Thirteen-year-old Lad Pleaded Guilty to Manslaughter.

John Reynolds, thirteen years old, was taken from Jersey City to the Trenton State Prison yesterday to serve five years for killing Peter Bachinella, fifteen years old, last July. Reynolds recently pleaded guilty to manslaughter, and was sentenced by Judge Blair. Reynolds is the youngest person sent to State prison from Hudson county in many years.

Bachinella, who was a ragpicker, was leaning over an ash barrel, when his ragbag was cut by Reynolds. Bachinella struck Reynolds, who thrust his pocketknife into the ragpicker's heart. Two years ago Reynolds was in the care of the Jersey City Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, whose agents charged that his parents were hard drinkers and neglected their children.

Funeral of Mrs. J. B. Drayton.

The funeral service of Mrs. John B. Drayton was held at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the residence of the daughter, Mrs. R. Henry Depew, on Hillside avenue, and was largely attended. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, assisted by Rev. Mrogan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church, was in charge of the service. The burial was in Hillside cemetery and the pall-bearers were Augustus Kleinecks Stuart H. Patterson, of this city; William Calloway, of Wyoming; Joseph Gilmore, of Jersey City; Paul Spencer, of Philadelphia, and William Radford, of Montclair.

Would Place Tablets to Lincoln.

Superintendent of Schools John R. Wilson and Principal Ide G. Sargeant, of School No. 10, at Paterson, yesterday appointed a committee for the purpose of drawing up an appeal to citizens for contributions to the fund for the civic celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of Lincoln's birth. It is hoped by the committee that sufficient money will be raised to place a bronze memorial tablet of Lincoln in each of the public schools in the city in addition to defraying the expenses of the general celebration that is planned for February 12, next.

May Rebuild New Brunswick Church

The trustees of St. James' Methodist Episcopal church, New Brunswick, have decided to recommend to the congregation that they do not join any other church, but remain a distinct congregation, as at present. Their church was destroyed by fire last Sunday. It is probable that the congregation will vote next week to rebuild. A. W. Pettit was elected president of the board to succeed the late Joseph Fisher.

Holiday Party at Park Club.

The Misses Van Deventer, daughter, of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob K. Van Deventer, of Netherwood, have sent out invitations for a bridge party on Wednesday, December 30, at the Park Club.

PARTNERS IN SQUABBLE

Lewis C. Van Nest Appeals to Chancery Court to Have Wm. H. Bohl Account.

HEARING HELD NEXT TUESDAY.

Complainant Alleges Concern Is Heavily in Debt and Asks For a Receiver.

A complaint has been filed in the Court of Chancery at Trenton by Lewis C. Van Nest, of this city, against William H. Bohl, his partner, for an accounting. Van Nest charges that he and Bohl entered into a partnership agreement for the purpose of buying and selling sash, doors and blinds under the firm name of Bohl and Van Nest, and which was made July 15, 1908. The agreement shows that Bohl was to rent to the firm the premises at 218-220 East Fourth street, for the term of one year, to be the interest of $3,000 at six per cent. and the payment of all taxes and assessments against the property. It was also agreed that Bohl would sell the premises for $3,000 if bought before August, 1909.

It was also agreed that each partner should have $15 each week for his own use. Van Nest charges that he has since the making of the agreement put all his time in the business and that he has advanced several hundred dollars and has tried to make the business a success, and he says that Bohl has not devoted his time and attention to the success of the business, and he also charges that Bohl "has withdrawn from said account more money than was ever by him contributed to the same, and has frequently withdrawn money from the account of said partnership to pay his own personal and private obligations, which were in no way connected with said partnership business," and that the "said William H. Bohl has continually neglected the business.

Van Nest charges that the business is not a success, that they are largely in debt and that the assets are not sufficient to pay he debts. Van Nest also charges that the firm owes Empire Sash and Door Co. $1,550 D. M. Nesbit Co. $600, the Worden Lumber and Manufacturing Co. about $300, Pittsburg Plate Glass Co. $150 and E. A. Van Nest about $1,000, the latter being for borrowed money, total debts being about $4,000; that the total assets are about $3,000. He also charges they have no cash in bank, and that certain notes were protested for nonpayment and that Bohl has refused to pay any part of same.

Van Nest alleges that Bohl has repeatedly said that he would not put up any money and that he intended to close the business out. He also claims that the bills asks for an accounting and also prays for an injunction.

The matter was presented to Vice-Chancellor Howell at Newark and he has made an order requiring Bohl to show cause before him in Newark next Tuesday why a receiver should not be appointed and also enjoins Bohl or anyone else from removing or disposing of the assets in anyway until after the matter has been disposed of by the court.

W. P. HALL TO SPEAK AT Y. M. C. A. TOMORROW.

William Phillips Hall, president of the Hall Signal Company, known throughout the country as the "Business Man's Evangelist," will speak at the men's meeting in Y. M. C. A. hall tomorrow afternoon. For years he has devoted whatver time he has been able to snatch from the direction of his great business enterprises to evangelistic work. In this work he has been notably successful, both as a speaker and as an organizer of great campaigns.

Mr. Hall's subject will be "The Life of Power." C. J. Davies, of Philadelphia, the leader of the famous Moody Male Quartette, will render several gospel solos.

Belated Wedding Announcement.

Announcement is made today of the marriage of Miss Edna Craven, daughter of Edwin Craven, of Matawan, and Walter Wilson, third son of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wilson, of West Third street. The ceremony was performed on Election day at Westfield, Rev. W. I. Steans, of that place, performing the ceremony. Mr. Wilson is about eighteen years of age, while the bride is twenty-one.

Will Address Young People.

LOCAL DEMOCRATS PICK COUNTY COMMITTEEMEN

Democratic primaries were held at the Hotel Kensington, last night, when members of the county committee were chosen and there was a discussion as to the advisability of forming a Central Democratic Club. All present favored the idea believing that such an organization would tend to strengthen the party in this city. The question will be discussed at more length at another meeting to be held soon. A committee of five was appointed to arrange the details for the organization of such a club; also to plan for a banquet to be held this winter.

Patrick J. Reville, as chairman, presided at the meeting; Frank J. Shattle was secretary; John C. McCarthy judge of election and Alexander Kane inspector of election.

These county committeemen were chosen:

First ward, first district, John P. Owens; second district, Alexander Kane; Second ward, first district, James E. Martine; second district, Joseph H. Harrigan; Third ward; first district, Louis Ellis; second district, Frank J. Shattle; Fourth ward, first district, Stephen H. Schleif; second district, Patrick J. Reville third district, John C. McCarthy.

NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION AT POLICE HEADQUARTERS

Mayor Charles J. Fisk announced today that the customary New Year's Day reception, which is given by the chief executive and other officials, would be held on the coming January 1 at the new police station at Fourth and Sycamore streets. The building has been completed and the arrangement for holding the function there was made for the purpose of giving the citizens an opportunity to inspect it. Everyone is invited, the women especially, and members of the police department will be on hand to show visitors about.

The reception will begin at 2 o'clock and Mayor Fisk will be assisted in presiding by Judge William N. Runyon, the members of the Common Council and Chief of Police Kiely. The police chiefs of Elizabeth, New Brunswick and other places are to be invited and the probabilities are that the building will be thronged until late in the evening. The receptions of other years in the mayor's office have proved very popular and the added feature to the coming one will make it a decidedly interesting event.

The members of the police committee of the Common Council will hold a meeting tonight or Monday for the purpose of inspecting the new station to see if all the specifications have been lived up to previous to having the structure of the City Fathers. While the furniture has not yet been installed, everything has been ordered and will be in place by the coming Tuesday or Wednesday.

The police have been using the former Boys' Club building on Sycamore street, as headquarters since the removal from East Front street and the change to the new building will be gladly welcomed by them. The latter is one of the most complete structures of the kind in the State and will serve the needs of Chief Kiely and his men for many years to come.

PERSEVERANCE NOMINATIONS.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., elected the following officers at its meeting, last night: Chancellor commander, Charles A. Peterson; vice-chancellor, R. B H. Dalley; master of the work, B. J. Scgreiner; prelate, Fred Douglas; master at arms, J. B. Higgins; inner guard, John Kenney and William Heckel; master of exchequer, Thos Osment and S. J. Robinson; master of finance, Edward Bowman, S. J Robinson, William Baker and J. B. Higgins; keeper of records and seal, Clarence B. Rittenhouse; trustee, B. J. Schreiner; representative to the Grand Lodge, Thomas Caleen; alternate, Morgan Turton.

Journeymen Barbers Elect.

The Journeymen Barbers' International Union of America, Local 315 has elected these officers: President, Ralph Di Armient; vice-president, John C. Powers; corresponding and financial secretary, Charles E. Paglicua; recording secretary, Frank Caruso; treasurer, Albert Braun; sergeant-at arms, W. R. Welsch; trustees, C. Kardnan, M. Acolia and W. Reinman.

Football Players Feast.

The Thanksgiving day victory of the Plainfield High School second football team over Westfield was celebrated yesterday afternoon by a banquet.

H. B. SUYDAM FATALLY SHOT

Plainfield Councilman Murderously Attacked in His Brokerage Office by J. C. Lumsden, a New York Inventor.

VICTIM DYING IN HOSPITAL.

The Prisoner, Who Refuses to Make Statement, Had Business Dealings with Suydam—Both Lungs Pierced.

With two bullets in his body, fired by a business associate who believed that money rightfully belonging to him was being withheld, Councilman Harry B. Suydam, of Clinton avenue, this city, was removed from his office to the Hudson street hospital, New York, this morning, in a dying condition. The first missile pierced the left lung, just below the heart, while the second passed through the right lung. Both were located by the physicians but the patient's condition forbade any attempt at an operation for removal. It was said at 2 o'clock this afternoon that his condition is precarious.

John S. Lumsden, 31 years old, an inventor, living at 313 West Fifty-seventh street, Manhattan, was locked up by the police as the assailant after he had admitted firing the shots. He was captured after he had made a desperate attempt to escape but maintained a calm demeanor when examined at the Church street station.

Mr. Suydam is a curb broker and has an office at 39 Broad street. He left home this morning on the 8:39 train, which he boards at Clinton avenue, and reached his place of business at 9:55. Lumsden was in waiting for him and the two adjourned to a private compartment. The former was greatly excited and previous to withdrawing for a conference, addressed some words in an angry tone to Mr. Suydam. They were closeted for barely more than two or three minutes when the two pistol reports rang out in close succession and Lumsden dashed from the room.

Mr. Suydam's office overlooks the Broad street curb market where scores of brokers were busy shouting stocks. The pistol shots were plainly heard by them and while many made a rush to the building to learn the cause, employes in the structure swarmed to the hallways at the same time. Among the latter was George A. Downes, who stood near the men when the shots were fired. Downs grappled Lumsden and the brief delay in the assailant's flight gave others an opportunity to render assistance to Downs. Lumsden was held until the police came but continued to struggle until he was borne to the floor. In the meantime, Mr. Suydam's condition had been discovered and an ambulance was summoned ot convey him to the hospital.

An investigating was conducted by the police to learn what led up to the shooting and it was found that the two men had been interested in the promoting of a facial massage machine invented by Lumsden. Mr. Suydam had been instrumental in securing capital for its manufacture, among the men who advanced money being several Plainfielders. The inventor was brought to this city by the councilman last Spring and it is said that Former Mayor James F. Buckle, Councilman R. I. Tolles and George J. Tobin were interested in the contrivance to the extent of assisting in the finances.

When the two men engaged in the argument, this morning, it was said to be about the money that had been advanced for the machine. From the few snatches of conversation caught by people about the place it appears that Lumsden believed a part of the capital was being kept back by Mr. Suydam for no just cause. This the latter seemed to be denying and the argument was in progress when the shooting occurred. One version of the affair has it that the pistol was on a desk in Mr. Suydam's office and that the Plainfielder made a move as if to pick it up, causing Lumsden to jump

IN EVENING DRESS THEY ROB BANKS.

Drive Into Two Nebraskan Towns in Auto, Dynamite Safes, Shoot and Escape.

Grand Island, Neb., Dec. 19.—Attired in full evening dress, even to silk hats and kid gloves, six men rode into the little Nebraskan town of Keene in a handsome automobile yesterday, dynamited the safe in the Farmers and Merchants' Bank there, secured $8,000, and, reentering their car, sped swiftly therein to Gibbon, thirty miles north of Keene, where they blew up the Commercial Bank, got away with $2,500, and after a desperate battle with citizens, in which many shots were exchanged and one of the highwaymen was wounded, made their escape.

Only one man at Keene saw the robbers. He did not know that they had committed the robbery when he saw them, but observing the fashionable dress, supposed them to be a party of city gentlemen out on a lark. A few minutes later, however, it was discovered what they had done, and a deputy sheriff, with a posse of citizens and bloodhounds, set out in pursuit of them.

At Gibbon the explosion awakened citizens of the town, and when Vice-President Halloway, of the bank, with others hastened to the scene of the robbery, he found four men in evening dress and wearing silk hats standing guard in front of the bank. They opened fire upon the party. Many shots were exchanged, and in the midst of the excitement the robbers escaped with their money. On of them was wounded and had to be lifted into the automobile.

Up to a late hour last night the men had not been captured.

WOMAN'S NOVEL PLEA.

Says Convicted Once She Cannot Be Put in Jeopardy Again.

James M. Trimple, on behalf of Mrs. Mary Brennan, of Montclair, yesterday offered a plea of autrefois convict in the Quarter Sssions Court. If Judge Ten Eyck had accepted the plea the case would have ended then and there, but the matter was held over until certain matters could be cleared up. Meanwhile a plea of not guilty was entered until the court reached a decision.

The plea means that, having been convicted and punished for an offense once, the accused could not be again put in jeopardy for the same transgression of the law. Mrs. Brennan, who keeps a small grocery store was convicted of selling bottled beer to railroad brakemen and fined $20 by Recorder Yost. Later the case was submitted to the Grand Jury, who returned two indictments against the woman, and it was on these bills that the plea was offered.

Judge Ten Eyck, not Prosecutor Mott, were ready to pass upon the plea, and by consent the case went over. The court will also be asked to say whether the Grand Jury has a right to return more than one indictment for selling liquor without a license.

SATIN TUBING IS A POPULAR TRIMMING.

Soutache braid has found a serious rival.

Satin tubing—from the narrowest padded cord to an example which is not far from being as substantial as the India rubber tubing for gardening purposes—is an accessory without which no self-respecting couturiere would consider herself fully equipped. This tubing forms the basis for the trimming and embroidering of every description of gown, from the evening toilette to the coat and skirt, while it seems in a fair way to become the favorite decoration for evening wraps, provided the craze for it does not evaporate as quickly as it began.

Large dahlia motifs simply designed of loops of these satin cords are one of the most popular decorations, while in place of the substantial heading which outlines the ruched sleeves of tulle or lace, loops of the same are introduced all down the seam with capital effect. The panels of the cloth gown are, besides, not infrequently outlined with huge buttons simply composed of coils of the cord in the shell design which is so popular.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Lyman, the announcement of whose marriage was made a few days ago, are making their home with the groom's parents on Washington avenue.

Miss Jessamine Burd, contralto, of the First Presbyterian church quartet, sang at a concert given by an entertainment club of New York in the Astor Galleries of the Waldorf, Tuesday afternoon.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., will meet Tuesday night and arrange for the installation of the officers-elect at the first meeting to be held in January.

hind the base line until the service has been delivered.

Law 8. The service shall be delivered from the right and left courts alternately, beginning from the right in every game, even though odds be given or owed, and the ball served shall drop within the service line, half-court line, and side line of the court which is diagonally opposite to that from which it was served, or upon such line.

Law 9. It is a fault if the server commit any breach of Law 7, or if the service be delivered from the wrong court, or if the ball served drop in the net or beyond the service line, or if it drop out of court or in the wrong court. If the server in attempting to serve miss the ball altogether, it does not count a fault, but if the ball be touched, no matter how slightly, by the racket, a service is thereby delivered, and the laws governing the service at once apply.

The umpire-linesmen rules are to be as follows: To call a fault (subject to Regulation 12) in every case where he is not satisfied that the service laws have been strictly observed. It is the duty of a line umpire to decide strokes in relation solely to the line for which he is appointed umpire, and to call a fault in every case where he is not satisfied that the service laws have been strictly observed, so far as the same line is concerned.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Christmas service will be held at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow morning and the Sunday-school exercises will be held in the afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with a special program.

The Young Women's Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held its monthly meeting last night and transacted routine business, during which there was an informal discussion of plans for the winter.

The Primary and Junior Teachers' Union will hold its Christmas party Monday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A Hall at 3:45 o'clock. Each member is requested to bring a present not to cost more than five cents. All are invited.

Charles L. Lewis, of the Lotus Glee Club, who made a trip to Panama, will give an illustrated lecture of his trip in Vincent chapel, Monday night, under the auspices of the Epworth League. There will be a social hour and refreshments. A silver offering will be received.

THIRTY FAMILIES RUN FROM INCENDIARY FIRE.

Thirty families were driven from their home by a fire late Thursday night in the apartment-house in Avenue C, near West Twenty-fifth street, Bayonne.

The blaze was in the basement of the building, and according to the firemen, was of incendiary origin. They claim that when they broke into the basement there was a strong odor of kerosene oil. The damage was slight. The building is owned by Recorder Hyman Lazarus.

Industrial Revival in Glen Gardner.

Glen Gardner, Dec. 19.—Thirty-five years ago this village was the manufacturing centre of Hunterdon county. More business was done here than in half a dozen other towns in the surrounding country. The Gardner Brothers had three large factories running, the Young factory was turning out chairs day and night, and the late Dr. T. Edgar Hunt was the proprietor of two large factories where picture frames and moldings were made. Dr. Hunt's widow has just sold one of the factories, several acres of land and the mill dam and water power to the Lebanon Milling and Producing Company of Plainfield. The dam will be repaired and the raceway cleaned at once. A spur will be built from the factory to the railroad nearby, and repairs commenced at an early date. It is said that the firm will be ready for operations by the first of March.

Egerton R. Young to Speak Here.

Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church, has secured Egerton R. Young, the famous writer of stories for boys and girls, to give one of his delightful descriptive lectures in Vincent chapel, Saturday night, January 2, under the auspices of the Junior Epworth League. A general invitation will be sent to all the Sunday-schools and young people's societies of the churches to attend the lecture, which will be free. There is probably no better known writer of literature for young people and he has the happy faculty of being a fascinating story teller.

Hurled to Death by Train.

While in Elizabeth looking for work, Richard Farrell, of Webster, Mass., a carpet weaver, thirty-six years old, was struck and killed at 10:45 o'clock last night at the South Elizabeth Station of the Pennsylvania Railroad by an eastbound express train. His body was badly mangled and was removed to Stiner's morgue at Elizabethport. He came to Elizabeth accompanied by John Murphy, another resident of Webster. Murphy said they started to cross the tracks when the train came along.

BASEBALL.

A St. Louis enthusiast has broken into poetry over the coming of Roger Bresnahan to that city. It is safe to say that Roger's managing will be better than the poetry.

Extensive improvements are being made in the Cleveland baseball field. Among other things the diamond will be raised.

Joe Cantillion offered to trade Pitcher Burns for Hobe Ferris, but after Hedges recovered from his swoon he declined the offer.

The University of Pennsylvania faculty athletic committee has in its possession proof that Joseph Londrigan, the crack second baseman, is a professional, and he will play no more ball for Pennsylvania. It is said that Connie Mack has first claim on his services.

At least four Eastern League clubs—Buffalo, Newark, Rochester and Toronto—are to have new managers next season, and maybe Baltimore will, too.

Connie Mack has offered Catcher Blue and one other player for Frank Roth, the Milwaukee backstop.

President Robison of the St. Louis Nationals says in regard to the recent three cornered deal: "Those arguments that we have broken up our team to get Bresnahan will not sound so good if you give the matter a little thought. Baseball men have been telling me for several seasons that I had the greatest pitching staff in the world. What did it profit? For three whole seasons we were in the last place nearly all the time, losing games with such regularity that we were standing jokes in baseball circles. What good, therefore, were our great pitchers? What we needed was a manager, and in sacrificing some of our pitching strength to secure one I think we made a good move. Certainly we cannot be worse than in the past. You cannot push a team lower down than last place, and when any changes are made in a tail-end organization the chances are that they will prove for the better."

Here's the latest about Rube Waddell: The erratic pitcher, who has been acting as clerk in a hotel at Sparta, Ill., fell down stairs the other night and fractured two of his ribs. This will be an excellent excuse for a demand for some Christmas advance money.

Joe Kelley, who has just been released outright by President Dovey of the Boston Nationals, will probably take the matter to the courts. When Kelley signed a two years contract with Dovey last winter in the presence of President Pulliam the latter said that the document was ironclad and bound both parties to it. Kelley says Dovey is a contract breaker and that he will bring suit immediately for next year's salary.

TENNIS.

England's draft of the new lawn tennis "foot fault" or service rule has been received in this country officially. It was adopted by the English Lawn Tennis Association at the annual National meeting, held in the Cannon Street Hotel, London, E. C. The important feature of the new rule is that it is so worded as to make it obligatory for the server to stand with both feet on the ground and so obviates the much-discussed running start for the net.

The second section of the rule also makes a slight change, in that the service shall invariably begin from the right court in spite of odds. The third section more fully defines faults of service. The entire rule is greatly strengthened by the addition of new regulations governing umpire and linesmen, compelling them to render decision against server when in doubt.

It is understood that the United States National Lawn Tennis Association is to adopt the same rules for players of this country at its meeting in February. The service rules follow:

Law 7. The server shall, before commencing to serve, stand with both feet at rest on the ground behind, (i. e., further from the net than,) the base line and within the limits of the imaginary continuation of the centre service and side lines, and thereafter the server shall not run, walk, hop, or jump before the service has been delivered, but the server may raise one foot from and if desired, replace it on the ground, provided that both feet are kept be-

JERSEY BARS PENNA'S GRAIN, MEAT, CATTLE

Steps have been taken along the New Jersey shore of the Delaware river to effectually stop the shipment into this State from Pennsylvania of all grain, hay and livestock, and also all dressed meat. Inspectors of the State Board of Health have been stationed at all of the ferries along the upper river, and nothing that could carry the "foot and mouth disease" into this State is allowed to enter. The millers in this section have been directed not to accept any shipments of grain from across the river, and butchers have been forbidden to handle any of the meat from Pennsylvania. Cattle on the hoof is, of course, barred.

The order has caused confusion because many butchers had contracts for supplies with Pennsylvania shippers, and they have had to transfer their business to the Western packing houses. The millers have also been forced to buy grains in the West for future milling. The shutting off of this market will be seriously felt by the farmers in Pennsylvania, as a large part of the grain raised in the northeast corner of the State has been milled in this county.

Some of the local farmers have also been hit, as they relied upon the Pennsylvania supply of hay and straw for their stock, and will have to buy at more distant points, with added cost of transportation. It is said the New York City Department of Health has inspectors keeping a close watch upon the farms in this section which ship milk to that city. Thus far the disease has not got any hold here.

AGRICULTURISTS PLAN FOR SCHOOL GARDEN.

The Union county Board of Agriculture plans the establishment of school gardens in the county municipalities for the training of youths who desire to become husbandmen. The boards expects to have the co-operation various school boards in advancing this project.

The board is also making active preparations for a farmers' institute at Westfield on January 21. John B. Smith, State Entomologist, will speak, as will Professor Blake, of the State Agricultural School; Professor Menkler, of this school; State Forester Gaskell and Professor Spensor, of the State Board of Education.

Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Armstrong and family, of Duer street, have gone to Morristown to visit friends.

Christian Optimism

HAVE FAITH IN GOD

"Have faith in God." That is the word of our Lord and the very keynote of His preaching. When men asked about working the works of God, Jesus replied, "this is the work of God that ye believe on Him whom He hath sent." The basis of all blessing and activity was faith and faith in Him. When any one asked His help, He always demanded faith, as the means of His help. He said that God would bless men, not only because of His power, but according to their faith. He declared that when men prayed, it should always be accompanied by faith. Jesus never taught that the faculty of faith was a gift bestowed on some and not on others. All men possess the sense of faith, though it is a developed sense in some, and a disused sense in others. Some men have confessed that for scientific reasons they have been compelled to abandon their their faith in God and His revelation. Jesus never pitied those men, for He expected them to use their sense of faith as they would use their sense of sight. As the beauty of the landscape is apprehended by the sense of sight, and the exquisite harmonies of music are revealed to us by the sense of hearing, so the consciousness of God's presence in our lives, is communicated to our ense of faith. Faith is but another word for religion.

The Psalmist had a vivid sense of the presence of God in his practical life, when he exclaimed: "Whither shall I go from Th yspirit, or whither shall I flee from Thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven Thou art there, if I make my bed in sheol, behold, Thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me." He felt that he could not get away from God's presence and power. Let that same comforting and inspiring faith be yours. Through all the varying circumstances of your life, His hand is leading you and His right hand holding you.

Add to this thought the fuller revelation of our Lord. He said to His disciples as they were gathered around the table at the Last Supper, "Ye believe in God, Believe also in Me." Trust this perfect revelation I have given you of the loving interest of God. Remember that I have told you that He is the Father of each individual soul, and that He looks after the details of each individual life. Do not think of being under the stern laws of nature; you are under the protection and guidance of a loving father. The difficulty with men today, in this nervous age, is, that they do not perfectly believe God, and yet faith in God is what they need more than anything else.

The late George J. Romanes was one of those men whose scientific studies destroyed his belief in God and His revelation, but later, he returned to his original faith in Christ and then he said: "I take it as unquestionably true that there is a vacuum in the soul of man which nothing can fill save faith in God."

Bishop Fallows, who is associated with the Emmanuel movement in Chicago, tells the story of a young man who was hindered in carrying on his studies by mental exhaustion. His physician declared that he could do nothing for him, so he sent him to Saint Pauls church of Chicago, that he might receive mental treatment. A few questions reevaled the young man's difficulty. In his childhood, he believed in a God who was interested in men. An elderly relative, unfortunately came into his life. This relative did not believe that there was a God. He despised religion, and the influence of the older man soon produced its dire effect upon the mind of the younger man. The mental struggle took hold of his nervous system and made him a nervous wreck. He had no faith in God to help him in his deep distress. He needed his old faith—the faith of his childhood and boyhood. It was a return to this faith that saved him. It was by seeking reasons for his faith, instead of against his faith, that brought about his recovery.

Bishop Fallows tells another story of a young woman, who before her marriage, was a busy church member, but afterwards the bent of her mind was for pleasure, so that she forgot her religion. Her method of living resulted in a nervous breakdown, for which she tried all kinds of cure, but she found the real cure only when she returned to God and to His service.

The dearest treasure a man has is his faith. It is his real and abiding possession. He may be rich today and poor tomorrow, well this morning, and sick tonight; but his faith in God keeps him steady amid all these earthly changes.

I believe as some one else has phrased it, that "every normal and legitimate desire or demand of our lives, is infinitely provided for in the divine economy, and will be fully met under the proper conditions."

Remember this is God's world, and God is its living, omnipotent Sovereign. If you open your heart in faith to Him, He will do for you above all you can ask, or even think,—for "with Him all things are possible"—and if you can believe Him, you will recognize that "all things are possible to him that believeth." One of the greatest needs of Christian people today, is to pray that prayer of the disciples—"Lord, increase our faith."

They used to sing, when I was a boy, "I can, I will, and I do believe." That is optimism. Train your mind to believe that God is guiding you to the best things, and let that faith illumine your life.

JAIL OR PAY POLL TAX.

Passaic Man Refused to Heed Bill That Misspelled Name.

Edward Osmand, of Haskells, Passaic county, was taken to the sheriff's office in Paterson last night by Deputy Sheriff Beattie because he had failed to pay his poll tax of $1.50.

William H. Post, tax collector of Pompton township, in which Osmand lives, aided in making the arrest. Osmand explained that he had refused to pay because the tax bill presented by the collector was made out in the name of Edward Osborne. He said he did not purpose to pay taxes in any other name but his own.

When Osmand was arraigned before the sheriff he was told that he would not only have to pay the poll tax, but also the Deputy Sheriff's fees and mileage, which amounted to $3.25. Osmand protested, and when he was told that he would either have to pay or be locked up in jail he talked of sending for a lawyer. When he found that the sheriff was in earnest about enforcing the law and holding him until the tax was paid he paid the full amount under protest.

The Plain Facts.

"All the world loves a lover."

"But that affection is evidently one-sided. The lover denies the rumors of the engagement up to the last minute, and then tries to secure the marriage license on the sly."—Washington Star.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The firemen's ball was held last night at Washington hall. Considering the weather the attendance was large. Although not as great as had been expected. The exact recipts will not be known until the reports of the committees at the meeting of the company on Tuesday night. Several of th boys amused themselves by putting some blank cartridges in the stove.

Elizabeth Crowley, of Metuchen, has returned to her home after a pleasant stay with Mrs. Thomas Boal, of Front street.

Miss Katherine Kaine, of Lakeside avenue, is confined to her home by a slight attack of tonsilitis.

Miss Anna Hamilton, of Fords, is making a short stay with Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton.

John McDonough, of New York, is spending a few days with friends in the village.

Mrs. Delafield visited friends in New York yesterday.

SUYDAM FATALLY SHOT

forward to get it ahead of him. If this should be verified, it might explain the assailant's plea of self-defense.

Mr. Suydam has been a resident of Plainfield for the past six or seven years and has always lived in the Clinton avenue section. He was elected to the council three years ago and because of his faithful discharge of duties was again nominated and elected for another term last month. He is chairman of the license committee and a member of the fire and building, the alms and the auditing committees. He is forty-five years old and lives with his wife at 322 Clinton avenue. Mrs. Suydam left for New York on the 11:52 train, accompanied by a neighbor, Mrs. Juan Babcock and Chief Kiely. Mrs. Suydam alone was admitted to see the wounded man.

Mr. Suydam has also been prominent in the work of the Church of the Heavenly Rest and on Thursday night was elected president of the newly organized men's club.

At the First Precinct police station the prisoner gave his name as John C. Lumsden, of No. 313 West 57th street, and stated that he was thirty-one years of age, and an inventor. He had known Suydam, he said, since last April and was interested with him in an electric vibrator company. He said that certificates of the company had been deposited with Suydam on notes for $650, which were now due. He attempted to collect this amount from Suydam yesterday and was told to call again before the opening of the Curb market this morning. When he appeared at the appointed time, he said he was attacked by three men in Suydam's office and snatched up a pistol and fired it in self-defense. Where the pistol came from or just how he chanced to secure it, he was unable to state.

Three men claimed to be witnesses of the shooting, George A. Downes, of No. 255 Tenth street, Brooklyn, J. P. Collins and an office boy. Downes stated that the prisoner was an absolute stranger to them.

Lumsden later is said to have declared that he had been to the office Friday and carried his revolver with him at that time as he thought he might have use for it.

Downes says when he came in for the day's instruction, Suydam turned to him and said: "George, for God's sake stop this man! He is going to shoot me!"

Downs says that he looked around for something with which to strike Lumsden, and as he did so two shots were fired and Mr. Suydam fell.

The next instant Downs fell upon Lumsden and he was joined by Collins who aided him in holding the assailant on the floor. The cry was raised through the office and building and Policeman John Cochran of the Traffic Squad ran up and arrested Lumsden.

The offices of Mr. Suydam are on the third floor of the Broad street building and he occupies them with W. H. Collins, agent for the Calvin estate and W. J. Hunter, a stationer and printer.

Attraction Extraordinary.

The Park theatre has engaged the services of Mr. Chausett, a noted baritone singer from Chicago, Ill. M. Chausett will open his engagement this evening with the song entitled "Poor Old Girl." A change in music and motion pictures makes it entirely new.

Santa's Mixup.

"Santa's Mixup," is the title of a Christmas cantata to be given at the Park Avenue Baptist church, Tuesday night, December 29, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. About sixty members of the school will take part.

Hope Club Game Tonight.

A strong basketball team from New Brunswick, the Somersets, will play the Hope Y. M. C. five at Hope gymnasium tonight at 8:15.

CIVIL SERVICE TALK BY DR. W. E. FLETCHER

Dr. Willis Fletcher Johnson, of Union county, president of the New Jersey Civil Service Commission, in an address before the National Civil Service League, in session at Pittsburg yesterday, discussed the progress of Civil Service reform in New Jersey. He said in part:

"There are now under the operation of the New Jersey law in state and municipality nearly 11,000 officers and employes, with a prospect of half as many more being included before your next yearly meeting. On the whole the law has thus far worked and is working with gratifying smoothness and efficiency, despite the temporary unfamiliarity of many officials with its provisions. There has been a minimum of friction in its application, and, except in a very few cases of egregious carelessness or perversity, there has been no delay in the certification of payrolls and no interference with the ordinary operations of administration. The testimony has been cordially volunteered by many officials that, instead of complicating it and making it more burdensome, the law has made their work simpler and easier. With very few exceptions the commission and its secretary and examiner have met with nothing but the fullest courtesies from the heads of departments, while many such officials have gone far out of their way to assist the commission and co-operate with it in making the system successful. We have heard from the great army of employes nothing but expressions of pleasure and of gratitude at the effect of the law. In the press some of our former strongest opponents have become our stanch and aggressive supporters. The litigation over the law which is now in progress in Essex County involves three points. First, the correctness of the commission's classification of certain places, concerning which I may say that this commission does not affect infallibility and will welcome judicial instruction and correction. Second, the validity of the act by which the Essex County government adopted the Civil Service law, concerning which there may be room for reasonable doubts. Third, the constitutionality of the whole law itself, concerning which it seems to me that there can be scarcely the shadow of a shade of doubt. The commission looks forward to the result with cheerful expectation, confident that the law will be abundantly sustained and that its own administration of the law will be generally approved, and that New Jersey, the State of proverbial justice, the State of good, old, common law, the State whose present enlightened and progressive chief magistrate has declared that it shall have, if possible, the best government of all the States in this Union—that that State I say, which has been the latest to adopt the merit system, will not be the first to forsake it and will not incur the thus far unknown reproach of repudiating or repealing its Civil Service law.

Seven Years for Assailant.

Joseph Satmar, who was convicted of assaulting Policeman Kozusko, of Perth Amboy, was given seven years in State prison yesterday at New Brunswick by Judge Booraem. Satmar was convicted on simple assault, but indicted for atrocious assault. The court said the jury on the evidence could have found a verdict for a higher crime and gave notice that such crimes should cease or severe punishment would be meted out. Adam Shults, of South River, got six months in the county jail for assaulting James Bissett, a brick manufacturer, with a saw, with which he cut him to the shin bone.

State Tax Board at Elizabeth.

The State Board of Taxation is in session at Elizabeth, today, granting a hearing to the Borough of Kenilworth, in an appeal from what is alleged to be an excessive assessment. The borough is represented by Judge Clark Wittemore, assisted by Fort & Lehlbach. No intimation has been given that the assessment will be reduced, although in the opinion of some who are interested in the appeal there is likely to be some changes.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Sheriff-elect Joseph Gilfillan, of Philadelphia, was reported Friday to be seriously ill at Atlantic City, to which place he went on Wednesday.

Following a custom more than a decade old, young women living in the Greenville section of Jersey City are to provide Christmas dinners for the poor families of their part of the city.

Ten blocks of the business district of Atlantic avenue, Atlantic City, will be brilliantly lighted for Christmas Eve by the new electroliers installed under "City Beautiful plan."

Truant Officer Biggs has rounded up several truants in Millville this week, and has issued notices to parents that at the next violation of the school law he will place them in jail.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Bates, of Port Republic, tonight will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage in the cottage in which they have lived ever since their marriag.

When Hugh M. Swayze, of Trenton, went to his summer home at Washington's Crossing to get some furniture he found that the house had been looted by thieves of everything of value.

An admission fee of one potato for each person is to be charged at the annual Christmas entertainment of the Calvary Baptist Sunday-school, Trenton. The potatoes are to be distributed among the poor.

The New Jersey-New York Real Estate Exchange will have its annual meeting and election of officers in Jersey City on January 19, to be followed by an informal dinner. Former Governor E. C. Stokes may make the principal address.

Mayor Pierre Garven and many other Bayonne officials were guests last night at the annual beefsteak dinner of Bayonne Lodge of Elks. Former Mayor Egbert Seymour was toastmaster and Representative Jas. A. Hamill was a speaker. The proceeds will go to charity.

County Detective Ellis H. Parker, of Mt. Holly, has purchased an automobile. He needs in in his business. Parker is one of the best known thief takers in Burlington county. He covers a wide territory, and with his machine he expects to round up many evildoers.

Interesting exercises attended the laying of the corner-stone of the new edifice to be erected by Linden Baptist church, Camden, and the celebration of several anniversaries and dedication of the Bible school, which events were combined at services held last night.

Mrs. Jennie Feaster) was convicted in the Camden Criminal Court yesterday of keeping a disorderly house at Gloucester City, frequented by young men and girls, but on the recommendation of the jury for mercy Judge Joline suspended sentence.

An anti-swearing club has been organized at Clayton, with Harry Downs, president; M. G. McPherson, vice-president; Harry Nelson, secretary. The strong box of the club is a big cigar box with a slit in the top, in which every member must drop a nickel for every swear word he uses.

Mice carried matches through a small hole into the icebox of the Austin meat market, Atlantic City, and set fire to the tons of sawdust used in the walls of the box. Firemen, who could find no cause for fire in the icebox, were compelled to chop down its heavy partitions to reach the smoldering blaze.

George Koeber, eighty-two years old, of 12 North Third street, Paterson, was removed to the county jail yesterday afternoon for examination as to his sanity. According to a report made to Captain Taylor by Koeber's son, the aged man has been acting queerly for some time. He has threatened to end his life on two or three occasions.

John Irwin, of Franklinville, who has been working in Moore Brothers' glass factory, at Clayton, thought he had sprained his knee about a month ago, and has not been able to work. Yesterday he was taken to Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, where it was found that the kneecap was out of place, and he will have to undergo an operation.

CLEANING GLOVES.

I have heard it said that some kid gloves can be washed, but my personal experience does not bear out this assertion. It is possible to wash chamois gloves, however, and make them as soft and pliable as when new. Wash with a tepid white soap suds and rinse in warm water. Then use a warm rinsing water containing a few drops of olive oil. The oil has a tendency to soften the chamois. A little bluing can be added to the water, and saffron can be used in the rinsing water for tan or dark chamois gloves. Damp bread crumbs will clean ordinary dust stains from glace gloves, and Fuller's earth, mixed with French chalk, is also very good for the purpose. Pure white glace gloves can be cleaned with chloroform. Glove forms cost about 10 cents, and a woman who does her own glove cleaning should provide herself with a pair. While gasoline is very useful in cleaning, it leaves a disagreeable odor and kid retains this odor much longer than cotton or woolen fabrics.

RHEUMATIC FOLKS.

Are You Sure Your Kidneys Are Well?

Many rheumatic attacks are due to uric acid in the blood. But the duty of the kidneys is to remove all uric acid from the blood. Its presence there shows the kidneys are inactive.

Don't daily with "uric acid solvents." You might go on till domsday with them, but until you cure the kidneys you will never get well. Doan's Kidney Pills not only remove uric acid, but cure the kidneys and then all danger from uric acid is ended. Here is Plainfield testimony to prove it.

Mrs. C. Rosseter, 127 Watchung avenue, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Several years ago I had severe headaches, also occasionally attacks of rheumatic. Being old that Doan's Kidney Pills were very effective in cases of this nature and believing that my trouble arose from my kidneys, I procured a box of this remedy from Randolph's Pharmacy. I soon found relief and since that time have always kept Doan's Kidney Pills in the house. Whenever I feel out of sorts, I take a few doses of the remedy and as soon well again. My daughter and her husband have also used Doan's Kidney Pills with good results."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Muffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY. DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

CERTIFICATE OF DISSOLUTION.

To all to Whom These Presents May Come, Greeting:

Whereas, It appears to my satisfaction, by duly authenticated record of the proceedings for the voluntary dissolution thereof by the unanimous consent of all the stockholders, deposited in my office, that the D. & I. Company, a corporation of this State, whose principal office is situated at No. 315 Watchung avenue, in the City of Plainfield, County of Union, State of New Jersey (Frank T. Ostrom, being agent therein and in charge thereof, upon whom process may be served), has complied with the requirements of "An Act concerning corporations (Revision of 1896)," preliminary to the issuing of this Certificate of Dissolution.

Now, therefore, I, S. D. Dickinson, Secretary of State of the State of New Jersey, do hereby certify that the said corporation, did, on the twenty-fifth day of November, 1908, file in my office a duly executed and attested consent in writing to the dissolution of said corporation, executed by all the stockholders thereof, which said consent and the record of the proceedings aforesaid are now on file in my said office as provided by law.

In Testimony whereof, I have hereto set my hand and affixed my official seal, at Trenton, this twenty-fifth day of November, A. D., one thousand nine hundred and eight.

S. D. DICKINSON,
Secretary of State.

WAITING.

My socks are darned at toe and heel,
My toes each night peep through,
And like a vagabond I feel,
But wife says: "Don't buy new,
Just wait for Christmas."

The dozen handkerchiefs I owned,
Today are one or two,
The others lost or torn or loaned,
But wife says: "Don't buy new,
Just wait for Christmas."

I've not a decent tie to wear
In black or red or blue;
But wifey says: "With proper care
They'll last, so don't buy new,
Just wait for Christmas."

My gloves, why the're a sight to see,
Much soiled and broken through;
But nightly it's impressed on me,
By wife: "Now don'tbuy new,
Just wait for Christmas."

And so, if I appear to be
Unkempt, as I must do,
It is that wife's advising me
'Twere folly to buy new,
Justwait for Christmas

For heaps of gold I have no greed
I only wait the day
When I may note the things I need
And buy them right away,
And not have to wait for Christmas.

THE CARE OF THE HAIR, SHAMPOOING, ETC.

Too much attention cannot be given to the care of the hair, brushing each night and shampooing once every three weeks, or according to the needs of one's particular case.

As to the washing, shampoo liquid well suited to hair that is heavy and oily can be made from four ounces of lavender water, half an ounce of borax, three ounces of rosewater and half an ounce of tincture of cochineal. This is added to the lavender water, and the borax is next put in. Then the mixture is shaken until the powder is dissolved, when the rosewater is added to complete the mixture.

When shampooing the head the scalp and long hair must be thoroughly wet with the cleansing liquid before any water is used. It will do no harm if the liquid dries on; it can be washed off in clear water later. The mixture should not be used oftener than once a month, and perfearably every five weeks.

Another compound that is cleansing and a tonic is composed of half a pint of New England rum, a gill and a half of bay rum, an ounce of glycerine, a quarter of an ounce each of borax, carbonate of potash and carbonate of ammonia. The last three are dissolved in the New England rum, the bay rum being then added and lastly the glycerine. The liquid should be well shaken before being applied.

For dry hair nothing is better than castle soap, scraped and melted with just enough boiling water to make a jelly when cold. Into a half cupful of this mixture beat a raw egg. Then a teaspoonful of glycerin is added. This mixture is massaged into the head and then washed out.

Women with very dark hair cannot do better than wash it in claret, for the natural iron and tannin are excellent as a preservative. Into half a pint of claret a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda and the yolk of a raw egg are beaten. This is rubbed well over the scalp and hair, and is then washed out, no soap being required.

No matter how oily the hair is, it should never be shampooed oftener than once a month, or the unhealthy condition of the scalp, that throws off more oil than it should, will be increased. Brushing must be made to take the place of water, using a short bristled brush that is thoroughly clean, so that each stroke absorbs some of the excessive moisture.

GOOD OLD HASTY PUDDING.

"Hasty pudding" they call cornmeal mush in New England, but an experienced cook will defy the average unskilled kitched trifler who attempts to make this simple mixture hastily.

If "genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains" a large amount of genius must enter into the manufacture of Indian meal mush. Unless you have this one qualification of greatness don't try to make it.

If you have, put one quart of water on to boil; mix one pint of cornmeal, and a tablespoonful of salt and a tablespoonful of flour. Put this into a dredger, and while the water is bubbling shake it slowly into it, stirring with a long-handled spoon all the time.

Boil for at least half an hour, stirring constantly to keep the mixture from getting lumpy.

Some experts mix the dry cornmeal with a pint of cold milk before stirring it into the water, and woe betide the amateur who approaches this ceremony without due respect and caution!

Indian cornmeal should be bought in small quantities, as it spoils rapidly when exposed to the air. It is rich in nitrogen and contains more fat than most meals.

For this reason it is heating, and should only be eaten in winter time, when "much and molasses" forms part of the early morning country diet.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright, 1908, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"Getting solid with Randall," commented the colonel. "Which is she—kind-hearted, or an accomplished villainess? Well, it's interesting, anyhow."

By the time he had made his toilet the train was slacking speed ready to halt in Council Bluffs, and all his suspicions rushed on deck again at the sight of Miss Smith and Archie walking outside.

He joined them, and he had to admit that Miss Smith looked as pleased as Archie at his appearance. Nor did she send a single furtive glance, slanting or backward, while they walked in the crisp, clean air. Once the train had started and Miss Smith was in the drawing-room, breakfasting with Mrs. Winter and Archie, he politely attended Mrs. Millicent through the morning meal in the dining-car. It was so good a meal that he naturally, although illogically, thought better of Miss Smith's prospects of innocence; and cheerily he sought Haley. He found him in the smoking compartment of the observation car, having for companions no less personages than the magnate and a distinguished-looking New Englander, who, Rupert Winter made no doubt, was a Harvard professor of rank and renown among his learned kind. He knew the earmarks of the species. The New Englander's pencil was flying over a little improvised pad of telegraph blanks, while he listened with absorbed interest to Haley's rich Irish tones. There was a little sidewise lunge of Haley's mouth, a faint twinkle of Haley's frank and simple eyes which the colonel appraised at very nearly their real value. He knew that it isn't in Irish-American nature to perceive a wide-open ear and not put something worth hearing into it. Besides, his sharp ears had brought him a key to the discourse, a sorrowful remark of the sergeant's as he entered: "Yes, sor, thim wather torchures is terrible!"

He glanced suspiciously from one of Haley's audience to the other. The newspaper cartoonist had pictured on all kinds of bodies of preying creatures, whether of the earth or air, the high brows, the round head, the delicate features, the thin cheeks, the straight line of the mouth, and the mild, inexpressive eyes of the man before him. He had been extolled as a far-sighted benefactor of the world, and execrated picturesquely as the king of pirates who would scuttle the business of his country without a qualm.

Winter, amid his own questionings and problems, could not help a scrutiny of a man whose power was greater than that of medieval kings. He sat consuming a cigarette, more between his fingers than his lips; and glancing under drooping eyelids from questioner to narrator. At the colonel's entrance he looked up, as did Haley, who rose to his feet with an unconscious salute. "I'd be glad to spake wid youse a minnit, if I might, general," said Haley, "about where I put your dress-shute case, sor."

The colonel, of course, did not expect any remarks about a suit-case when he got Haley by himself at the observation end of the car; but what he did get was of sufficient import to drive out of his mind a curt lecture about blackening the reputation of the army with lies about the Philippines. Haley had told him that he had seen the man with the two moles on his face jump out of his own car at Council Bluffs. He had simply stood on the platform, looking to right and left for a moment; then he had swung himself back on the car. Haley had watched him walk down the aisle and enter the drawing-room. He did not come out; Haley had found out that the drawing-room belonged to Edwin S. Keatcham, "the big railroad man, sor."

"It doesn't seem likely that he would be an accomplice of a kidnaper," mused the colonel. "The man might have gone in there while he was out."

"Sure, he might, sor; 'twas mesilf thinking that same; and I wint beyant to the observation car, and there the ould gintleman was smoking."

"And you stopped to tell yarns to that other gentleman instead of getting back and following—"

"No, sor, I beg your 'pardon, sor; I was kaping me eyes open and on him; for himsilf was in the observation car where you are now, sor, until we come in, and thin he walked back, careless like, to his own car. Will I be afther following him?"

"Yes; don't lose him."

They did not lose him; they both saw him enter the drawing-room and almost immediately come out and sit down in one of the open sections.

"See if you can't find out from the conductor where he is going," the colonel proposed to Haley; and he frowned over his thoughts for a bad quarter of an hour at the window. The precipitate of all this mental ferment was a determination to stick close to the boy, saying nothing. He hoped that when they stopped overnight at Salt Lake City, according to Aunt Rebecca's plan, they might shake off the "brother's" company. The day passed uneventfully. He played bridge with Mrs. Millicent and Miss Smith and Archie, while Aunt Rebecca kept up her French with one of Bentzon's novels.

Afterward she said grimly to him: "I think you must have been converted out in the Philippines; you never so much as winced, that last hand; no, you sat there smiling over your ruin as sweetly as if you enjoyed it."

The colonel smiled again. "Ah, but, you see, I did enjoy it; didn't you notice the hand? No? Well, it was worth watching. It was the rubber game; they were 24 and we were 26, and we were on the seventh round; Miss Smith had made it hearts. She sat on my left, dummy on my right. Millicent had the lead. She had four little spades, a little club, the queen of hearts and a trey; dummy had the queen, the ten and the nine of spades, it had the king of hearts and three clubs with the jack at the top. I had a lovely diamond suit which I hadn't had a chance to touch, top sequence, ace, king, queen; I had the jack of trumps and the jack of spades; and the queen and a little club. I hadn't a lead, you understand; Millicent had taken five tricks and they had taken one; they needed six to win the game, we needed two; see? Well, Millicent hadn't any diamonds to lead me, and unhappily she didn't think to lead trumps through dummy, which would have made a world of difference. She led a club; dummy put on the jack. I knew Miss Smith had the ace and one low heart; no clubs, a lot of low diamonds, and she might or might not have a spade. I figured that she had the ace and a little one; if she would trump in with the little one, as ninety-nine out of a hundred women would have done, her ace and her partner's king would fall together; or, at worst, he would have to trump her diamond lead, after she had led out her king of spades, and lead spades, which I could trump and bring in all my diamonds. Do you take in the situation?"

"You mean that Janet had the king of spades alone, the ace and the little trump and four worthless diamonds? I see. It is a chance for the grand coup; I reckon she played it."

"She did!" cried the colonel with unction. "She slapped that ace on the trick, she modestly led her king of spades, gathered in my jack, then 'she stole my child away,' my little jack of trumps; it fell on dummy's king, and dummy led out his spades and I had to see that whole diamond suit slaughtered. They made their six tricks, the game and the rubber; and I wanted to clap my hands over the neatness of it."

"She is a good player," agreed Aunt Rebecca, "and a very pleasant person. You remember the epitaph, don't you, Bertie? 'She was so pleasant.' Yet Janet has had a heap of trouble; but, after all, happiness is not a condition but a temperament; I suppose Janet has the temperament. She's a good loser, too; and she never takes advantage of the rules."

"She certainly loves a straight game," reflected the colonel. "I confess I don't like the kind of woman that is always grabbing a trick if some one plays out of the wrong hand."

He said something of the kind to Millicent, obtaining but scant sympathy in that quarter. "She's deep, Bertie; I told you that,' was the only reply, "but I'm watching. I have reason for my feeling."

"Maybe you have been misinformed," ventured her brother-in-law with proper meekness.

"Not at all," retorted she, sharply. "I happen to know that she worked against me with the Daughters."

"Daughters," the colonel repeated, inanely, "your daughters?"

"Certainly not! The Daughters of the Revolution."

"It's a mighty fine society, that; did a lot during the Spanish war. And you are the state president, aren't you?"

"No, Rupert," returned Mrs. Melville with dignity "I am no longer state regent. By methods that would shame the most hardened men politicians I was defeated; why! didn't you read about it?"

"You know I only came back from the Philippines in February."

"It was in all the Chicago papers. I was interviewed myself. I assure you the other candidates (there were two) tried the very lowest political methods. Melville said it was scandalous. There were at least three luncheons given against me. It wasn't the congress, it was the lobby defeated me. And their methods! I would not believe that gentlewomen could stoop to such infamy of misrepresentation." The colonel chewed his mustache; he felt for that reporter of the Chicago paper; he was evidently getting a phonographic record now; he made an inarticulate rumble of sympathy in his throat which was as the clucking of the driver to the mettled horse. Mrs. Melville gesticulated with Delsartian grace as she poured forth her woes.

"They accused me of a domineering spirit; they said I was trying to set up a machine. I! I worked for them, many a time, half the night, at my desk; never was a letter unanswered; I did half the work of the corresponding secretary; yet at the crucial moment she betrayed me! I learned more in those two days of the petty jealousy, the pitiless malevolence of some women than I had known all my life before; but at the same time, to the faithful band of friends"—the colonel had the sensation of listening to the record again—"whose fidelity was proof against ridicule and cruel misrepresentation, I return a gratitude that will never wane. Rupert"—she turned herself in the seat and waved the open palm of her hand in a graceful and dramatic gesture, "—those women not only stooped to malignant falsehoods, they not only trampled parliamentary law underfoot, but they circulated through the hall a cartoon called the 'Making of the Slate.' Of course, we had our quarters at a hotel, and after the evening meeting, after I had retired, in fact, a bell-boy brought me a message; it was necessary to have a meeting at once, to decide for the secretaryship, as we had found out Mrs. Ellennere was false. The ladies in the adjoining rooms and the others of us on the board who were loyal came into my chamber. Rupert, will you believe it, those women had a grotesque picture of us, with faces cut out of the newspapers—of course, all our pictures were in the papers—and they had the audacity and the meanness to picture me in—in the garments of night!"

"That was pretty tough. But where does Miss Smith come in?"

"She was at the convention. She is a Daughter. I've always said we are too lax in our admissions."

"Who drew the picture?"

"It may not be Miss Smith, but—she does draw. I'm sure that she worked against me; she covered up her footprints so that I have no proof; but I suspect her. She's deep, Bertie, she's deep. But she can't hoodwink me. I'll find her out."

The colonel experienced the embarrassment that is the portion of a rash man trying to defend one woman against another; he retreated because he perceived defense was in vain; but he did not feel his growing opinion of Miss Smith's innocence menaced by Mrs. Melville's convictions.

She played too square a game for a kidnaper—and Smith was the commonest of names. No, there must be some explanation; Rupert Winter had lived too long not to distrust the plausible surface clew. "It is the improbable that always happens, and the impossible most of the time," Aunt Rebecca had once said. He quite agreed with her whimsical phrase.

Nothing happened to arouse his suspicions that day. Haley reported that Cary Mercer was going on to San Francisco. The conductor did not know his name; he seemed to know Mr. Keatcham and was with him in his drawing-room most of the time. Had the great man a secretary with him? Yes, he seemed to have, a little fellow who had not much to say for himself, and jumped whenever his boss spoke to him. There was also a valet, an Englishman, who did not respond properly to conversational overtures. They were all going to get off at Denver.

Haley was not misinformed, as the colonel perceived with his own eyes—and he saw Cary Mercer bow in parting to the great man, who requited the low salute with a gruff nod. Here was an opportunity for a nearer glimpse of Mercer, possibly for that explanation in which Winter still had a lurking hope. He caught Mercer just in the car doorway, and politely greeted him: "Mr. Mercer, I think? You may not remember me, Col. Winter. I met you in Cambridge, three years ago—"

It seemed a brutal thing to do, to recall a meeting under such circumstances; but if Mercer could give the explanation he would excuse him; it was better than suspecting an innocent man. But there was no opportunity for explanation. Mercer turned a blank and coldly suspicious face toward him. "I beg pardon," he said in his southern way, "I think you have made a mistake in the person."

"And are you not Mr. Cary Mercer?" The colonel felt the disagreeable resemblance of his own speeches to those made in newspaper stories by the gentleman who wishes his old friend to change a $50 bill or to engage in an amusing game with a thimble. Mercer saw it as well as he. "Try some one from the country," he remarked with an unpleasant smile, brushing past, while the color mounted to the colonel's tanned cheek. "The next time you meet me," Rupert Winter vowed, "you'll know me."

A new porter had come on at Denver; a light brown, chubby, bald man with a face that radiated friendliness. He was filled with the desire for conversation, and he had worked on the road for eight years, hence could supplement "Over the Range" and the other guide books with personal gossip. He showed marked deference to the colonel, which that unassuming and direct man could not quite fathom, until Archie enlightened him. Archie smiled a queer, chewed-up smile which the colonel hailed with:

"Why are you making fun of me, young man?"

"It's Lewis, the porter; he follows you round and listens to you in such an awestruck way."

"But why?"

"Why, Sergt. Haley told him about you; and I told him a little, and he says he wishes you'd been on the train when they had the hold-ups. This is an awful road for hold-ups, he says. He's been at five hold-ups."

"And what does he advise?"

"Oh, he says, hold up your hands and they won't hurt you."

"Well, I reckon his advice is sound," laughed the colonel. "See you follow it, Archie."

"Shall you hold up your hands, Uncle Bertie?" asked Archie.

"Much the wisest course; these fellows shoot."

Archie looked disappointed. "I suppose so," he sighed. "I'm afraid I'd want to, if they were pointing pistols at me. Lewis was on the train once when a man showed fight. He wouldn't put up his hands, and the bandit plugged him, like a flash; he fell crosswise over the seat and the blood spurted across Lewis' wrist; he said it was like a hot jet of water."

The homely and bizarre horror of the picture had evidently struck home to Archie; he half shivered.

"Too much imagination," grumbled the colonel to himself. "A Winter ought to take to fighting like a duck to water!" He betook himself to Miss Smith; and he was uneasily conscious that he was going to her for consoling. But he felt better after a little talk about Archie with her. Plainly she thought Archie had plenty of spirit; although, of course, he hadn't told her about the bandits. The negro was "kidding" the passengers; and women shouldn't be disturbed by such nonsense. The colonel had old-fashioned views of guarding his womankind from the harsh ways of the world. Curious, he reflected, what sense Miss Smith seemed to have; and how she understood things. He felt better acquainted with her than a year's garrison intercourse would have made him with any other woman he knew.

That afternoon, they two sat watching the fantastic cliffs which took grotesque semblance of ruined castles crowning their barren hillsides; or of deserted amphitheaters left by some vanished race to crumble. They had talked of many things. She had told him of the sleepy old South Carolinian town where she was born, and the plantation and the distant cousin who was like her mother, and the hospital where she had been taught, and the married sister who had died. Such a narrow, laborious, innocent existence as she described! How cheerfully, too, she had shouldered her burdens! They talked of the south and of the Philippines; a little they talked of Archie and his sorrow and of the eternal problems that have troubled the soul of man since first death entered the world. As they talked, the colonel's suspicions faded into grotesque shadows. "Millicent is ridiculous," quoth he. Then he fell to wondering whether there had been a romance in Miss Smith's past life. "Such a handsome woman would look high," he sighed. Only 24 hours ago he had called Miss Smith "nice-looking," with careless criticism. He was quite unconscious of his change of view. That night he felt lonely, of a sudden; the old wound in his heart ached; his future looked as bleak as the mountain-walled plains through which he was speeding. After a long time the train stopped with a jar and rattle, ending in a sudden shock. He raised the curtain to catch the flash of the electric lights at Glenwood. Out of the deep defile they glittered like diamonds in a pool of water. Why should he think of Miss Smith's eyes? With an impatient sigh, he pulled down the curtain and turned over to sleep.

His thoughts drifted, floated, were submerged in a wavering procession of pictures; he was back in the Philippines; they had surprised the fort; how could that be when he was on guard? But they were there— He sat up in his berth. Instinctively he slipped the revolver out of his bag and held it in one hand, as he peeped through the crevice of the curtains. There was no motion, no sound of moving; but heads were emerging between the curtains in every direction; and Archie was standing, his hands shaking above his tumbled brown head and pale face. A man in a soft hat held two revolvers while another man was pounding on the drawing-room door, gruffly commanding those inside to come out. "No, we shall not come out," responded Aunt Rebecca's composed, well bred accents, her neat enunciation not disturbed by a quiver. "If you want to kill an old woman, you will have to break down the door."

"Let them alone, Shay, it takes too long; let's finish here, first," called the man with the revolver; "they'll come soon enough when we want them. Here, young feller, fish out! Nobody'll get hurt if you keep quiet; if you don't you'll get a dose like the man in No. 6, two years ago. Hustle, young feller!"

The colonel was eyeing every motion, every shifting from one foot to the other. Let them once get by Archie—

The boy handed over his pocketbook.

"Now your watch," commanded the brigand; "take it, Shay!"

"Won't you please let me keep that watch?" faltered Archie; "that was papa's watch."

The childish name from the tall lad made the robber laugh. "And mamma's little pet wants to keep it, does he? Well, he can't. Get a move on you?"

ELKS WIN SERIES WITH THE WESTFIELD WOODMEN

One of the best series yet rolled in the Fraternal bowling league tourney was witnessed at Campbell's alleys, last night, when the local Elks team met the five from the Westfield Woodmen. The Plainfielders won out by taking the first two games, the second resulting in a tie but going to them in the roll-off. The Elks lost their gait in the third try and by pulling together in good shape, the Woodmen took the tally by a margin of 93.

The score for the night was made by Judge William N. Runyon, who rapped out a 215 in the second game. He made a number of difficult spares that brought applause from the gallery. The next best score for the Elks was a 187 made by Muir, while Chief Kiely's faculty of getting splits at the wrong time kept his high mark down to 174. Teel and VanEmburgh rooled good, steady games. The best mark on the Woodmen's side was made by Miller, who chalked up 191 and an average of 173.1.

The scores:

| Elks. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Runyon | 147 | 215 | 144 |
| Teel | 151 | 119 | 134 |
| Van Emburg | 163 | 140 | 153 |
| Muir | 187 | 115 | 142 |
| Kiely | 158 | 174 | 150 |
| | 806 | *763 | 723 |

*Roll off: Elks, 86; Woodmen, 71.

Hope Beats Netherwood.

The Hope Boys Club basketball team won a closely contended game with the Netherwood A. C. boys last night at Hope gym, by a score of 30 to 20.

Junior Y. M. C. A. Defeats Leals.

The Y. M. C. A. juniors won from Leal's second five this morning by a score of 25 to 11.

AMERICAN LABOR SUPERIOR TO JAP.

Silk Mill Concern to Transfer Several Plants from Japan to Burlington.

Burlington, Dec. 19.—Satisfied, after a thorough study of conditions, that American labor is far superior to that of the "Yankee of the East," operators of the Burlington silk mill confirmed yesterday reports that the concern will close several large mills in Japan and move its entire plant to this city. Contracts for fine silk goods have kept the local plant working day and night for months, and the finer character of the American goods has brought from Vice-President J. H. Rosenthal, who represents the firm in the Orient, the recommendation that the entire manufacturing business be transferred to this country and the raw material transported to America.

The firm will begin immediately the erection of its new plant here, in which 1,000 looms will be installed and employment given to a corresponding number of employes. The new plant will add nearly $50,000 a week to the local payrolls.

Clawed and Bitten by Cat.

David Clarkberg, 16 years old, was attacked and badly bitten and scratched by a cat which he befriended, at his home, 137 West Twenty-first street, Bayonne, yesterday afternoon. He was playing with the cat, when it turned upon him, buried its claws in his face, and when he attempted to release its hold bit him several times on both hands. Clarkberg was taken to the Bayonne Hospital, where it was found necessary to cauterize the wounds. Since attacking Clarkberg the cat has been acting strangely.

Apples Outdo Gold.

"There is more profit in raising apples than there is in prospecting for gold" said T. C. Earl, a resident of British Columbia, who is visiting relatives in Elizabeth. The expense entailed in prospecting, he said was great, while the opposite was the case in apple raising. He has a gold medal which he won for raising the best apple crop in British Columbia in 1907.

Killed on Bridge.

In attempting to get out of the way of a freight train while he was crossing the high bridge near Little Falls, yesterday, John Hanan, of Paterson, stepped in front of a fast passenger train. He was hurled several feet and when picked up was unconscious. With an arm and leg broken and a crushed skull, the man was placed aboard of a train and hurried to Paterson, where the St. Joseph's Hospital ambulance was in waiting. When the train pulled into the Barclay street station, Hanan succumbed to his injuries.

J. W. A. Bauersachs, of the borough, went to Camden, today to attend a meeting of the finance committee of the Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W.

PERSONAL.

Everitt Smith, of West End avenue, has taken a clerical position at the postoffice during the holiday season.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Smith, of Watchung avenue, moved today to Henry Leifke's new house on West End avenue, near West Front street.

Alfred L. Schomp, of West Front street, who has been ill with typhoid fever for the past two months, was able to leave the house today for the first time.

Miss Elizabeth McGee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. McGee, of Rockview avenue, has returned from the Ingleside boarding school at Farmington, Conn., for the Christmas holidays.

NOW THE PRAYING THIEF.

Two Men Work Novel Game on New Brunswick Merchant.

Herman Flomenhaft, who keeps a notion store on Neilson street, New Brunswick, was looking for Christmas business yesterday afternoon when two strangers entered. One of the men, going to the rear of the store, dropped upon his knees and took out a string of beads, saying: "Now I am going to pray for your father, your mother, yourself and Moses." And the prayers were started. Mr. Flomenhaft happened to glance back to see why the other man didn't join in the prayer meeting and saw him slipping a pair of trousers from the counter under his coat.

"What are you doing?" demanded the astonished storekeeper.

"I am praying, too," he replied.

Mr. Flomenhaft called a halt to the religious exercises, searched the fellow and found that he had grown stouter about the chest to the measure of two pair of trousers, some socks, and a cap. Mr. Flomenhaft suggested that the devotional exercises might well be continued at the police station and both fellows fled. The police are sorry that they didn't get the men, as this is a new kind of a game to them.

An Accumulation.

"There are all sorts of firearms in this community," remarked the stranger.

"Yes," answered Bronco Bob. "Every citizen has five or six revolvers."

"What do you want with so many?"

"We don't want 'em. They're forced on us. Young fellers from the East keep bringin' 'em along, an' we have to take the guns away from 'em to prevent accidents."—Washington Star.

Going the Limit.

"When young fellers gets a-courtin'," said Farmer Corntossel, "they sure goes plumb crazy, an' that boy Sam o' mine ain't no exception."

"So Sam's started, eh?" queried the nearest neighbor.

"Started? I should say so!" exclaimed Farmer Corntossel. "Why, didn't he go into town yesterd'y an' blow in half a dollar for a tooth brush!"—Harper's Weekly.

Precaution.

His Ma—Willie, where have you been? Your hair is suspiciously wet.

Willie—I fell in the river.

His Ma—But your clothes are not wet.

Willie—Well, you see, ma, while I was standin' on the bridge I thought maybe I'd fall in, so I took off my clothes, an' I did.—Illustrated Bits.

Governor Johnson in Montclair.

Governor John A. Johnson of Minnesota delivered a lecture on "The Majesty of the Law" in the First Congregational church at Montclair, last night. Governor Fort introduced him. Governor Johnson's speech was confined to an exposition of the law and its application to the institutions and individuals of the country.

New York Holiday Teas.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. Charles Lyman Case and the Misses Case for teas to be given Wednesday, Dec. 30, and Saturday, Jan. 2, at their home in Ninety-first street, New York. Mr. Case and family were former residents of Central avenue.

Progress.

Friend—You took your son into your establishment some months ago, I understand. How did it turn out?

Business Man (drearily)—Great success. He's teaching me now.—Punch.

Don't Know When to Quit.

"Some men," said Uncle Eben, "ain't satisfied to quit when dey's done bought a gold brick, but keeps payin' storage on it an' holdin' it fur a rise."—Washington Star.

The evening service at the Congregational church tomorrow will be omitted in accordance with the custom on Christmas Sunday.

CHRISTMAS OBSERVANCES

Appropriate Services at First Presbyterian, Park Ave. Baptist and Elsewhere.

IN THE SUNDAY-SCHOOLS, TOO.

Special Sermons on the Great Feast—Music a Feature at All the Services—The Program.

Christmas exercises were held in these churches yesterday:

First Presbyterian.

Christmas services were held at the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning, under the auspices of the Sunday-school, and in the evening the quartet choir, assisted by Mrs. Guy Bender, soprano; Miss Clara VanFleet, pianist and Anton Gloeckner, violinist, gave a special musical service. The church was appropriately decorated for the occasion.

The morning exercises were in charge of Superintendent LeRoy H. Gates, and began with a processional, "Ring Out Glad Bells," followed byan anthem, "Arise! Shine," by the quartet. A recitation, "Christmas Story," was given by Edith Shotwell, John Martin, Dorothy Adams and Edward Boyle. A carol by the primary department was followed with a recitation by Katherine Ayres, Norman Hummer, Gladys Albert and Harold Wilson. Another carol by the primary department preceded a vocal selection by Phoebe Hummer, Ethel Hazel, Hattie Kriney and Margaret Lounsbery.

Pauline Gates gave a recitation entitled "Christmas Bells," and Mildred Boyle sang a "Christmas Hymn," and "Giving" was the title of a recitation by Gladys Edsall. Elston Hoagland sang a "Christmas Song." Former Superintendent I. B. Hill made a few remarks to the school and after an offertory solo, "The Birthday of the King," the pastor, Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, made a short address.

The program of the special musical service in the evening was given as published in The Daily Press Saturday, including a ten minute talk by Dr. Herring. The numbers were violin and piano selection, anthem, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," baritone solo, "Nazareth;" anthem, "O Babe Divine;" offertory solo, "Prince of Peace;" anthem, "Star of the Orient;" anthem, "Arise! Shine;" violin, piano and organ selection, benediction.

The musical service was in charge of Iifford Braider, organist and choirmaster, and the various numbers by the quartet were greatly enjoyed by large congregations.

Park Avenue Baptist.

All of the services at the Park Avenue Baptist church yesterday were devoted to the observance of Christmas. Rev. A. E. Finn, the pastor, preached appropriate sermons and the afternoon Sunday-school session was given over to an elaborate program of recitations and music.

A choir of twenty voices, under the directions of Robert E. Humpston, organist and choirmaster, sang anthems during the morning service. The selections were: "Behold, I Bring You Good Tidings," Gerbel; "The Angels Are Singing," Lacey; "O Little Town of Bethlehem," Hall

Rev. Finn's text was from Isa. ix-6; his subject, "Israel's Vision of the Christ Child." That the world would soon realize the fulfillment of Isaiah's dream of universal peace was the belief he expressed, naming as one of the evidences of its nearness the passing of theological strife. The ancient bloody, so called, religious wars were now looked upon as an absurd way of serving God. He called attention to the fact that the clergy of the present day, of all denominations are united in Christ, not by deductions of ecclesiatical counsel, but in general feeling of good will. The differences among the three factions of the Baptist church were declared to be the same as between twiddle-dee and twiddle-dum, that is, they cannot be discovered. Ministers come together at various conventions, not to discuss the merits of their respective creeds, but as a means of bringing about this universal peace.

Possibility of war has become remote, he said, because of modern inventions for annihilating distance. This shrinking of the world's geography, through improved methods of fast travel, quick inter-communication by telephone, telegraph and mail, and the free use of the press was declared to be the greatest agency in the world's history for the developing of international life. Another influence named was the exchange of literature between the nations, and its translation into the different languages.

The speaker prophesied that in the not distant future cannons and other implements of warfare would

BUILDING PERMIT FOR A BARN IS RESENTED

The granting of a permit by Building Inspector T. O. Doane to Max Goldstein, owner on contract of the property at 444 West Front street, to erect a barn in the rear of the property, has aroused some resentment among the residents in that neighborhood, especially of Miss Mary Brown and her sister, Mrs. L. J. Denton, who live on Washington avenue, and against whose property the barn will abutt. The cellar for the barn has been excavated and work on the foundation started.

This action will be the subject of a vigorous protest, it is said, on the part Miss Brown and Mrs. Denton when the matter comes before the Common Council at its adjourned meeting tonight. They will endeavor to show the injustice of allowing a person to erect such a building in a residential neighborhood and more particularly for the reason that the structure will obscure the view of Miss Brown and Mrs. Denton from their residence and is considered a nuisance. The complainants have engaged I. P. Runyon as their counsel and he will appear before the Council tonight to present their grievance.

Building Inspector Doane stated today that the law required him to grant the permit.

POLICE TAKE A HAND IN A GAME OF POKER

A demonstration of the great American game commonly known as poker was in progress at Lee Wells' home on East Second street, next to Salvation Army hall, Saturday night, when the police were apprised of the fact and decided to take a hand without coming up with the ante. Detective-Sergeant John Flynn planned the participation and took Patrolman McDonald along to see that the "kitty" was properly cut.

Wells and four of his friends—Zeb Freeman, Harrison Randolph, Leander Brown and Ben Potts—were seated around a table when the cops entered without the formality of knocking and it is currently reported that two pat hands, an ace full on a one card draw and four deuces were being held. The mahogany had been decorated with $2.50 and if it hadn't been for the appearance of the minions of the law the betting would have been fast and furious. It might have gone as high as $4. Harrison Randolph took one look at the intruders and collapsed, Zeb Freeman attempted to throw his cards in the stove and Leander Brown made a dive for the pot. Flynn saw him first, however, and got the whole business.

"It's no use resisin'," exclaimed Wells, who had an experience with the borough police in the cutting affray four years ago Christmas eve; "you might's well give in because the officers 'll call yuh outa your grave."

The rest evidently thought so, too, because there was no attempt to get away. The five men were taken to police headquarters and were released about midnight on their own recognizance to appear in court today. When the case was called this morning, Well's employer asked for an adjournment as he wanted the defendant for an important job and the matter was adjourned one week.

MISS MYRTLE BOYLON THE BRIDE OF CORRY AMMERMAN

Miss Myrtle Boylon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah N. Boylon, of Regent street, and Corry Ammerman, also of the borough, were married Saturday evening by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. The ceremony was performed at Mr. McKelvey's home, the couple being accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Bert M. Waldron, of the borough. Mrs. Waldron is a sister of the bride. Following the ceremony the couple returned to the home of the bride's parents, where an informal reception was held.

The bride was gowned in a tailor-made suit of green material, with hat to match, while her sister, wore a tailor-made gown of lavendar cloth. The couple will reside on Somerset street, the borough. Mr. Ammerman is employed at the freight-house and both he and the bride have a host of friends.

HIS WORK AMONG BOYS

Episcopal Rector Preaches to Baptist Congregation on Rearing the Youth.

"GROWING JESUS" HIS TEXT.

Rev. George A. Warner Tells of the Responsibility to the Boys and Girls of Today.

"The Growing Jesus," was the subject of an inspiring and helpful sermon preached at the First Baptist church, last night, by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross. The service was under the auspices of the Young People's Association. His remarks were especially applicable to boys and girls, picturing the olden times when Christ was accustomed to gather little children to Him.

He quoted Christ's words, "Suffer Little Children to Come Unto Me, and Forbid Them not for of Such is the Kingdom of Heaven," adding that Christ would have boys and girls grow into Christian manhood and womanhood. "So many persons fail to understand children," said Mr. Warner. "And they quickly get out of patience with them. Jesus as a child of twelve years increased in wisdom and statute and grew in favor with God and man. This was the ideal picture of a boy growing into manhood.

"How necessary wisdom is. Not the filling of the brain with certain facts, but wisdom born of true knowledge which keeps boys and girls from foolish and silly things and gives them a wise and understanding heart. Boys and girls do not look upon laziness as a sin, but such idleness leads them into many avenues of trouble. There is so much to be done and so little time to do it in that we cannot afford to be slothful and lazy. Laziness is a sin from which we should pray to be delivered.

"There is nothing better than a healthy boy and girl, full of good red blood, and I believe it is a monstrous sin to try and put a safety valve on the life and activities of such. God gave us a body as well as a soul, a body to carry the eye of affection, feet to carry the message of peace and hands to extend the warm and hearty shake.

"Recently, I received a letter from a person who said that his attention had been called to the Holy Cross Athletic Club and he believed this to be a wrong use of a sacred symbol. I immediately answered the letter telling that person that Christ sanctified the whole life and not a part and if the symbol of the church resulted in making better boys and girls its object would be accomplished as much in that way as any other.

"Our boys and girls are drifting from the church and it is not altogether their fault. The parents, the ministers and the business men are equally responsible. It is more the power of example that counts. The parents don't go to church and one cannot expect the children to. God loves the boys and girls and a simple petition is just as effective as a set prayer. We find favor with God by trying to live according to His precepts, by trying to live good and pure lives. We often see instances of where one boy or girl is more favored than another, because they possess a set of qualities that all admire. If you want friends you must be friendly, and we miss much that is good in life by not being friendly. One can be serious, though not solemn. In the youth of today lies the future of the country and if we save the boys and girls the men and women will take care of themselves."

New Trolley Schedule in Effect.

The new trolley schedule recently adopted at a conference of city officials and representatives of the P. S. C., went into effect today and a fair trial will be necessary to show whether it is to be any improvement over the former schedule. Under the new arrangements the Arlington avenue cars will run across town to the end of the Somerset street line, while the Netherwood and Fourth street cars will run as far as Front and Somerset streets, from which point they will turn back. All cars will be operated on a fifteen minute schedule.

Xmas at Borough Schools.

The North Plainfield public schools will hold Christmas exercises Wednesday. Rev. Ora J. Shoup will address the high school pupils at 11:45 and the grammar department of Somerset school will join with them in recitations and music. The primary department will also have exercises at the same hour in its own rooms. Watchung kindergarten exercises will be held at 9:30.

BIG WINDFALL FOR SOUTH PLAINFIELDER?

William Reilly, foreman of a Lehigh Valley section gang at South Plainfield, is one of three who will inherit a fortune left by a cousin who recently died near Kansas City, Mo. The other two are John Reilly, of Newark, and Patrick Reilly, of Inniscarty, Ireland, the South Plainfielder's brothers. According to gossip in that village the estate is valued at $150,000, but Mr. Reilly could not be located today to confirm the story.

The estate is said to consist of interests in two gold mines in California, $7,000 in life insurance, several hundred head of cattle, 160 acres of land and a number of houses near Kansas City. Mr. Reilly is village constable.

FURTHER EVIDENCE AGAINST "JOHN JONES"

William Messerschmidt, the Washington street resident who was shot by a burglar he discovered in his home several weeks ago, visited police headquarters this morning for the first time since he was injured and picked out a photograph of "John Jones" as the picture of the man he had grappled with. "Jones," as he gave his name, is the colored prisoner who was arrested by Patrolman McDonald at the North avenue station two hours after Messerschmidt received a bullet in the leg and who is believed to be the assailant. A revolver was found in his pocket and finger marks on the window sill at the Messerschmidt home correspond with imprints of "Jones'" taken by an expert from the Rahway reformatory.

"Jones'" picture was placed among a number of others when Messerschmidt called at headquarters but he had no hesitancy in picking out the suspect. He stated that he had caught a fairly good glimpse of his face and would be able to recognize him at any time. "Jones" is at present in the county jail awaiting arraignment on the charge of carrying a concealed weapon.

PATROLMAN MAKES IMPORTANT CAPTURE

What will evidently prove to be an important capture was made by Patrolman Daniel McDonald at 9 o'clock last night when he arrested Daniel Robinson, colored, as he was passing down Watchung avenue alongside the Y. M. C. A. building. A search of the prisoner brought to light a .32 calibre revolver, fully loaded; a blackjack and a pair of heavy socks, such as are used by burglars to put over their shoes when etnering a house. He also carried a large gunny-sack under his arm.

The patrolman was standing at the side entrance of the association building when Robinson came along and was greatly startled when the former stepped in front of him. He mumbled something about wanting to know where Warren street was located and grew more confused as the officer asked him questions, McDonald became suspicious and at once placed the man under arrest when he discovered the revolver in his pocket.

In the city court, this morning, Robinson, attempted to explain his possession of the weapons by saying that he was on his way to Watchung to get a dog belonging to him that was being kept by a man for whom he formerly worked. He recently moved to Plainfield, he said, and has been living on Cottage place. He carried the gun and blackjack, he explained, because the Watchung man had several dogs about his place and he was afraid they might attack him when he entered the premises. The sack, he said, was to bring home some corn and the socks were simply a pair that had been given him.

Judge Runyon informed Robinson that his story did not sound plausible and held him in $250 bail to wait the grand jury's action. He was unable to secure a bondsman and was committed to Elizabeth.

Jacob Huff Goes Home.

Jacob Huff, foreman of one of the bridge gangs on the New Jersey Central, who recently met with an accident on the Newark drawbridge which necessitated the amputation of his arm at the hospital, was discharged cured yesterday and returned to his home in Somerville.

FIRE DESTROYS A HOUSE

Fred Stevens' Home Near Dunellen Devoured by Flames, Loss $9,000.

ONLY THE CHIMNEYS LEFT.

Blaze Starting in Roof Seen by Neighbors, Who Make Hard Fight Aided by Volunteer Company.

The home of Fred Stevens, west of Dunellen, was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. The building was like a roaring furnace before its only occupant, Mrs. Stevens, was aware that anything was wrong. She was sitting in the library reading at about 5 o'clock when some one rang the door bell and told her that the house was afire. Smoke was belching from the roof in great clouds. A cry of fire brought the neighbors with buckets and they worked frantically to subdue the flames. Others dragged some of the furniture from the lower floor, but only a part of it could be saved before the heat drove them out.

The Beechwood Heights volunteer fire department arrived with a hose cart, too late to save the residence, but a stream was kept on the barns and other outbuildings, and as a result, they escaped without damage.

The origin of the fire is supposed to have been due to a defective flue. There was a heavy fire in the furnace.

The loss, including that of the building and furniture, is estimated at $9,000. Nothing on the second floor was saved and only a part of the goods in the lower rooms. The house was new, having been built within a year by Fred Stevens, who came here from the West with his family, wife and one son. Mr. Stevens is a traveling salesman and was away from home at the time. The son, who is thirteen years old, was visiting at a neighbor's and his mother was the only person at home. She has a kennel of pedigree dogs and the safety of these pets was one of her first thoughts. They were taken to a nearby yard and tied to the fence. The dogs have been exhibited at Madison Square Garden, where they took blue ribbon prizes, and are therefore highly prized by their owner.

The Stevens home was one of the show places of that locality, its well kept appearance attracting the admiration of all passersby. It is situated half way between Conover's Corner and the village of Lincoln.

The family has accepted the hospitality of their nearest neighbor, Mr. Naylor, for the time being, and what few household goods which were rescued are packed in the barn.

IMPORTANT POSITION FOR DR. HENRY K. CARROLL.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who was former secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal church, and who for a long time has been one of the conspicuous leaders in that denomination, has been appointed secretary of the executive committee for the United States and Canada of the coming World Missionary Conference, to be held in Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14-24, 1910. The first meeting of the committee will be held in the Presbyterian building, New York, January 12.

Dr. Carroll was special educational commissioner to Porto Rico, which appointment he received from President McKinley.

Suspicious Characters Arrested.

David Christopher and Ernest Hill, of Baltimore, two negroes, were arrested yesterday at South Plainfield by Detective Garvaino and Marshal Reilly, as suspicious characters. They were found Saturday night in a barn owned by Anthony Phillip They were then put on a westbound freight train with the understanding that they were going to Easton. Yesterday morning they were again seen about the village and were arrested. Failing to explain their presence they were taken before Judge Suydam at New Brunswick, who sentenced them to thirty days in the county jail.

Township Remembers Children.

The New Providence Township Improvement Society will entertain the children of the township Saturday night, December 26, at Berkeley Lyceum. It has been arranged that Santa Claus will spend the evening with the little folks and distribute the presents. William Jeffery, president of the society, will preside and Frank C. Shaffer, the secretary, is in charge of the entertainment, which will be a great treat for the youngsters and is to be a surprise. The Board of Education is assisting in the preparations.

OLD EMPLOYE KILLED AT SCOTCH PLAINS QUARRY

Felice Di Mizio, of Scotch Plains, one of the oldest employes at the Hetfield stone crusher just back of the village, was killed at the quarry in an odd way just before noon today. He was at work on a steam drill when a huge boulder just above him became loosened and fell squarely on his head, crushing in his skull and toppling him to the ground. Dr. Westcott was called and arrived in a short time but the victim died within an hour. The ambulance from Muhlenberg Hospital was also summoned soon after the accident but it was on the way to the quarry when an undertaker's wagon was bringing the body to this city.

DiMizio was forty-four years old and was one of the best known of the Italians in the Scotch Plains colony. He came to the village twenty-three years ago and was regarded as a worthy and thrifty citizen. He leaves a wife and eight children, the eldest sixteen years old and the youngest eighteen months.

A brother of DiMizio was killed at the same quarry twelve years ago. He was in charge of the blasting and was blown to pieces by the premature discharge of a quantity of dynamite.

RECEIVER DEMANDS DREIER'S MORTGAGE

A bill has been filed in the Court of Chancery at Trenton by Elwood W. Moore, Jr., as receiver for the National Brewing Company, of Newark, against Harry Dreier and Charles P. Senger, a brother-in-law of Dreier, for the purpose of having set aside a chattel mortgage that was alleged to have been given by the Brewing Company to Dreier for $2,500. The receiver alleges in his complaint that the National Brewing Company was insolvent and that he was appointed to wind up its affairs.

On June 19, 1906, according to the receiver, the company was supposed to have had a directors' meeting and to have passed a resolution authorizing the company to execute a mortgage to Harry Dreier for $2,500 and that Dreier was to put the money into the treasury. The receiver further charges that this mortgage was never properly attested and he adds that the directors of the company were Samuel Drier, father of Harry Dreier, and father-in-law of Charles P. Senger, Charles P. Senger and Isaac Shoenthal. The receiver also charges that the mortgage is not lawful and asks the court to have the same delivered up by Dreier and cancelled.

The National Brewing Company was formed by Samuel Dreier and Charles P. Senger and was engaged in the brewery business in Newark and was declared insolvent at the suit of Jacob Weber sometime ago and Mr. Moore was then appointed receiver. The case is of much interest and the outcome will be watched closely.

HORSE DISAPPEARS THO' STABLE DOOR IS LOCKED.

Peter Fotouras, the peanut man of Somerset street, has a trick horse, but he did not know of the animal's circus qualifications until this morning. Last night he locked the stable door as usual and placed the key in his pocket as always. He was astonished on going to the barn at an early hour today to find it empty.

Chief Weiss was just making his morning toilet when the excited fudge merchant rushed into his presence, demanding police investigation of some sort. While the chief was translating his words into understandable Jersey language, the telephone bell rang, and a voice at the other end told of a strange bay mare being then engaged in eating the icicles off of somebody's picket fence and would the chief please come and take it away. It didn't take Fatouras long to identify the horse as his property, but he still insists that he locked the stable door last night.

Louis Kossuth Clark.

Louis Kossuth Clark, aged fifty-seven years, died yesterday at his home on Jackson avenue, Netherwood, following a long illness with cancer. He was a painter by trade and was a member of the Painters' Union, Queen City Lodge of Odd Fellows, and the Red Men. He leaves a wife and three sons. The funeral will be held at the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

SUYDAM DIES; ASSASSIN HELD

Plainfield Councilman Succumbs to Wounds, and Assailant Held Without Bail, is Remanded in Custody of Coroner.

AN INQUEST THIS AFTERNOON.

Funeral Services Wednesday Night—Lumsden, Who Killed Him, Is Confined to Tombs.

Councilman Harry B. Suydam, of this city, the curb broker who was shot in his office at 39 Broad street, New York, at 9:50 o'clock on Saturday morning, died at 8:10 o'clock this morning in the Hudson Street Hospital, in that city. John C. Lumsden the inventor who sent two bullets into the body of the broker, is in the Tombs, and was arraigned before Magistrate Finn in the Tombs Police Court this morning and charged with homicide. He was held without bail.

Suydam told the Coroner that Lumsden demanded $1,250 at the point of a revolver. In the struggle to get possession of the gun Suydam was shot twice.

He was forty-two years old, and for the last fifteen years had been operating on the curb, where he was well known and liked. He bore a good reputation in the Street.

Lumsden, who will be electrocuted unless he disproves the statement of his dying victim, is thirty-two years old and is said to be from Raleigh, N. C. Up to a few days ago he rented two furnished rooms at 313 West Fifty-seventh street, New York. His wife is now on a visit to the South.

At the hearing this morning, before Magistrate Finn, Lumsden was remanded to the Tombs without bail and was placed in the custody of the Coroner.

Mrs. Suydam, who is an invalid and but recently recovered from an operation, was at the bedside when death came. She had been with her husband constantly from the time he was taken to the hospital and last night was prevailed upon to take some rest, the physicians promising to summon her if a change for the worse came. Yesterday afternoon, Mr. Suydam showed some slight improvement, a sign that generally precedes death in critical cases. Towards midnight he began to sink and Mrs. Suydam was notified that the end was near.

As told in this paper on Saturday, Mr. Suydam was a member of the Common Council and was chairman of the excise license committee of that body. He was re-elected to office at the last election and was extremely popular with his fellow members.

The funeral services will be held at Mr. Suydam's late home, 322 Clinton avenue, on Wednesday night Rev. Charles Townsend, rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, will officiate. The Men's Club of that church, of which Mr. Suydam was president, will attend in a body. The interment will be made at New Brunswick on Thursday morning.

At the adjourned meeting of the Common Council tonight, President Tolles will make mention of the death of Mr. Suydam and the scheduled business, excepting the passing of necessary bills, will be postponed until a later date. Suitable resolutions will be passed and arrangements will be made for the city fathers to attend the funeral services in a body.

Mr. Suydam's early life was spent at New Brunswick, where he was reared by his grandmother who kept a boarding house in Church street. He removed from that city fifteen years ago, going to New York. He came here six years ago. Sixteen years ago he was married to Miss Kate Gulick, of Kingston. There were no children by the union.

The report that George J. Tobin, James F. Buckle and Ralph I. Tolles had been interested by Mr. Suydam in the patent of Lumsden proves erroneous. They had not invested in the promotion of the invention, whatever capital there was being

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The New Market fire department was organized at a meeting Friday night at Hotel Nelson. Officers were elected and committees appointed to solicit subscriptions and purchase equipment. There are twenty-two names on the membership list the majority of who were present. These officers were elected: President, A. G. Nelson; vice president, William T. Piddington, Sr.; secretary, Ogden Meeker; treasurer, George Bunting; chief, C. H. Thornton; first assistant chief, C. T. Rogers; second assistant, A. G. Nelson; foreman, Harry Piddington; assistant foreman Albert Herlick. On the subscription committee are: Clark T. Rogers, C. H. Thornton and Harry Piddington; equipment committee, Harry Piddington, Alex Herlich and Frank Marsh; It is proposed to buy a combination chemical and hose wagon. The next meeting will be held January 4. Work on the laying of the water main is being continued, and will be completed early in the spring.

Services were held in the Methodist church yesterday for the first time since the interior has been redecorated. In the morning Rev. Staley F. Davis, of Elizabeth, preached and the choir rendered special music. A men's meeting in the afternoon was addressed by Rev C. S. Kemble, of Monroe Avenue church, Plainfield. The Epworth League held devotional services at 7 o'clock with W. W. Giddes as leader. The topic was "Open Doors That Call for Renewed Consecration." At the night service the principal sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. Dougherty, of New York. Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, district superintendent of Plainfield, and the pastor, Rev. E. C. Butcher, made short talks.

The pupils of both the Lincoln and Whittier schools will take part in Christmas exercises Thursday afternoon. Those at the first named place will be held at 1 o'clock and the latter at 2:15.

Rev. George H. Gardner preached a Christmas sermon at the First Baptist church yesterday morning.

Miss Emma Wittke, daughter of Charles Wittke, and Frank M. Taylor, were married Friday evening at the home of the bride's parents. Only the immediate friends of the contracting parties were present.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Terrell road, which was taken over as a county road during the past summer, has not been accepted as a State road. The property owners have all signed an agreement to have the road straightened out. During the coming spring the work will be started and when finished will give a straight macadam road from Mountain avenue through to Rahway. The improvement will open up some desirable property and be of great benefit to the owners.

Marshal Logan took charge of a man who was put off the 4:18 train at Fanwood Saturday afternoon for refusing to pay his fare. The man who claimed Plainfield as his home, insisted that he had purchased a ticket but had lost it. As no charge was made against the man he was allowed to purchase a ticket and take the next train for home.

AMUSEMENTS.

Proctor's theatre was thronged Saturday afternoon and night with people who were delighted with the fine program of moving picture, the Cameraphone and illustrated songs. There will be new moving pictures every day, with a change of the Cameraphone Mondyas, Wednesdays and Saturdays. On Christmas Day there will be a continuous performance from 10 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night, without intermission.

Point of View.

"An honest man," said the thoughtful thinker, "seldom blows his own horn."

"Nothing remarkable about that," rejoined the contrary person. "An honest man is usually too poor to own a horn."—Chicago News.

THE BLOCKADE.

There's fear in Venezuela
For the Dutch are off the shore;
Their smoky little warships
Ahe prepared to rip an' roar.
The fortress guns are loaded
And the Venezuelans trust
They'll never have to shoot 'em
'Cause they're pretty sure to bust.

The ports are all blockaded
In a mighty skeery way.
The boats of Wilhelmina
Are patrolin' every bay.
The peevish Castro's navy
Is beside the coaling pier;
And soon some fierce dispatches
We are pretty sure to hear.

XMAS EXERCISES AT GROSZMANN SCHOOL

Christmas exercises were held at the Groszmann School of Nervous and Atypical Children, "Watchung Crest" Saturday afternoon. A representative audience from Plainfield and New York city was present, and all seemed pleased with the results which the institution has accomplished. They enjoyed a series of well-rendered dramatic plays given by children, who, to the unintiated, could scarcely be told from the average child of the school age.

The stage with its numerous mechanical electric and scenic devices, the costumes, the hall decorations etc., were an agreeable surprise to the audience. The acting was natural and unstudied, the entire festival being presented in the spirit of good fellowship. While the children had to exercise great self-control, this was not marred by too much self consciousness.

During the intermission, Dr. Groszmann made a few remarks, briefly stating the nature and importance of such work as the school is doing. His remarks were especially appropriate to the occasion and this season of the year. During the afternoon there was a Christmas tree celebration, the singing of carols, with organ accompaniment by Miss Edith Emmons.

Will Give Oratorio "Elijah."

William E. MacClymont, of this city, will give the oratorio "Elijah," in the Presbyterian church, Cranford, January 5, under the auspices of the Cranford Choral Club.

EVERY STAMP A BULLET IN GREAT WHITE PLAGUE FIGHT BEING WAGED BY LOCAL TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY

The Christmas Stamp, which has proved tremendously popular thoughout the United States and particularly in large centres, has been introduced in this city by the Plainfield Tubercolosis Society. Millions of these charity stamps have been sold and they are becoming as common on letters as the stamps of Uncle Sam Every stamp is a bullet in the fight against tuberculosis.

During the Christmas season, these stamps will be on sale at the Daily Press office. They may also be obtained at Laing's stationery store in West Front street; Estil's stationery store in Park avenue, and Miller's drug store at Fourth street and Park avenue. A packet of nine will be sold for ten cents, and a packet of twenty-four for twenty-five cents. The Daily Press and the merchants have consented to dispose of these stamps for the benefit of the local society, and every penny realized in this way will be devoted to fighting the Great White Plague in this city. Not a penny of expense is attached to the sale and therefore every dollar realized will be clear profit to the society.

The Christmas stamp symbolizes "Goodwill to Men." Put it on your Xmas packages and letters. It will not carry any kind of mail but any kind of mail will carry it. It is issued by the Red Cross Society, but the receipts here will be devoted exclusively to the work here.

Of it, Leigh Mitchell Hodges in the Philadelphia North American says:

"It will carry the day's greetings quite as well as any costly present, and better far than this, it carries a promise that no other present can bear. For it is a messenger of health—the best thing in the world—and of hope—the foundation upon which we build our strongest and surest deeds. It may plant the seed of knowledge which will save a life—and there is no way of placing a money value on such an achievement."

The Plainfield Tuberculosis Society was organized two years ago by philanthropic citizens and has been doing a grand work here. It aims not only to prevent the spread of the communicable disease by disseminating knowledge concerning its causes and treatment, but to minister unto those already afflicted. At the present time, the society is materially assisted in its crusade by Miss Mary Leahy, who made a successful fight when attacked by the dreaded disease some few years ago.

Information in detail concerning the efforts and plans of the society may be obtained at the Plainfield Board of Health office or from any of these officers: President, Charles J. Fisk; vice-presidents, Joseph O Osgood and Dr. B. vanD. Hedges; secretary and treasurer, Leon R. Thurlow.

Interesting Letter from Japan.

Yesterday being review day at the Sunday-school session of the Congregational church, it was made of especial interest by the reading of a letter from Superintendent John M Whiton, by the associate superintendent, Harold Nomer. The letter was written by Mr. Whiton when he was in Japan, the American fleet being there at that time. His description of what happened then was of great interest to the school. Mr. Nomer supplimented the reading of the letter by telling an interesting story, appropriate to the occasion. Next Sunday, the school and church will observe Christmas. The school entertainment will be held Tuesday night, December 29.

In the City Court.

Howard Burgess, a colored coachman employed by a Rockview terrace family, was on his way home with bundle of clothes, late last night, when Patrolman Nolan stopped him at Plainfield avenue and Front street. The officer made some inquiries as to Burgess' identity, but when he attempted to examine the colored man objected. He was placed under arrest after a struggle. In the city court, this morning, Judge Runyon suspended sentence but advised Burgess to hold back from the police when stopped late at night.

Henry E. Phillips' Funeral.

The funeral of Henry E. Phillips was held yesterday afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James H. Andrews, of East Fifth street. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. E. B. Shaw and was attended only by members of the family.

Golden Wedding Celebration.

be placed in museums and exhibited as ancient instruments of torture. "There will be no more war when the people get into their hearts Christ, the Prince of Peace," he said.

The Sunday-school exercises in the afternoon were held in the chapel of the church before an audience that packed both rooms. It had been announced that gifts for the children of the Day Nursery would be received, and as a result nearly everybody who attended carried a parcel, which was deposited on the platform. These packages were of all sizes and shapes and were referred to in a short talk by the school superintendent, G. E. Hall, in which he thanked the donors.

An orchestra of ten pieces rendered the music. The musicians were: Piano, Miss Mamie Clark; violins, G. W. V. Moy, Miss Arline Brown, Miss Marjorie Brown, Miss Wilson; flute, Elmer Wheeler; cornet, W. Frazee; trombone, G. T. Dunham; cello, Dr. J. F. Berg; basso, J. H. Buchanan; conductor, Arthur S. Mosher.

This program was given:

Selection, "Gloria," Haydn, orchestra; carol, school; responsive reading; prayer, Rev. A. E. Finn; carol, school; "The Christmas Story," Mrs. D. M. Runyon; carol, school; "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem," quartet; carol school; selection, "The Heavens Are Telling," Haydn, orchestra; carol, school; recitation, "The Star of Bethlehem," Cornelia Smith; carol, "Once in Royal David City," primary department; carol, "Christmas Bells are Ringing," solo and chorus, Miss Nora Schenck and school; recitation, "The Christmas Gifts," Clara Hadley; carol, "The Angels' Songs," primary department; carol, school; carol, school; selection, "March Pontificale," Gounod, orchestra.

At the conclusion of the exercises, Theodore Runyon was presented with a set of books, a gift from his Bible class. Nelson Runyon made the presentation.

In the evening, Rev. A. E. Finn preached a sermon on "The Christmas Message of Cheer." The choir sang an anthem entitled, "Behold I Bring You Good Tidings."

Crescent Avenue Church.

This was the program at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church: Morning, Prelude, offertory on two Christmas hymns, Guilmant; anthem, "Appear, Thou Light Divine," Morrison; solo, "The Pilgrim," Adams; offertory, "Awake, Put on Thy Strength," Case; postlude, "Hallelujah Chorus," Handel. Evening—Prelude, "Andante Grazioso," Beethoven; anthem, "The Woods and Every Sweet Smelling Tree," West; anthem, "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks," Neidlinger; solo, "The Christmas Tree—The Shepherds—The Kings," Cornelius. Mrs. Virginia Wilson was the soloist.

Hope Chapel.

At both services in Hope Memorial chapel, yesterday, a special musical program was given under the direction of the organist, Mrs. L. R. Howard. At the morning service, a tenor solo was rendered by John Slorah and in the evening Miss Eunice Eckert and Harold Brownell gave a duet, "O Little Town of Bethlehem." Pastor Howard continued his series of special sermons on St. Paul and in the evening preached on the topic, "The Coming of the Saviour."

Married at Synagogue.

Miss Mollie Shulman, of New York, and Abraham Lotwin, of this city, were married yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Synagogue of the Children of Israel. The bride is a sister of Mrs. I. Srager, of West Third street, at whose home a supper was held after the ceremony. Only members of the family were present. Rabbi M. Ruthman officiated.

Italian Attacks Girl.

Annie Crossan, aged sixteen, of Fords, was attacked and ill-treated by an Italian on Saturday night between Metuchen and South Plainfield. The girl is in a dangerous condition. Her assailant escaped.

Mrs. Samuel Kriney, of Mariners place, and her uncle, John Van Nest, of Martinsville, have returned home from Bloomington, Ill., where they visited Mrs. Kriney's uncles, John and Benjamin Harber.

ANOTHER LECTURE ABOUT THE CORSET.

A great deal has been said about the subject, and there is more to come so long as there is room for improvement.

If women but knew the importance of a well-fitted corset, there would be more stylish appearing costumes. Seemingly most women buy a corset merely as a dress article which custom has decreed they must wear. For young girls and those of a girlish, undeveloped figure, nothing is better suited tahn the Sahlin waist. It has no hooks or eyes and fastens by means of clasps. The corset is rounded but not full over the bust, and the agony—for that is all it can be called—of a corset steel pushing against the breast bone is not noticeable in this corset. For women who wear tailor-made costumes, or those who wish to do so, yet cannot because of an imperfect form, they should put more into the corset price and less into the garment. A perfect corset will cost $15. It is fitted to one's form when the purchase is made. While a large affair, it is soft and as easy to wear as a glove. Unfortunately only women of considerable means can buy such corsets, yet there would be economy in one saving for this purpose, and such a corset will last for years. It is not padded at all, but curved with flexible bones, giving a perfect form.

If a woman is very large or has extremely large hips her underclothing should all be made with circular yokes and the corset placed over all garments but the outside petticoat. It is then possible to hide the bulky appearing skirts. Hip pads are not healthy and they are not graceful, though the slender woman can wear gathered petticoats to an advantage, as most all do. Avoid low girdles for they destroy one's good form and make a poor one twice as noticeable. A too rounded form is as unattractive as a deficient one, though the former can be remedied by wearing tight shields for this purpose. They lace in the same manner as a corset, and often they are attached to the top of a corset, though the best ones are apart from it. They are not expensive. These details are important, because the prevailing styles call for an ecellent figure.

FADS AND FANCIES IN MILLINERDOM.

Millinery is furnishing the shoppers with food for excitement and gossip, and while these models are always to be taken with the proverbial grain of salt, one may gain from them some idea of the intentions of the master milliners of Paris. Many of the shapes popular last summer reappear in winter guise, with the extravagantly wide, low crowned flat shapes which were a late summer idea definitely in evidence. Shapes covered with satin, with velvet, with uncut velvet and with heavy lustrous corded silk, rivaling the felts and beavers, are, indeed, in the majority so far, and wings, ostrich plumes, aigrettes, scarfs, velvet, ribbons, flowers, all have their share in the trimmings.

A very smart hat, moderate in size and wing trimmed, is of smoke gray felt, with scarf of soft green and wings in which gray and greens are blended. Then there is a wide, low tricorne shape in amethyst satin, with velvet draping it and silver gray plumes matching an old silver buckle.

Another low, broad hat with bowl crown, was of a peculiarly lovely shade of amethyst or mulberry, with an odd little scarf of satin in the same shade and a cluster of sharp, narrow wings or quills—neither one nor the other exactly—in irridescent greens, blues, purples, browns, all harmonizing wonderfully, thrust carelessly through the scarf on the right side and standing out at a wide angle.

Wide brims faced with contrasting colors are numerous and among the prettiest new models are large shapes with wide, drooping brim and large low bowl crowned, trimmed all around the crown in exquisite big roses of silk and velvet.

Poor Child!

"When I grow up and marry mother, will I have a husband like papa?" asked Mary.

"I hope so, dear," said mother.

"And if I don't marry, will I be like Aunt Sue?"

"I hope so."

"Gracious," said Mary, as she turned away, "what a fix I'm in!"—The Delineator.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIP WINNER TELLS OF OXFORD LIFE

The following are extracts from a letter written by F. Marmaduke Potter Rutgers '09, of Metuchen, in which he gives some interesting impressions of Oxford:

"As postage rates between Great Britain and the United States have been reduced, I thought I could afford to write you a letter about my adventures, requesting news, of which I obtained quite a good deal in the Targum—and concerning sundry other things.

"On Sunday morning, 3 a. m., October 4, the Oxford "stewed gent" arrived in Liverpool safe and sound, though a considerable portion of what should have become a part of him was left in various portions of the Atlantic. I never before thought it possible for a machine to produce and give forth more than we fed to it, but have now proved the fact.

"On Saturday morning, when I got up and looked out the porthole I saw the cliffs of the Emerald Isle, and they were certainly a pleasant sight after nothing to look at but water for a week.

"They are also a pleasant thing to look upon because of their natural beauty, being of peculiarly soft gray color and rising from the sea clear and bold, with no sandy beach to break the force of the waves. Here and there upon them may be seen groups of cottages, and an occasional tower. A soft shimmer of green covers the mountains in most places, and in more fertile spots, there are neatly kept garden patches which as you steam along the cliffs make the whole resemble a picture.

"We anchored off Queenstown, a snug little harbor of almost perfect semi-circular shape, and a tug came out for passengers and mail. On it came some newsboys, who rushed on board crying: "Paipers, Paipers, anny papiers; Cork Examiner, Sorr." You should have heard their inimitable brogue. As I had changed my money into English coin, I laboriously counted out 'tuppence,' and received a 'papier.'

"A man now suddenly bore down upon me, and asked me where I came from. With becoming dignity I replied 'New Jersey.' He then asked me my destination, course I would take up, etc. Perceiving from his questions that he was ignorant of all things American, and of all things generally, I rolled off the name of my course in its most replete condition, "Litterae Humaniores."

"He made a few notes as a bluff and asked more questions about the party, how many, etc. I now gathered that he had all the time been asking about the party, but did not further enlighten him, so I presume that the 'Cork Examiner' had something to say next day about the 38 Rhodes Scholars from New Jersey going to Oxford to study some unpronounceable subjects.

"On board ship I had a chance to give the fellows some of the songs we sing around college. We formed a quartette and rendered "In the Evening by the Moonlight" and others—with the true coon accent from the Southern men.

"While wandering about Liverpool it was amusing to see the curious glances cast at us, which were returned with interest. What especially attracted my attention was the inconsistency of their low massive stone buildings and high top-heavy tram cars, which run on the left hand track, in fact, everything here takes the left in passing, hansoms, bicycles, etc., doncher know. What especially attracted their attention was the wide trousers and the huge slouch hat one of the wild and woolly Westerners wore.

"Later in the day we started for Oxford, via Chester, and arrived in Oxford about 8:30 that night.

"It is scarcely necessary for me to enter into details about Oxford, as you may obtain them in better form in Baedeker's, but the general tone of the place is antique, and it is this that gives it much of its charm. Everywhere you go you find old stone buildings, many of them colleges, and their time-chipped walls and venerable aspect, with their background of history, are inspiring to one who is used to the new things of America.

"The Colleges are all built on the Quad plan, and these Quads are very beautiful in numerous instances. Christ church is my colleg, familiarly called the 'House' which sounds homelike, and its Quad is especially large and fine. The main one which you enter from under Old Tom tower is carpeted with a fine green sward, and in the centre, a fountain plays. The college's old halls, stone staircases an ddank, dim-lighted corridors give one an almost uncanny feeling. When you get in the great dining hall with walls lined with handsome hand-painted portaits of various dignitaries, an light coming only from candles set about on the tables, and when you sit down to a meal after the mumbling of a Latin grace, you are inclined to think you have stepped into a book or back somewhere in historic times.

"This is not the only old custom. Everywhere they are numerous years behind the times. They use quill pens altogether in college, are just putting in shower baths, the bicycles are a wonder to behold, and they are only just beginning to realize that America is not an unexplored wilderness. One official addressed a letter to Boston, Penn. I guess he forgot the Boston Tea Party.

"One thing I know you are anxious to hear about is Chapel. On week days it is at 8 o'clock, but by going to roll call on Sunday at 9 and to two Sunday services you need only go once during the week as only four chapels are required in a week. The first day I roused up and had breakfast before chapel, but soon discovered that you do not have it here until afterwards, and your lectures, if you have any, do not as a rule begin before 10. I have two hours of lectures a week and one hour with my tutor, which makes three hours altogether, a week. The rest I do on my own hook.

"At Sunday services, I have to wear a long white surplice, but only a short godwn during the week. They pray that King Edward may vanish all his enemies but my amen to this is not very noticeable.

"At night after 9 o'clock we are supposed to wear cap and gown, and proctors are about to fine you 5 shillings if you don't. The custom is, however, not to do this, and especially is this seen among the Americans for when we meet every Saturday night at the American Club, of which Hull is president, scarcely any wear gowns.

"You must know that I am now an English gentleman, must be called Esq., must not carry bundles or do other menial labor. William, my servant, is to do this for me. If I havea bundle to carry I wait till night and then joyfully follow the by ways.

"Around Oxford everybody looks on you as a great opportunity. Tradesmen, colleges, and all wring out the money at every turn. When I play tennis I must needs wear white shirt and bags, a descriptive word they use for trousers. My ordinary costume is a rough tweed Norfolk jacket, gray flannel trousers, and green waistcoat. Flannel shirts are worn almost exclusively among the students, and in such a damp climate, they are very comfortable."—Rutgers Targum.

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell.

Most instructive will be the stirring lecture of Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, master mariner, surgeon and magistrate of Labrador, at the Plainfield High School Auditorium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. The subject will be his life and work among the deep sea fisherman of that desolate coast.

Dr. Grenfell's work has interested the whole civilized world and he will have a message to deliver that will be of vital importance. Do not fail to hear him.

Good Time at Drake's.

Drake Business College pupils have arranged for an entertainment to be held in the school rooms tonight. Besides games and other amusements there will be candy, ice cream and cake. The treasury of the Students' Society, one of the college organizations, will be drawn on for the expenses of the entertainment. The committee in charge are: Claude R. Borden, chairman; Lillian Huelsen, Minnie Corzatt and Garrett W. Van Cleef.

Colby Gets a Newspaper?

State Senator Everett Colby, according to a report in the New York morning newspapers, is said to be the purchaser through John J. McGowan of a considerable interest in the Elizabeth Evening Times. Mr. McGowan took charge of that newspaper today as managing editor. He resigned two weeks ago as assistant editor of the Elizabeth Journal. The report of the purchase by Senator Colby is not generally believed in this city.

Johnson Goes to Trenton.

Thomas Johnson, the colored man who, several weeks ago tried to kill his wife at their home on South Second street, and who was sentenced to State prison for a term of seven years, was taken to Trenton today to begin serving time.

H. B. SUYDAM DIES

subscribed in New York.

The assault was one of the most sensational in the financial district in years. In full view of the traders on the curb, Suydam stood at his office window, engaged in earnest and animated conversation with Lumsden, when the pistol shots were heard.

Attention was directed to the Suydam offices on the second floor. Policeman Corcoran of the traffic squad rushed upstairs and found the wounded broker lying on the floor while two men struggled with a dark haired, clean-shaven young man who admitted that he had fired the shots at Suydam.

When questioned concerning the assault, Lumsden replied that he acted only in self-defence. Suydam, whose strength was fast ebbing, turned his head toward the group and denied Lumsden's explanation. Later, at the hospital, Coroner Harburger got a statement from Suydam who said he was a director in the Electric Vibrotator Company, which got into financial trouble. A loan was made on the stock of John C. Lumsden, and the proceeds used to ease up the company's difficulties. Lumsden believed that he had been "done" by Suydam and the president George Jacobs, to the tune of $650. The wounded man declared that Jacobs had given Lumsden notes for this amount, and that this paper would be taken up as it matured.

PERSONAL.

Roy Whitall, of Thornton avenue, has returned from college for the Christmas season.

William Lambert, a student at Hobart College, has returned home for the holiday season.

W. H. Webster, of Truell Court, is entertaining Archibald Ashe and Edward O'Neal from Dr. Grenfell's mission station in Labrador.

Miss Gertrude Hunter, a junior at Barnard College, is spending the holiday season with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley Hunter, of West Fourth street.

C. W. Fogarty, superintendent of Drake Business College, accompanied by his wife, expects to leave tomorrow for Syracuse, N. Y., their former home, to visit until January.

Plan Hebrew School.

Rabbi Ruthman, of New York, delivered a lecture at the Synagogue of the Children of Israel, Sunday night, it being the third day of the celebration of the Feast of Chanukah. It is proposed to organize a Hebrew school for boys, which will probably be conducted in rooms set apart for that purpose at the synagogue. A committee is to be appointed sometime this week to solicit subscriptions. A contribution of $100 has already been received. It was given by M. Abrams.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

A play with a scenic display of exceptional beauty, with sensational effects beyond compare, with a series of scenes both interesting and thrilling, with a company of players far above the ordinary, with newly thought out situations surprising and logical, with atmosphere as exhilarating as the mountain breezes, such a play is the Kimit & Gazolo Amusement Company's offering this season. Now things, theatrically speaking, are very scarce. "The Rocky Mountain Express" possesses all of the above mentioned attainments, and will come to the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night.

In this day of stage realism when the most unpretentious of attractions boasts of some innovation as a thriller for its theatre patrons it is a continuous battle between rival managers to produce each season something new, and the announced attraction for Christmas day afternoon and night at the New Plainfield theatre, "The Ninety and Nine," will offer a splendid bit of stage realism incidental to a well acted and well staged drama. The particular mechanical effect is a reproduction of a high modern high speed locomotive running at the rate of a mile a minute through a terrific forest of a very considerable newspaper notice. The original New York cast which appeared in the run of the piece at the Academy of Music, has been engaged.

The only play that ever had the endorsement of the United Commercial Travelers of America and the Travelers Protective Association, is "The Traveling Salesman," James Forbes' comedy success which Henry B. Harris will present at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night. Incidentally it is the only play that has ever been written that truthfully depicts that most interesting of all American characters, the commercial drummer with positive fidelity. Written by its author for the sole purpose of entertaining, it more than makes good as evidenced by six months of uninterrupted success at the Gaiety Theatre to crowded houses. Mr. Forbes, it will be remembered is the author of "The Chorus Lady," a play that has attracted the multitude of theatregoers by reason of its collection of slang phrases of unique originality. Its successor, "The Traveling Salesman" brings to light, slang idioms of a character that tend to throw an audience into convulsions of laughter.

"Zig-Zag Journeys Around the World," is the sub-title of a delightful series of pictorial "Talks of Travel in Distant Lands," to be presented by Fred Niblo, the American humorist tourist, at the New Plainfield theatre on four consecutive Wednesday nights. The premier offering will be "Africa, from the Cape to Cairo," December 30; "Egypt, from Cairo to Khartoum," January 6; "London, from Windsor Castle to White Chapel," January 20; "Russia, from the Black Sea to Siberia," January 27. Each of the series is graphically illustrated by hundreds of superbly colored, illuminated views, panoramic photographs and moving pictures, all taken "on the spot" by Mr. Niblo and his assistants during his globe-girdling tours to the uttermost ends of the earth.

At the New Plainfield theatre on Thursday night, December 31, Cohan & Harris will present Scott Welch in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," by George M. Cohan, whose "Little Johnny Jones" has shown how thoroughly theatregoers enjoy Mr. Cohan's clever productions in playwriting and music. "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" had a long run in Chicago, and has created the same interest in New York at the New Amsterdam Theatre, and likewise at the Colonial Theatre, Boston. The cast includes Scott Welch, Frances Gordon, Elizabeth Drew, Julia Ralph, Susan Chisnell, Ninon De Varenne, Eugene McGregor, James H. Manning, Jas. A. Davett, Harry Gwynette and Archie Mackenzie, Jr.

Digby Bell, whose splendid work in "Mr. Pipp" is still fresh in the minds of the Plainfield public, will be seen here again on New Years Day in George Broadhurst's most successful comedy "An International Marriage." The reviewers and the public at large claim that as Bennington Brent, the Mayor of Omaha, Mr. Bell has the most acceptable part that has been written for him since he entered stardom, which is saying a great deal for one, which the theatregoers look to, as one of their favorite and foremost entertainers.

FOOTBALL.

The New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad has just made public the returns for traffic and earnings from the Harvard-Yale football game at New Haven last month. The figures show that the railroad carried 39,777, as compared with 41,454 two years ago, the revenue this year being $71,299, as against $62,901 in 1906. The passengers from Boston at last month's game were 7,048, with a revenue of $18,931. The New York passengers numbered 12,952, with a revenue of $19,428. On the day of the game the New Haven road ran 66 trains into that city, made up of 584 cars and 21,215 passengers. This army was handled without an accident.

PianoExtravagance

Consists Only in Buying the Wrong Piano at Any Price

As home entertainment is a necessity for the welfare of the family circle, and the fact that a good piano is the best investment you can make for increasing the pleasure of your home, the only mistake you can make is in buying the WRONG PIANO AT ANY PRICE. The purchase of a

is economy personified. You want your dollars to go as far as possible. You want the best at the right price. This is what you get in a Hallet & Davis, to say nothing of the quiet joy and satisfaction that inheres in the ownership of good and beautiful things—this makes Hallet & Davis pianos true bargains.

Our small payment plan makes piano buying easy. Write for catalogues of pianos and special offerings in Player Pianos.

Corporation Notice.

Assessments for Street Improvements in the City of Plainfield.

Notice of Hearing Before Commissioners.

The subscribers, being the commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, of the County of Union, by order of said court, entered on the ninth day of December, 1908, to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the permanent improvement of streets under the ordinances of the City of Plainfield, entitled: "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield with permanent and durable Brick Pavement, and to Provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits," approved July 1, 1907, "An Ordinance to amend an Ordinance entitled 'An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of Streets of the City of Plainfield with permanent and durable Brick Pavement, and to Provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits,' adopted by the Common Council July 1, 1907, and approved by the Mayor July, 1, 1907," approved July 13, 1908, and "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable Macadam Pavement, and to Provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," adopted by the Common Council May 4, 1908; re-adopted by the Common Council June 8, 1908, notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor, directing the permanent improvement of, with permanent and durable vitrified brick pavement:

Somerset street, from the northerly side line of Front street to the bridge over Green Brook;

Watchung avenue, from the southerly side line of East Front street to the southerly side line of East Fourth street, exclusive of the portion of said Watchung avenue already provided with brick pavement;

Park avenue, from the southerly side line of Front street to the southerly side line of Fourth street;

East Fourth street, from the westerly side line of Sycamore street to the easterly side line thereof;

Arlington avenue, from the northerly side line of West Seventh street to the southerly side line thereof; also from the northerly side line of West Eighth street to the southerly side line thereof;

And directing the improvement of, with durable macadam pavement:

North avenue, from the northeasterly curb line of Berckman street to the southwesterly curb line of Terrill road;

Leland avenue, from the present macadam on East Front street to the present macadam on South avenue;

Netherwood avenue, from the present macadam on East Front street to the northwesterly curb line of East Second street;

Monroe avenue, from the present macadam on West Seventh street to the present macadam on West Eighth street;

West Eighth street, from the present macadam on Monroe avenue to the city line;

West Third street, from the present macadam at Monroe avenue to the present macadam at Clinton avenue;

Clinton avenue, from the present macadam at West Third street to the city line;

which ordinances were adopted under and by virtue of the act of the Legislature entitled, "An act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same," approved June 13, 1898, and the amendments and supplements thereto to which several ordinances reference is hereby made for greater certainty:

The subscribers, the Commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Union as aforesaid, and for the purpose of performing the duties and executing the powers conferred by said acts of the Legislature, having duly qualified as required by law, do hereby pursuant to the order of said court, give notice that on Tuesday, the fifth day of January, 1909, at 8 o'clock P. M., at the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the said City of Plainfield, said commissioners will proceed with the discharge of their said duties and hear any person or persons in interest who may present themselves to be heard, and at such time and place, and at such other times and places to which they may adjourn for that purpose, the said commissioners will attend and give a public hearing to those persons who may desire to be heard.

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE OF LANDS.

Union County Orphans' Court.

In the matter of the Estate of Irving E. Salmon, deceased. — On Order for Sale of Lands to Pay Debts.

By virtue of an order entered in the above stated matter on the fourteenth day of October, A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Eight, I shall sell at public vendue at the Sheriff's Office in the Court House, at Elizabeth, New Jersey, on the twenty-eight day of December, A. D. Nineteen Hundred and Eight, between the hours of twelve o'clock noon and five o'clock in the afternoon, to-wit at two o'clock in the afternoon all the following described lands and premises, situate in the City of Plainfield, in the County of Union and State of New Jersey.

Being that part of Lot 15 in Block 6 on Map of said premises more particularly described as follows:

Beginning at a point on the Northeasterly side of John street distant in a Northwesterly direction two hundred feet from its intersection with the Northwesterly side of Union avenue (now called West Seventh street); thence running in a Northeasterly direction at right angles with John street one hundred and fifty feet more or less to the Southwesterly line of the Cemetery; thence in a Northwesterly direction along said line of the Cemetery, fifty feet; thence Southwesterly at right angles to John street one hundred and fifty feet more or less to the Northeasterly side of John street; thence Southeasterly along said side of John street fifty feet to the place of beginning.

Together with the land in front thereof to the centre line of John street subject to the easement of the public therein as a public highway.

Being the same premises conveyed to Joshua S. Salmon by John H. Jackson, Special Master in Chancery of New Jersey, by deed dated April 21, 1892, and recorded in the Clerk's Office of Union County, in Book 271, page 327, etc.

The above premises are sold subject to the right of dower therein of the widow of Joshua S. Salmon in the whole tract and subject also to the right of dower of the widow of the said Irving E. Salmon in the undivided one-sixth part thereof.

Dated November 23, 1908.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

The colonel had the sensation of an electric shock; as the second robber grabbed at the fob in the boy's belt, Archie struck him with the edge of his open hand so swiftly and so fiercely under the jaw that he reached back against his companion. The colonel's surprise did not disturb the automatic aim of an old fighter of the plains; his revolver barked; and he sprang out on the man he shot. "Get back in the berths, all of you," he shouted; "give me a chance to shoot!"

The voice of the porter, whose hands had been turning up the lights not quite steadily, now pealed out with camp-meeting power, "Dat's it; give de colonel a chance to do some killing!"

Both bandits were sprawling on the floor of the aisle, one limp and moaning; but the other got one hand up to shoot; only to have Archie kick the revolver out of it, while at the same instant an umbrella handle fell with a wicked whack on the man's shoulder. The New England professor was out of his berth. He had been a baseball man in his own college days; his bat was a frail one, but he hit with a will; and a groan told of his success. Nevertheless, the fellow scrambled to his feet. Mrs. Melville was also out of her berth, thanks to which circumstance he was able to escape; as the colonel (who had grappled with the other man and prevented his rising) must needs have shot through his sister-in-law to hit the fleeing form.

"What's the matter?" demanded Mrs. Melville, while the New Englander used an expression which, no doubt, as a good church member, he regretted, later, and the colonel thundered: "All the women back into their berths. Don't anybody shoot! You, professor, look after that fellow on the floor." He was obeyed; instinctively, the master of the hour is obeyed. The porter came forward and helped the New Englander bind the prostrate outlaw, with two silk handkerchiefs and a pair of pajamas, guard mount being supplied by three men in very startling costumes; and a kind of seraglio audience behind the curtains of the berth being enacted by all the women in the car, only excepting Aunt Rebecca and Miss Smith. Aunt Rebecca, in her admirable traveling costume of a soft gray silk wrapper, looked as undisturbed as if midnight alarms were an every-night feature of journeys. Miss Smith's black hair was loosely knotted; and her face looked pale, while her dark eyes shone. They all heard the colonel's revolver; they all saw the two men who had met him at the car door spring off the platform into the dark. The robbers had horses waiting. The colonel got one shot; he saw the man fall over his horse's neck; but the horse galloped on; and the night, beyond the little splash of light, swallowed them completely.

After the conductor and the engineer had both consulted him, and the express messenger had appeared, armed to the teeth, a little too late for the fray, but not too late for lucid argument, Winter made his way back to the car. Miss Smith was sitting beside Archie; she was holding the watch, which had played so important a part in the battle, up under the electric light to examine an inscription. The loose black sleeves of her blouse fell back, revealing her arms; they were white and softly rounded. She looked up; and the soldier felt the sudden rush of an emotion that he had not known for years; it caught at his throat almost like an invisible hand.

"Well, Archie," he said foolishly, "good for jiu-jitsu!"

Archie flushed up to his eyes.

"Why didn't you obey orders, young man, and hold up your hands?" said Col. Rupert Winter. "You're as bad as poor Haley, who is nearly weeping that he had no chance, but only broke away from Mrs. Haley in time to see the robbers make off."

"I—I did at first; but I got so mad I forgot," stammered Archie happily. "Afterward you were my superior officer and I had to do what you said."

All the while he chaffed the boy, he was watching for that beautiful look in Janet Smith's eyes; and wondering when he could get her off by herself to brag to her of the boy's courage. When his chance at a few words did come he chuckled: "Regular fool Winter! I knew he would act in just that absurd, reckless way." Then he caught the look he wanted; it surely was a lovely, womanly look; and it meant—what in thunder did it mean? As he puzzled, his pulses gave the same unaccountable, smothering leap; and he felt as the boy of 20 had felt, coming back from his battle to his first love.

CHAPTER IV.

The Vanishing of Archie.

"In my opinion," said Aunt Rebecca, critically, eyeing her new drawing-room on the train to San Francisco; "the object of our legal methods seems to be to defend the criminal. And a very efficient means to this end is to make it so uncomfortable and costly and inconvenient for any witnesses of a crime that he runs away rather than endure it. Here we have had to stay over so long in Salt Lake we nearly lost our drawing-room. But never mind, you got your man committed. Did you find out anything about his gang?"

The colonel shook his head. "No, he's a tough country boy; he has the rural distrust of lawyers and of sweatboxes. He does absolutely nothing but groan and sweat, pretending his wound hurts him. But I've a notion there are bigger people back of him. It's most awfully good of you, Aunt Rebecca, to stick to me this way."

"Of course, I stick to you; I'm too old to be fickle. Did you ever know a Winter who wouldn't stand by his friends? I belong to the old regime, Bertie; we had our faults—glaring ones, I dare say—but if we condoned sin too readily, we never condoned meanness; such a trick as that upstart Keatcham is doing would have been impossible to my contemporaries. You saw the morning papers; you know he means to eat up the Midland?"

"Yes, I know," mused the colonel; "and turn Tracy, the president, down—the one who gave him his start on his buccaneering career. Tracy declines to be his tool, being, I understand, a very decent sort of man, who has always run his road for his stockholders and not for the stock market. A capital crime, that in these days. So Keatcham has, somehow, by one trick or another, got enough directors since Baneleigh died to give him control; though he couldn't get enough of the stock; and now he means to grab the road to use for himself. Poor Tracy, who loves the road as a child, they say, will have to stand by and see it turned into a Wall street football; and the equipment run down as fast as its reputation. I think I'm sorry for Tracy. Besides, it's a bad lookout, the power of such fellows; men who are not captains of industry, not a little bit; only inspired gamblers. Yet they are running the country. I wonder where is the class that will save us."

"I don't know. I don't admire the present century, Bertie. We had people of quality in my day; we have only people of culture in this. I confess I prefer the quality. They had robuster nerves and really asked less of people, although they may have appeared to ask more. We used to be contented with respect from our inferiors and courtesy from our equals—"

"And what from your betters, Aunt Rebecca?" drawled the colonel.

"We had no betters, Rupert; we were the best. I think partly it was our assurance of our position, which nobody else doubted any more than we, that kept us so mannerly. Nowadays, nobody has a real position. He may have wealth and a servile following, who expect to make something out of him, but he hasn't position. The newspapers can make fun of him. The common people watch him drive by and never think of removing their caps. Nobody takes him seriously except his toadies and himself. And as for the sentiments of reverence and loyalty, very useful sentiments in running a world, they seem to have clean disappeared, except"—she smiled a half-reluctant smile—"except with youngsters like Archie, who would find it agreeable to be chopped into bits for you, and the women who have not lived in the world, like Janet, who makes a heroine out of me—upon my word, Bertie, je t'ai fait rougir!"

"Not at all," said the colonel; "an illusion of the sunset; but what do you mean when you say people of quality required less than people of culture?"

HOPE YOUNG MEN'S CLUB DEFEATS SOMERSET A. C.

The Hope Men's Club basketball team defeated the Somerset A. C., of New Brunswick, at the Hope gymnaisum, Saturday night, by a score of 68 to 14. The Hope team excelled the visitors in every department of the game and when the first half was over had 32 points to 12 for the opposing side. In the second half the local team scored 36 to 2 for the Somerset A. C. The game was free from roughness and was watched by a large crowd.

Rimmer, Kenny and Hunter put up a splendid game for the Hope boys. The lineup:

Hope Y. M. C.—Forwards, Firstbrook, Rimmer; centre, Hunter; guards, H. Kenny, Joseph Muir. Somerset A. C.—Forwards, Wadmit, Ryan; centre, Rogers; guards, Hoagland, Shipman.

Goals from field—Rimmer, 15; Hunter, 1; Firstbrook, 3; Kenny, 2; Wadmit, 3; Shipman, 4. Referee, J. Kenny; umpire, Shulhese; timer, John Kenny; scorer, Snyder. Twenty minute halves.

GOLF.

While indorsing the nominations by the United States Golf Association for 1909 for the new blood the ticket holds, Crafts W. Higgins, editor of the Golfers Magazine, states in trenchant style that the U. S. G. A. is controlled by a self-perpetuating clique through the nominating committee. The following are extracts from an article in the December number of his magazine headed "Fight or Submit?"

The eighth annual turndown of the West, middle west and northwest in their efforts to partially nationalize the oligarchy by having a Western man selected as its president has taken place. For the fifteenth consecutive year an Eastern man has been chosen for the U. S. G. A. executive.

"No objection is made to the personnel of the new ticket, for the nominating committee used good judgment, with the single exception of the head of the ticket, which is a question involving a principle and not individuals. Had the committee earnestly trled to find a Western man to head the ticket there certainly is enough available material from which to choose, as there are a number of Western men thoroughly conversant with golfing legislation, any one of whom would have filled the presidential chair with distinction and credit.

"The spread of golf and the formation of new clubs in the past six years has been something marvellous. Has the U. S. G. A. kept pace with the growth of the game in this country? Its roster of membership shows it has not.

"The United States Golf Association has too big a name for an association of 44 clubs—the number allowed to vote; the others are allies, not members, and do not count; they pay taxes but cannot vote—they 'cut no ice.' The United States Golf Association is not, never has been, nor ever will be an actual golf association of the United States unless it changes its methods and policies of government.

"William H. Taft is a member of the Cincinnati Golf Club, and James S. Sherman of the Sadaquada Golf Club. Although both these clubs are members of the U. S. G. A., neither of these distinguished golfers, who have been elected to the highest offices in the United States is eligible to be selected as a member of the U. S. G. A. committee. Candidly, is not this select method of the oligarchy somewhat of a farce?"

No mention is made of the amendment introduced by J. William McKinley of the Columbia Golf Club, Washington, D. C., to change the constitution so that the nominating committee will be abolished. Between the lines, however, it is evident that the debate and ballot on the question at the annual meeting of January 8 will not be a perfunctory one.

BASEBALL.

Chairman Herrmann of the National Baseball Commission has given out the decision of the commission regarding the alleged ticket scalping scandal during the last world's championship series. The commission states:

"In justice to Mr. Murphy, the president of the Chicago club, it should be stated that he was not in the city on either of the days when the tickets about which complaint has been made were sold, and no doubt had he been at home a great deal of the trouble would have been averted. It should also be stated that there was no direct charge made nor any proof submitted that the Chicago club or any of its employees were in collusion with the so-called "ticket scalpers."

Then follows a long recital of the charges of the scenes of confusion attending the sales of tickets and of the evidence gleaned, after which it rendered the following finding:

"From this finding of facts as above shown we are of the opinion that the Chicago club are deserving of the severest criticism and censure for the manner in which they handled the sale of the tickets during the last world's series and that they must be held responsible for the great annoyance they caused many patrons of the game in Chicago and that the complaints filed with the commission by the Chicago public were justified and warranted."

The commission stated in conclusion: "From what has happened and from this investigation the commission is strongly of the opinion and herein announces that hereafter all of the tickets for the games during the entire series will be handled by them and that an attempt will be made to adopt rules with reference to their sale to prevent not only such tickets reaching the hands of scalpers if possible but to afford the general public every opportunity to get them quickly at central points and at prices not in excess of those fixed by the commission."

BOWLING.

The Jersey City Club will bowl the Park Club at the latter place, tonight, in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament.

ROD AND GUN.

Arrangements have been made by the Independent Gun Club of this city, for a shooting match with the Crescent Gun Club, of Whitehouse Station, on New Year's Day. The match will take place at Whitehouse Station.

Lose to Newark.

The Y. M. C. A. second team went to Newark Saturday and met defeat at the hands of the Newark High School five, 18 to 9. Hoagland made a sensational shot from a difficult position on the extreme left. The Plainfield players were: Templin and Joseph, forwards; Hoagland, centre; Bogardus and Mackey, guards. Ten men were used in the game by the Newark team.

EVANGELIST AT Y. M. C. A.

William P. Hall Speaks at Men's Meeting.

William P. Hall, president of the Hall Signal Company, who devotes his spare time to evangelistic work, spoke at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting yesterday afternoon. He was an hour late in arriving from New York, but his hearers felt well repaid for their long wait. His subject, "The Life of Power," was based on the story of Jacob's wrestling with the angel.

Mr. Hall declared that the same power which enabled Jacob to become a servant of God instead of the stealthy, shrewd planter as before, is available to men today. A number of incidents of notable conversions which he had himself witnessed were related.

Christmas Services.

There will be special services at St. Peter's German Luther church, Christmas Day, in charge of Rev. J. Duerschner. At 10:30 o'clock in the morning, there will be holy communion, and at 7:30 o'clock in the evening, the Sunday-school will have a special program, including recitations and carols by the children. There will also be a Christmas tree.

Miss Margaret Kenney, of East Second street, a senior at Barnard College, has returned for the holiday season.

COHAN'S GREAT SHOW LOCAL CHARITY BENEFIT

Plans for "Charity Night," December 31, are rapidly being made, Mayor Charles J. Fisk having arranged with Manager William J. Counihan, of the New Plainfield theatre for the appearance here of George M. Cohan's original company in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," which was such a tremendous hit last season. The profits from the performance will be given to local charities. The company numbers forty people and is considered one of the best. A fine performance is assured and it will afford an excellent opportunity for people to laugh out the old and laugh in the New Year. At the same time the bachelors will give a dance at the Hartridge School auditorium, and the profits from that function will also go toward local charities.

The committee in charge of the "Charity Night" affair comprises Henry L. Hall, chairman; Charles J. Fisk, L. G. Timpson, J. M. Shellabarger, F. W. Butler, W. J. Counihan, S. W. Cunningham, E. S. Hooley, B. A. Hegeman, Samuel Townsend, W. R. Townsend and Charles A. Reed.

Mrs. Sutphen's Funeral.

The funeral of Mrs. Fannie A. Sutphen, widow of Dr. J. C. Sutphen, was held at her late home on East Seventh street, Saturday afternoon. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. The clergyman read "Crossing the Bar" and E. E. Runyon sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Burial was made in the North Plainfield cemetery, five sons and a nephew acting as pall bearers. They were David, Gilbert, Morris, Julian and John Sutphen and Travis Sutphen, of Dunellen.

Oldest Church Member.

During the centennial anniversary exercises at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York, yesterday, mention was made of the fact that Miss Hamilton, of this city, was the oldest survivinb member. As she is ninety-two years of age, it was impossible for her to attend the happy event, but a letter from her was read to the congregation.

Odd Fellows to Attend.

The members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., will attend the performance at the Park Theatre, tonight, by invitation of the management.

Was Drunk on Sunday.

Ed Kiely will have a hearing tonight before Recorder Dolliver on the charge of drunkenness. He was arrested last night in the borough.

XMAS IN THE SCHOOLS

Appropriate Exercises in the Public Schools in Both City and the Borough.

SOME ARE QUITE ELABORATE.

Addresses, Recitations, Dialogues and Music Among the Features of the Celebrations.

In both the city and borough, Christmas exercises are being held this week. In the majority of instances, the observance will take place tomorrow. Here are the programs:

Plainfield High School.

Appropriate exercises will be held at the Plainfield High School tomorrow morning with a special program by the pupils, followed by festivities which include a feast and dancing in the auditorium. The program will open with a Christmas anthem, "Christians, Awake," "Salute the Happy Morn," by the school, with solo part by Guion Fountain. This will be followed with a selection, "There Dwelt in Old Judea," by the male quartet, Messrs. Doane, Fountain, Prior and Titsworth. A Christmas anthem, "The Song of the Angels," will be sung by the school with violin accompaniment, and Miss Elsie Bird will give a recitation, "Milton's Hymn of the Nativity." This part of the program will be concluded with a selection, "Nazareth," by the school, with violin accompaniment.

A feature of the affair will be the presentation of a large photograph of St. Gaudens' "Shaw Memorial," to the school. It will be presented by Miss Marion Snyder and accepted on behalf of the school by Charles Prior. This will be followed by a cantata, "The Hope of the World," with vocal solo by Miss Laura Bristol, assisted by a girl's quartet, comprising the Misses Knowlton, Eckert, Brown and Phillips. This will conclude the musical program and the senior class, of which Walter Knowlton is the president, will take charge, and carry out a novel celebration of its own, during which the members will receive suitable gifts. This will last about an hour, when the junior class, of which Harry Van Zandt is president, will entertain the seniors at luncheon. At the conclusion of the feast, all will adjourn to the auditorium, where dancing will be enjoyed for an hour.

Stillman School.

This will be the program of the Stillman School at 8:30 tomorrow morning:

"Hark, the Herald Angels Sing;" song by the school; piano duet, the Misses Collins and Van Zandt; "Holy Night," sung by the school; Christ-carols, by male quartet, High school; "Visit from Santa Claus and His Brownies;" "How Christmas is kept in Russia;" recitation by Helen Roberts; English Christmas carols, sung by a chorus of eight grade boys; drill, "Mistletoe and Holly," by Seventh grade girls; series of six Christmas carols, sung by school.

Bryant School.

Santa Claus in Japan was the title of a cantata given by the pupils at the Bryant school last night. The program follows:

Song, "Jolly Old Land of Japan," by Helen Weseman, American; Robert Moyer, Chinaman in Japan; Ernestine Wilson, Theda Jeffreys, Hazel Putnam, West Jeffreys, William Wheelan, Daniel Clark, Japanese schoolmates; song, "Letter to Santa Claus," Helen Weseman, Robert Moyer; song, "O, Beautiful Star," Ernestine Wilson; song, "When Santa Has Some Work on Hand," William Chamberlain, Edward Finck, Elmer Blimm, Ben Letson, Brownies; song, "I Visit Many Countries," Leonard Lewis, Santa Claus; Brownies; song, "The Song of Screen and Fan," Clara Hadley, Ellen Starback, Ruth Stanley, Dorothy Henwood, fans; Collin Millard, William Steinmuller, Allen Campbell, Randall Rubenstein; "March and Song of Lanterns," Charlotte Taylor, Pauline Stewart, Elizabeth Moyer, Augusta Allen, Harold Pfifer, Carlton Vail, Raymond Cutter, Frank Gary, Miner Trowbridge; song, "Good Santa Claus," screens and fans, Lanterns; "Song of Toys," Santa Claus, Brownies; song, "Christmas Morning," Japanese Playmates; song, "O, Good Old Mister Santa Claus," Japanese school boys; song, "The Land of Flowers," Thelma Curtis, Helen Meaney, Lavina Fulmer, Edith Bechtel, Chrysanthemums; Mildred Clarke, Valborg Steuer, Margaret Applegate, Edith Higgins, Cherry Blossoms; solo, "The Sailor and His Parrot," Robert Moyer; solo, "Holy Night," Adelaide Parker, chorus; solo, "She Stoops to Conquer," Leonard Lewis; closing chorus by all, "The Name of Jesus."

AGRICULTURE BOARD ANNOUNCES PROGRAM

The Union County Board of Agriculture holds regular meetings on the first and third Tuesdays of the month, but owing to the session of the State Horticultural Society in Trenton on January 6 and 7, it will meet in Friday, January 8. The delegates from Union county to the State meeting are C. H. Brewer, secretary, and Adam Denk, of Union, and they will report at the meeting to be held January 8. Mr. Earl has promised a talk on fruit growing which will be given in conjunction with the reports of the delegates to the State meeting.

The second meeting in January will be a farmers' institute at Westfield, under the auspices of the Union County Board of Agriculture. Profs. Voorhees, Lapham, Smith and Gaskill, of the New Jersey Agricultural College, will speak.

Prof. J. J. Savitz, county superintendent of schools, will make some remarks concerning agricultural education. The evening session will be given up to State Etomologist J. B. Smith, in illustrating and describing how to fight and control the tribes of insects that harass the agriculturist. Prof. Gaskill will also take part at this session and give the people some new ideas regarding and caring for shade trees.

Other subjects for the regular meetings of the board have been announced for February and March as follows: February 4, reports of delegates to the State Agricultural Society meeting held in Trenton January 15, 16 and 17; February 18, reports of teachers who attended the Agricultural School at Cape May the past season; March 4, conference with the Boards of Education, regarding school gardens, etc.

DR. GRENFELL TALKS ON LIFE IN LABRADOR

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, who has spent a number of years in Labador as surgeon, master mariner and magistrate, addressed the pupils of Plainfield high school this morning in the auditorium of the school. He described his appreticeship after leaving school, which was served in an entirely different sphere. Choosing the far north as a field for his life's work he had cruised the coasts of Norway, Iceland and Labrador in vessels no larger than were used 400 years ago. He had often been asked why if the hardships were so great, men should continue to live there. He had replied that the same reason could be given for living in Boston, where there was as much suffering and hardships equally great in their way.

Since the gospel had gone to the Labrador coast there was less misery, and fewer widows in the poorhouses, made destitute by drunken husbands.

Thrift and independence were to be found in plenty. He had found that the way to make life more attractive for a man was to increase his wage capacity. Teach him how to increase his earnings and he will the more readily lead a clean life free from the slovenliness so common among persons of certain environments.

The lecturer could not see the value of taking life as it comes, just sitting around and existing on money left by some one else. Everybody should have some work to do and he was thankful that he had not spent his time at Delmonico's and Sherry's.

The physical conditions of the coast were declared to be attractive. There the men were wonderfully developed in body, and courageous to a great degree. The fishermen, he said, do not go out in the morning and come back at night, spending the evenings at home, but remain away for weeks at a time, following the fish as they move from one feeding ground to another.

The doctor related experiences in traveling on ice. A dog team, he declared, would beat a team of horses in a ten mile trip, would leave them out of sight in twenty miles and in fifty miles would be coming back before the horses were half way there.

A close call to death on a floating ice pan was related. Dr. Grenfell had been compelled to kill his dogs for food, and used their hides for covering. He also tied their legs together and used it as a pole from which was suspended his shirt, which he waved as a signal of distress. It was seen by a searching party from a vessel and in this way he was rescued.

New Money for the Holidays.

The Plainfield Trust Company has provided a large supply of new money for the use of its patrons and is prepared to furnish gold coins of the new issue, as well as new silver and bank notes.

PICTURE TALK ON CANAL

GOOD HOMES FOR LABORERS.

Americans Give Natives a New Name—Work Shown to be Going On Rapidly—An Instructive Address.

A descriptive lecture on Panama and the Canal was given by Charles L. Lewis, instructor of music in the city schools, before a fair sized audience in Vincent chapel last night Stereopticon views were used to illustrate the talk. Mr. Lewis visited the canal zone last summer as a member of the Lotus Glee Club, which was one of a number of musical organizations which the United States Government has sent there for the entertainment of its employes. The monotony of the life there is thus relieved to some extent. The speaker's description of the trip by boat from New York was full of interest.

Passing the bare island of San Salvadore, where Columbus was supposed to have first set foot on American soil, he said that from its appearance it did not seem to be worth discovering. The first object to be noted on approaching their destination was a huge statue of Columbus. Views of this and of the hotels and principal streets of Colon were shown.

Expecting to be pestered by mosquitoes, an almost total absence of them was an agreeable surprise, thanks to the wonderful system of extermination carried out by the government. He said that he saw but one mosquito, heard two and felt none. Sanitary conditions, also, had undergone great changes. The native workmen were compelled to clean up, against their will at first, but finally came to enjoy cleanliness Ordinary laborers were provided with excellent homes, the married men with their families in one quarter and single men in another. They were even given such luxuries as shower baths.

The Americans who first went three coined a new name for the natives, which has not only become universal, but is applied to different varieties of fruit and other things to designate the ones which are produced by those people. It came about by the residents greeting the new comers, when addressed, with, "Me no speaka da 'Merican." A native has ever since been known as a "speakada," and the "speakada" oranges are not popular because they are sour.

Some good pictures were displayed of the celebrated Calebro cut and of the big dam, declared to be the two greatest engineering feats of all time. In the first three years 9,000,000 cubic yards of earth had been excavated, but even that great speed is being increased. After the canal has been completed it is expected that it will require two years to fill it with water.

The lecture disclosed much valuable information and was delivered in clear concise language. Other interesting pictures were: Old San Domingo church, built in 1638; Fort Lorenzo, the old French canal and abandoned machinery; Shidress river, the most treacherous stream in the world, which has been known to rise thirty-seven feet in twenty-four hours; the bishop's palace, which contains the notorious Panama lottery; the Black Swamp and royal palm groves.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE LEAGUE HEARS MRS. WM. LADDIE.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, of East Seventh street. There was a large attendance in spite of the busy holiday season. Mrs. William Laddie, president of the New Jersey State Association, addressed the women, infusing much of her own spirit and enthusiasm in the work into the local association.

Among the visitors was Mrs. Dorr, one of the district presidents of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in Minnesota, and her reports from the west were both interesting and encouraging to all.

"Fighting Bob's" Cousin Here.

Howard Evans, a cousin of Rear-Admiral Robley D. Evans, retired, accompanied by his mother, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Emmons Henry, of this city. Mr. Evans is a student in a military academy at Norwalk.

FIVE NEW FREEHOLDERS

Noah Woodruff, the Dean, Among those to Retire from Union County Board.

ON THURSDAY, DECEMBER 31.

A Decided Change in the Board, Principally Among Elizabeth's Representation.

The Union County Board of Freeholders will meet Thursday, December 31, when the work of the year will be completed and the present board will go out of existence. In the closing session the report of County Collector N. R. Leavitt will be received and county bills will be paid. The session will also, at its conclusion, leave the office of director, clerk and county attorney vacant. At noon the next day the new county board will be organized and the officers for the year elected. It is generally supposed that the present officers will be renamed.

Five members of the board will retire at the end of its present term They are Freeholders Noah Woodruff, of Union Township, and Thomas J. Pierson, J. Logan Fay, Robert C. Maurer and Daniel P. McGovern, of Elizabeth. Their successors will be Aaron D. Crane, of Union Township, and Thomas F. Haviland, William H. Garrison, Charles J. Jensen and Jacob Martin, of Elizabeth. The new board will consist of sixteen Republicans and four Democrats. The old board consisted of eleven Republicans and nine Democrats.

Noah Woodruff, the retiring member of the minority, is the dean of the present board, having served as a freeholder for a long term of years. He succeeded his father, who held office in the board for many years. Daniel P. McGovern, another retiring member of the minority, was appointed to the board to fill out the vacancy caused by the death of John J. Donahue.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS CELEBRATE CHRISTMAS

The Sabbath-school of the Seventh Day Baptist church, together with older members of the church, enjoyed the annual Christmas entertainment in the church parlors last night. The program, which was presented entirely by the members of the school, was greatly enjoyed. It opened with a processional, the children marching into the room singing a Christmas carol. Then a Christmas hymn was sung by the entire school, followed with the reading of the story of the Wise Men by Rev. Edwin Shaw.

The first part of the program comprised recitations, "Christmas Greeting," by Ernest Stillman; "A Very Special Errand," Jean Cottrell; other recitations by Everett Hunting, Frances Warbech; a lullaby by Marie Kellogg; a recitation, "Our Guide," by Margaret Kimball; an exercise, "Christmas Light," Elston Shaw, Ernest Stillman and Lewis Kimball; a recitation, "A Vote of Thanks," Witter Clawson; a duet, "Holy Night," Violet Johnston and Beatrice Cottrell and a lullaby by the primary department.

In part second, twelve children from the school gave a Christmas cantata, in a cerditable manner Those taking part were Mary Hunting, Dorothy Hubbard, Ruth Morris, Laura Stillman, Stephena Shaw, Celia Cottrell, Harold Spicer, Leland Shaw, John Cottrell, Jr., Marie Kellogg, Margaret Kimball, Violet Johnston, Beatrice Cottrell and Mildred Boyle.

After the entertainment there was the distribution of gifts to the primary department from the Christmas tree, which was a large one, and formed one of the most attractive features of the decorations. At the same time refreshments were served to all. The commitee in charge of the whole affair comprised John Cottrell, Miss Ida Spicer and Theodore Davis.

Marcus M. Marks to Speak.

Marcus M. Marks, president of the National Clothing Manufacturers' Association, has been secured as the principal speaker for the first annual banquet of the Plainfield Merchants' Association to be held at the Hartridge School auditorium, January 19. Mr. Marks is such a fine speaker that he is constantly in demand. There will be two or three other short speeches during the evening.

SENGER AGAIN DEFENDANT

National Brewery Man Charged with Embezzlement by Plainfield Woman.

HEARING IN THE CITY COURT.

After Lengthy Session, Defendant Is Held In His Own Recognizance for the Grand Jury

Charles P. Senger, of this city, who recently gained considerable publicity through the legal difficulties of the National Brewing Company, of Newark, of which he was one of the organizers, was given a hearing in the city court, this morning on a charge of embezzlement preferred against him by Mrs. Jean Sites, of Park avenue. The case devolved about the defendant's retention of valuable papers belonging to the plaintiff and which were given, as agent, in assisting her to begin an important civil action. Senger agreed to consult his own lawyer in her behalf and took the documents to show him but the proceedings fell through and he refused to give them back until he had been recompensed for expenses, amount to about $10. At the conclusion of the proceedings, Judge Runyon decided that Mrs Sites had established her complaint and held the defendant in his own recognizance to wait the action of the grand jury.

The hearing occupied the greater part of the morning session of the court as there was continued bickering between John English, of Elizabeth, attorney for Mrs. Sites, and Harry C. Runyon, representing Senger. In her direct testimony, the plaintiff declared that she had been introduced to the defendant by his brother-in-law, Harry Dreier, and that in the course of a social evening at her home her impending civil suit had been mentioned. She spoke of wanting a good lawyer and Senger announced that he would retain his own counsel for her if she wished it. Mrs. Sites agreed and gave the papers to him for outlining the matter if he should become engaged.

Senger proceeded as agent for Mrs. Sites but she stated positively on the stand that he was guaranteed no payment or that any was asked for. The whole transaction, she said, was based on friendship and she gave her property over to him with the understanding that he was simply helping her out. After Senger had gone to Newark several times and held consultations with the lawyer, Mrs. Sites decided that she could not afford the fee demanded by the latter and asked that the papers be returned to her and the proceedings dropped. She made personal demand upon the defendant for her property several times, she said, but was put off with an excuse each time. Finally, when she would wait no longer, she was told that the papers would not be returned unless she paid over $10 that had been expended in car fare.

In his own behalf, Senger declared without being sworn, that he had interested himself in the matter purely on a friendly basis but that after Mrs. Sites had "threatened and bull-dozed" him in her demands for the papers because they were not at hand when she first asked, he decided to hold them for his $10. He maintained that it was no more than right that he should be paid for the expense he had been put to. It was not for the amount his lawyer said, but the principle of the thing. Mr. Runyon also argued that Mrs. Sites had not proven her assertion of embezzlement as to do so the party charged must dispose of the property and this had not been done, the papers still being in Senger's possession. In this the court did not agree with him.

A question put by lawyer Runyon to Senger as to why Mrs. Sites wanted to retain an out of town lawyer instead of getting one in Plainfield, was met with a reply that brought a laugh in the court room. The defendant stated that one prominent legal light had been mentioned but Mrs. Alice Matton, a close friend of Mrs. Sites, objected to him because he always consulted a clairvoyant before undertaking an important case. The lawyer's standing in Plainfield made the reply all the more humorous. Mr. Senger added further that Mrs. Sites said that the Plainfield counsellors wanted $250 as a retainer while those in other cities asked but $100.

Xmas at the P. B. C.

The annual Christmas entertainment of the Plainfield Business College will be held tonight and it promises to surpass all others held by the college. The Franklin Minstrel troupe has been engaged for the evening and a fine entertainment is assured. The affair is for the benefit of former students and their friends, but a cordial invitation is etended to the public.

CITY FATHERS ADJOURN AFTER SUYDAM TRIBUTE

As a mark of respect to the memory of Henry B. Suydam, a former member of the body, who died in the Hudson Street Hospital, New York, yesterday morning, the Common Council met last night and after ordering necessary bills paid, passed resolutions of sympathy on the death of junior member from the Fourth ward and adjourned. The regular monthly business will be transacted on Monday night, December 28. The desk and chair used by Mr. Suydam while a member of the Council, were appropriately draped in black, while on top of the desk rested a vase filled with beautiful roses and smilax.

Immediately following the payment of bills, Mr. Buxton offered these resolutions, which were adopted:

"Whereas, We have learned with deep regret of the sudden death of Harry B. Suydam, and

"Whereas, We desire to express our appreciation of his ability as a councilman, his character as a man and his personality as an associate;

"Resolved, That we tender to his family our sincere sympathy in their bereavement, and further

"Resolved, That the clerk be instructed to inscribe this resolution at length on the minutes of this body and to forward a copy thereof to Mrs. Suydam, and further

"Resolved, That as a mark of respect to his memory we do now adjourn until December 28."

After the meeting adjourned the members returned to the office of Mayor C. J. Fisk, where plans were discussed for attending the funeral service, which will probably be held tomorrow night.

BOROUGH WITHHOLDS PART OF COUNTY TAX

Mayor Samuel Townsend has sent another check to Somerset County Collector E. B. Allen, this one being for $12,364.03. To date the borough of North Plainfield has paid into the county treasurer on account of county tax exactly $20,364.03. The assessment for this purpose for 1908 was $24,206.58, but $3,842.55 has been witheld.

In his letter to the county collector, Mayor Townsend says that an appeal to the Somerset County Board of Taxation has been taken by the taxpayers of North Plainfield, who consider that the borough has been "roasted," a belief commonly held in that municipality. Pending the board's decision, the Mayor says that the rest of the assessment will be witheld.

The mayor's letter follows:

"Enclosed please find check of the borough of North Plainfield to your order for $12,364.03, on account of Somerset county tax for the year 1908. The total amount of county tax assessed against the borough for 1908 was $24,206.58. The enclosed check brings the total amount paid thereon, up to $20,364.03, the same sum as paid by the borough last year.

"The borough has appealed to the county Board of Taxation to equalize valuations in the county so that the borough shall bear the same relation to the rest of the county in this respect as last year.

"That appeal, so far as we know, is stil pending undecided by the said board and, until the board makes publbic its decision, the question of further payment by the borough will be necessarily held in abeyance."

Mrs. Nancy Wilcox.

Mrs. Nancy Wilcox, widow of Amos Wilcox, died at her home on Front street, Scotch Plains, at 8:30 o'clock, last night, following an illness of several weeks from a complication of disease, which started with the grip. Mrs. Wilcox was eighty-two years old and was the oldest member of the Scotch Plains Baptist church and until her illness was one of the most active workers and a regular attendant at all the services. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Charles Haberley, with whom she made her home, and one brother, Alvah Ryno, also of Scotch Plains. The funeral service will be held from the Scotch Plains Baptist church, tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

THE WEATHER.

Snow or rain tonight and probably Wednesday. Maximum, 43; Minimum, 28.

BURY SUYDAM TOMORROW

Services Over Councilman and Curb Broker, Victim of Assassin's Bullet, at Church.

CITY FATHERS PAY TRIBUTE.

Interment to be Made At New Brunswick—Inquest to be held on Tuesday, December 29.

Funeral services over Councilman Harry Bennett Suydam, the curb broker, who died in the Hudson Street Hospital, in New York, yesterday morning, from bullet wounds inflicted on Saturday morning by John C. Lumsden, a New York inventor, with whom he had business dealings, will be held tomorrow afternoon. A brief service at the home in Clinton avenue at 1 o'clock will be followed by a service at the Church of the Heavenly Rest at 1:30. Interment will be made late tomorrow afternoon at Elmwood cemetery, New Brunswick, where Mr. Suydam spent his boyhood days.

Rev. Charles Townsend, the rector, will officiate. Mr. Suydam's fellow curb brokers will be largely represented at the obsequies. The Plainfield Common Council, of which he was an honored member, will attend in a body, as will the Heavenly Rest Men's Club, of which Mr Suydam was president. Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. & A. M., of which he was a member, will also be represented at the funeral. Mayor Fisk and the other city officials likewise will be present. The prescribed form of service of the Episcopal church, simple and impressive, will be used. The floral tributes will be numerous.

The pall bearers will be four members of the curb market, one of the Common Council and one of the Heavenly Rest Men's Club. The curb brokers have named as bearers: William Gumzell and William J. Bogert, both of Westfield; William A. Miller, of Elizabeth, and George B. Hooley, of Plainfield.

Lumsden, in the Tombs, New York, has received many sympathetic messages from citizens of Raleigh, N. C., where he formerly lived. Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, wired yesterday as follows:

"You have my sympathy and all your friends in Raleigh hope the issue will be favorable. The News and Observer will be glad to print any statement, and I will be glad to serve you in any way I can."

Armistead Jones, State Prosecutor, telegraphed:

"Remembering you as a playmate of my children and knowing you as I do, I believe in your being justifiable in defending yourself. Your friends here will move heaven and earth in your behalf. Have tendered my services to your family."

A meeting of the curb brokers was called yesterday morning in Broad street, New York, by E. S. Mendels, agent of the curb. A committee consisting of Frederick Ackerman, Morris Joseph and E. A. Chartrand was appointed to draw up resolutions of sympathy for Mrs. Suydam. As is customary on the curb, work will be discontinued and brokers will stand with bared heads for five minutes on the day of the funeral.

At the offices of Fitzgerald & Nehrbas, No. 2 Rector street, New York, attorneys for Lumsden, it was said yesterday that Lumsden held 750 shares of Electric Vibrotator Company stock, which Suydam and George S. Jacobs asked him to loan to them to borrow money on. Lumsden turned the stock over with the understanding that he was to get $650 of the money borrowed. He has maintained that he never got a dollar of the money promised, and on October 14 instituted suit against the two to recover $1,250, the amount he says they admitted to him they secured on the stock. In that suit the defendants deny all Lumsden's allegations except the bare one that he held the 750 shares of stock on June 22.

Mrs. J. C. Lumsden, wife of the man who shot H. B. Suydam, denied yesterday at Spartanburg, South Carolina, that she had said that Suydam deserved to be shot.

It was learned today that Coroner Harburger, of New York, will hold the formal inquest on Tuesday, December 29. By that time District Attorney Jerome will have completed his investigation.

Mr. Suydam's friends in New Brunswick were greatly shocked to hear of the attack upon him. He spent most of his life there and was held in high regard by all who knew him. His parents died young and he was reared by his grandmother, Mrs. Bennett, who for years kept a boarding house on Church street in that city. He worked for a number of years in Hingher's furniture store on Neilson street. At one time he

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Rev. Jackson, who was for many years a missionary in India, gave an interesting talk at the Methodist church Sunday night on his experiences in that country. He had with him a collection of native curios which he displayed during his speech. Rev. Jackson is seventy-four years old and first went to India as a missionary in 1860. He was associated with the famous missionary, Dr. Butler, whose books on subjects pertaining to the work have been read throughout the world.

The president of the Elizabeth District Epworth League, Rev. Morris, of Elmore, N. J., addressed the meeting of the local league Sunday night at the Methodist church. The members received congratulations and praise from him for what they had done for the church in the way of redecorating and beautifying it. He declared that this league had accomplished more than any other in the district.

The victims of the unfortunate accident of last Friday were buried yesterday. Funeral services for John Simons and Vincent Solan were held from St. John's church at 10:30, Father Dumphy officiating, and services for Joseph Helick were held at 9:30 by a Polish priest from out of town. All three were buried in St. Mary's cemetery, Plainfield.

Mrs. E. C. Dutcher enjoyed a visit Sunday from Mrs. E. J. Brinkhof, of New Springville, Staten Island, who was a neighbor when the Rev. Mr. Dutcher was pastor at that place.

Tax Collector I. J. Stites is experiencing some busy days. The amount paid in Saturday exceeded $1,500 and yesterday it was nearly $1,400.

Mrs. Cole has recovered from her recent accident sufficiently to be up and around much of the time.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The sad fatality at the Hetfield and Weldron stone crusher yesterday morning, in which William Danitzo lost his life, is the second fatal accident to happen at the crusher. Strange to say the other unfortunate victim was a brother of Danitzo, who was killed about ten years ago by the premature explosion of a blast he was setting off.

The members of the Baptist Sunday-school and its friends will celebrate Christmas with an old-fashioned Christmas celebration tonight at 7:30 in the church parlors. Everyone is invited to enjoy the event with the school. The stage will leave the postoffice corner at 7:15.

In the death of Mrs. Nancy Wilcox, which occurred at her home on Front street last night at 8:30, the town loses one of its oldest and most respected residents. A life-long resident of the town, she was known and loved by all.

Owing to Friday being Christmas the time of the weekly prayer-meeting at the Baptist church, has been changed to tomorrow night at the same hour.

Emil Jahn, who is a student at the Syracuse University, is home for his Christmas vacation of three weeks.

Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company held its regular monthly meeting in the company parlors last night.

Rev. T. Moore-Smith, who has been quite ill at his home on Second street, is reported as improving.

Mrs. Charles N. Flanders has returned from a visit with her niece, Mrs. Cottrell, at Bayonne.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

At the meeting of Court South Plainfield, Independent Order of Foresters, held last night in Washington hall, these officers were elected: Chief ranger, William Rielley; vice-chief, George Arrowsmith; recording secretary, William Hamilton; financial secretary, John Connors; treasurer, P. J. McDonough; court deputy, Edward McDonough; senior woodward, John F. Horan; junior woodward, Michael Day; senior beadle, Edward Geary; junior beadle, Frank Miller; trustees, Thomas Hurley, Dennis Harlow; finance committee, Thomas Terril, William Rielley; orator, John J. McDonough.

John Keefe is now on the road to recovery from the effects of a bad fall he sustained several days ago. He fell from a coal car to the rails at the Lehigh Valley's coal storage plant, receiving a severe bruise on the side. He is now under the care of Dr. Hughes.

The public school will close for the Christmas vacation tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock. There will be no afternoon session on account of teachers' meeting which will be held at 2:30 in New Market. The school will reopen on January 4, 1909.

The Middlesex Volunteer Fire Company will meet tonight at 8:00 in the fire-house. The principal business of the meeting will be the election of officers. The report of the ball committee will be heard also.

Miss Ellen Ostrye, teacher in the public school, will spend the Christmas holidays with friends in Dunkirk, New York.

Skating on the lake was enjoyed to a late hour last night by a large party of boys and girls.

Christmas exercises will be held in the public school this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

NORTH BRANCH.

Word has been received here of the death of Andrew Wilson, seventy-four years old, formerly a resident of Somerset county. He passed away last week at his home near Richmond, Va., from heart disease, after a long illness. He leaves a widow and five children.

Alfred R. Johnson, of New Brunswick, formerly principal of the public school in this place, has been spending a few days' vacation with old friends here.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry V. Davis, of North Branch, were recently guests of Mrs. Davis' parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Rinehart, at Potterstown.

Mrs. Henry Schenck, of Neshanic, has been spending a few days with her brother, Peter K. Swackhamer, near Whitehouse.

Miss Erma Tolman has returned to her home in Irvington, after spending some time with relatives at Neshanic.

Mrs. Mary Fulper, of South Branch, has been entertaining Mr. and Mrs. William L. Rowland, of Centreville.

Abram Van Fleet, of North Branch, has gone to Three Bridges to visit his son, Howard S. Van Fleet.

Charles Hoffman, of Pluckemin, has been spending a few days at the home of Miss Alice Lyon, in Brooklyn.

The Mission Band was entertained Saturday afternoon at the Presbyterian parsonage at Pluckemin.

Mrs. George Voorhees, of Centreville, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Taylor, near Neshanic.

Miss Alma Potter, of New York, is a guest for two weeks of relatives near Readington.

There will be a target tournament on the hotel grounds at Martinsville on Christmas Day.

The weekly prayer-meeting at Neshanic was held at the house of Benjamin Crispin.

William Coriell, of Pluckemin, is a guest of friends in Newark.

BOUND BROOK AND VICINITY.

Members of the Presbyterian Brotherhood and the Men's Club of the Congregational church of Bound Brook will conduct a bowling match on the alleys in Maiden lane tonight.

Useful Gifts

FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

Those who like to confine themselves to the strictly useful gifts will find the Basement full of such things.

Wouldn't a Chafing Dish or a Coffee Machine or a 5 O'clock Tea Kettle be nice? And here are Bread Trays, and Fire Screens, and Tool Cabinets. And what would make a nicer gift than a Canary Bird in a Brass Cage?

Bread Mixers—the Universal; mixes the dough perfectly in three minutes without requiring you to touch it with the hand. Made in three sizes— $1.35, $2 and $2.50.

Make sure this year by getting yours at once.

Crown Christmas Tree Holders—the most practicable of all, here in two sizes; 45c and 63c.

Christmas holidays, when a specially arranged program will be rendered.

The Christmas entertainments of the Sunday-school societies of Harris lane and Lincoln will be held in their chapels Wednesday night.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Education of Bound Brook it was decided to appoint one of the local doctors as health inspector.

Mrs. Samuel Pittenger, of Somerville, was lately a guest at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dougherty.

Jeremiah Haley, of East Second street, has been visiting at the home of his brother, Daniel Haley, in Raritan.

Edgar Cregar is recovering from scarlet fever at his home in Elizabeth street, South Bound Brook.

Herbert Abrams, of Maple avenue, Bound Brook, has returned from a stay of several days in Boston.

Mrs. Peter Hansen, of Lincoln, has been visiting relatives in Cranford.

WESTFIELD.

Complaints are many concerning the blocking of the Central avenue crossing at night by freight trains. There is a signal bridge a few hundred feet east of the crossing and trains waiting for signals stop on the crossing and block it for half an hour at a time. This is one of the crossings that have been called to the attention of the railroad commission.

Officers for next year have been elected by Westfield Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., as follows: C. A. Bosser, councilor; H. E. Cline, vice-councilor; S. P. Welsh, recording secretary; T. E. Lear, warden. The officers will be installed January 8.

Westfield Council held a regular meeting last evening, the last but one of the year. The next and last meeting will be given up to settling the year's business.

The road through Clark Township known as the old Post road, from Rahway to Plainfield, has been adopted as a county road by the freeholders.

Sad State of Affairs.

"There is a great deal of egotism in the profession," said the leading man.

"There is," answered Mr. Stormington Barnes, with a touch of sorrow in his tone. "I am astonished to see how many actors appear to think they play Hamlet as well as I do."—Exchange.

Not the Kind She Wanted.

"I would be willing to work for you," he declared, "until my fingers dropped off."

"I haven't any doubt of that," she replied, "but what I want is a husband who will be able to do a little brain work for me."—Washington Post.

Man, PPor Man!

Mrs. Flutter—Mrs. Crabapple says her husband kisses her goodby every morning of his life.

Mr. Flutter—I often wondered what gave him that sour expression.—Smart Set.

The Reason.

Tafter—If the ballot were given to women the Republican party would have a cinch.

Byron—Yes?

Tafter—All women want protection.—Puck.

RED CROSS STAMPS.

Red Cross stamps, carrying the message of good will towards men and special Christmas greeting, are selling like hot cakes all over town, just as they are throughout the country. Every penny realized from the sale here will be devoted to the work of the Plainfield Tuberculosis society. These beautiful charity stamps will not carry a letter but a letter will carry them. Each one, as told yesterday, is a bullet in the fight against the great white plague right here in Plainfield.

These stamps are on sale at The Daily Press office; Laing's stationery store; Estil's stationery store; Randolph's drug store and Miller's drug store. A packet of nine sells for ten cents and a packet of twenty four for twenty-five cents. There is no expense attached to the sales and every penny is clear profit for the local society. The stamps are both beautiful and inexpensive and are considered just the thing for the Christmas letter or package.

Joseph Smith Surprised.

Master Joseph Smith, of West Third street, was given a surprise party at his home last night by a number of his friends. The evening was spent playing games, after which supper was served. Among those present were May Wilson, William Sutton, Margaret McCarthy, Morris FitzGerald, Florence Briscoe, Charles Cullen, Margaret Casey, William Boyle, Susie Stuart, George Gray, Katheryn Harkins, Rosel Harkins, Joseph Bickerman, Katheryn FitzGerald, Frances Sullivan, John Dion, Gladys Stuart, James Cullen, Nellie Smith and Joseph Smith.

W. A. Coddington as Counsel.

Miss Mary Brown and her sister, Mrs. L. J. Denton, of Washington avenue, have engaged W. A. Coddington, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, to represent them in their efforts to prevent the erection of a barn on Washington avenue, abutting their property. Owing to the fact that the Common Council did not transact any business last night the matter could not come up for consideration. It was reported today that probably an injunction would be obtained stopping Max Goldstein from proceeding with the structure.

Treat for Young People.

The Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church will give its friends a great treat Saturday night, January 2, when Egerton R. Young, the well-known writer of stories for boys and girls, as well as lecturer, will entertain with pictures and stories of "The Wild North Land." Mr. Young is a prince of story tellers and will delight all who hear him The public is invited to attend.

a feature. The lovely costumes of yellow and pink worn by the cherry blossoms and chrysanthemums being particularly attractive. The singing of Leonard Lewis, Robert Moyer, Ernestine Wilson and Adelaide Parker was unusually fine, and as for the fun-provoking Brownies they were simply immense.

Irving School.

Christmas will be observed at the Irving school tomorrow morning This will be the program: Opening, "Mighty Prince of Nations," school; recitation, "Joy of Christmas," Roy Hafner; song, "Angels are Singing," girls from 5 C class, recitation, "Just Like Me," Ethel Weed, 3 B; song, "O Bethlehem Holy," school; solo, "An Old Sacred Lullaby," Ella Cook, 6 A; recitation; "Just in the Place Where We Live," Violet Sutton, 4 B; song, "A song of Bethlehem," 3 C class; song; "Chiming Bells of Christmas," No. 12 school; recitation, "Santa Claus and the Mouse," Edith Jeffrey, 6 A; solo, "Tattling to Santa," Roy Banks 3 A; song, "O Beauteaus Star," school; exercise, "Five Little Evergreens," pupils from 4 A, Margaret Crane, Blanche Askham, William Ross, Ralph Jacobs, Axel Brandt, Catherine Stevens; recitation, "Helping Santa Claus," Theodore Schwartz song, "Carols Ring Around Us," school; recitation, "Santa Claus," Marion Lynn, 5 C; song, "Christmas Bells," girls from 5 B class, Christine Lude, Mabel Prince, Edna Scribner, Rachel Smith, Gertrude Slorah, Grace Brown, Madeline Minor, Dorothy Peacock; recitation, "There Was Once a Small Boy," Richard Borden, 5 A; song, by Susie Stuart, 6 A class; closing, "Shepherds True Their Watch Were Keeping," No. 9, school.

Lincoln School.

The Lincoln school is without an auditorium where all classes could meet in a general program, and each room will therefore have a program of its own, the primary department in the morning, and the other grades will hold exercises in the afternoon.

Watchung Primary School.

As the Watchung Primary School in the borough, has no auditorium, exercises will be held in each room separate. Beginning at 9:30 tomorrow morning the kindergarten will have recitations and at various hours during the day the other grades will carry out programs at their own convenience.

Borough High School.

Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor of Grace M. E. church, will deliver a Christmas address to the pupils of the North Plainfield High School and grammar department tomorrow morning at 11:45. This program will be given by the primary department at the same hour:

Franklin School.

The exercises at the Franklin school, of which Miss Noel J. Bullock is principal, will be as follows. "Prince of Nations;" "Adeste Fideles;" "Bethlehem;" "An Old English Christmas Carol;" "The Holy Night;" solo by Edward Crone; chorus by school; reading of "The Christmas Story;" "There Were Shepherds;" chorus of twelve voices from 5B grade; song, "Jesus' Birth," "Glory to God on High;" "O Guiding Star;" "An Old Sacred Lullaby;" "Good Tidings."

Shortest Day in Year.

To day is the shortest day in the year. It marks the winter solstice, the period when the sun for the moment seems to stand still, preparatory to retracing its steps towards the equator. The days length has decreased its minimum 6 hours and thirteen minutes. Until Thursday it will remain nine hours four minutes in length.

was a member of Company D, National Guard, of New Brunswick. He was a member of the First Baptist church up to the time of his leaving there, and his name is still on the membership roll.

The Common Council last night at its adjourned meeting passed resolutions on Councilman Suydam's death and then adjourned, postponed the regular business until a later date. Mr. Suydam's chair and desk were draped and a huge bunch of roses were on the desk.

An Exciting Runaway.

A horse belonging to A. B. C. Podine ran away on East Second street shortly before noon today, and before being caught at Park avenue, caused no little excitement. It overturned an empty ash wagon with a driver and two assistants aboard and then fell on the brick pavement where it was held down by Theodore Martin. The occupants of the ash wagon were greatly frightened but escaped injury. The whiffletree of the Bodine wagon was broken.

J. J. Henderson.

J. J. Henderson, civil engineer, died from typhoid pneumonia at his late home, 782 Prospect place, Brooklyn, on Sunday, December 20. Mr. Henderson was a resident of Rockview avenue for many years and had many friends in the town. He is survived by his wife and two daughters, Mrs. Carl Brown, of Brooklyn, and Miss Evelyn Henderson.

Ice and Snow Interferes With Hunt.

Owing to the heavy going on Saturday, there being considerable ice and snow in the fields, the Watchung Hunt Club did not hold its weekly chase. Although a hunt is scheduled for Wednesday morning, starting from the Kennels at 6:45 o'clock, if the present conditions continue, the affair will be postponed.

Odd Fellows Attend Theatre.

Members of Plainfield Lodge, No 44, I. O. O. F., attended the moving picture show at the Park theatre, last night, by invitation of the management. Richard Channey, baritone, sang the illustrated songs in a pleasing manner. The pictures were excellent and the new theatre is gaining popular favor.

Mr. McIntyre as Director.

Joseph McIntyre, of this city, will direct the program at a concert planned by the Women's Club of Newark on Wednesday afternoon, January 13, at Wallace hall, when Mrs. Edith Chapman Gould, of New York, will sing and the McIntyre trio, violin, 'cello and piano, will give some numbers.

Plainfield Knights Win.

The bowling team from Watchung council, K. of C., rolled the Jersey City council in the K. of C. tourney at Jersey City, last night. The Plainfielders won the two games played, the first by a score of 861 to 739 and the second by 873 to 771.

Moving Pictures.

Moving pictures tonight and tomorrow night, the grandest yet, at the New Plainfield theatre. Tomorrow night will be "try-out" night, an additional feature.

PNEUMONIA FATAL TO MRS. ALEXANDER GROSSET.

Mrs. Alice Grosset, wife of Alexander Grossett, a New York publisher, of Woodland avenue, died at her home last night after an illness of two weeks with pneumonia. She was a native of Orange but had lived in Plainfield for the past three years. She was a member of the First M. E. church and was well acquainted throughout the city, especially in the Netherwood section. She leaves one son, Donald Grosset.

The funeral will be held at her late home, tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

Mrs. William A. Apgar.

Mrs. Jane A. Apgar, wife of William A. Apgar, died at her home in Stirling, yesterday morning, from pneumonia. Mrs. Apgar was born in Hunterdon county eighty years ago but had lived in the Stirling vicinity for a quarter of a century. She is survived by five daughters and two sons. They are Mrs. Stephen Davis, formerly of Plainfield but now of Newark; Mrs. Louise Oakley, of Elizabeth; Miss Emily Apgar, of Stirling, and Mrs. A. T. Ten Eyck, Mrs. Elizabeth Peck, Edward Apgar, and Louis L. Apgar, of Plainfield. The funeral will be held at the late home tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and burial will be at Basking Ridge.

Re-enter "Bobby" Leach.

"Bobby" Leach, the former local lunch wagon proprietor who has a habit of breaking into print every now and then through parachute jumps or other hazardous feats, has devised a new way to risk his precious neck. He announced yesterday that some time net summer he would go over Niagara Falls in an immense rubber ball that is now in course of construction. Just what benefit "Bobby" will derive by tempting the fool killer is not mentioned in the dispatches coming from his present residing place, Chippewa, Ont.

Want Dr. Vance to Remain.

The members of the North Reformed church, Newark, of which Rev. Dr. James I. Vance is the pastor, has made an earnest plea to him that he remain with the church and not accept the call to go to Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Vance expects to announce his decision at the services Christmas Day, and invitations have been sent to all the Reformed churches in Newark to be present at that time.

Mr. Marks Their Speaker.

The banquet committee of the Plainfield Merchants' Association announces that Marcus M. Marks, of New York, will be the principal speaker at the banquet to be held January 19, at the Hartride school auditorium. Mr. Marks, who is an entertaining speaker, has chosen "Get Together" as his subject. The merchants have tickets on sale.

Contract Case is Settled.

The case of the J. D. Loizeaux Company, against the Metuchen Building Company for $3,648, which was in the call of cases for today in the Middlesex County Circuit Court for trial, has been settled. Isaac P. Runyon was counsel for the plaintiff.

—Alex. Lusardi has a full line of Xmas trees, holly wreaths, roping, and mistletoe, corner Front and Somerset streets, at reasonable prices.

DIOGENES AND PRIDE.

Ever so many years ago there lived in ancient Greece an old man whose name was Diogenes. He was very learned and wise, and often said witty and clever things.

One day he was at a great festival which was being held in honor of some important event, when he happened to see several rich young men who were dressed in the finest clothes that could be bought in those far-off days.

Diogenes, who himself always wore very shabby clothes, looked at the young men in his wise way. Then he smiled kindly and said: "This is pride!"

A little while after his notice was attracted to some brave soldiers who had just returned from a war in which they had gained many victories.

These soldiers were dressed in very ragged clothes, as they had been unable to get any new ones while at the war. Yet in spite of this, they walked along with their heads high, as heroes and conquerors.

The wise old Diogenes smiled kindly at them, too, and then said: "And this also is pride;" But I am sure you will agree with when I say that the pride of the soldiers was worth much more than the pride of the rich young men.

Wait Till She's Older.

On her sixth birthday Ethelberta's father gave her a little ring with a tiny pearl in it. Not very long after that she appeared in her father's office, looking very woebegone.

"O daddy," she said. "I've lost the little pill out of my ring!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Balm for Fat Men.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The Rocky Mountain Express," the very latest melodrama, is founded upon new ideas from beginning to end. The author has written a dialogue that is reasonable, though sensational; the climaxes are forceful, and situations that keep one's pulse moving a bit beyond normal. The wreck scene is a marvel of stage-craft and mechanical skill, while the numerous scenes laid in the "Rockies" are strikingly different and happily arranged. The Klimt & Gazzolo Amusement Company have given this production a mounting both elaborate and expensive. "The Rocky Mountain Express" will arrive at the New Plainfield theatre Thursday night (Christmas Eve).

The "Ninety and Nine" an exceptionally clever melodrama, is announced as the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre, Christmas afternoon and night. The play is enjoying its third season and since its run at the Academy of Music, for more than five months, in the city of New York, has been accredited as one of the most successful of the attractions playing the popular priced circuit. The author has treated a splendid theme with a dash that has lifted his effort out of the rut of melodrama, and with the original New York cast and production, it ought to prove one of the best drawing cards of the season.

The first act of James Forbes' comedy, "The Traveling Salesman," which comes to this city next Saturday, where it will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre, matinee and night, represents the railroad depot of a small Middle West town, with the usual furnishings that go with a piece of this kind in a rural district. The model which Mr. Forbes has taken for his play is said to really be from a small village in the western part of the State of Pennsylvania, to which Mr. Forbes journeyed during the writing of the play, and where he spent several days in study on his subject. Not content with merely a replica of this little depot, the author opened negotiations with the railroad officials to buy the old benches with the high backs which for years had done duty in this little station, and upon which the boys and girls of the village had carved their names side by side.

"Take a trip around the world and be back home by bed-time," is the inviting proposition offered by Fred Niblo at the New Plainfield theatre, Wednesday evening, December 30, when he will give "Africa," the first of his delightful series of four pictorial "Talks of Travel in Distant Lands." These celebrated zig-zag journeys around the world are all graphically illustrated with hundreds of superbly colored views and moving pictures, as well as panoramic photographs. Mr. Niblo will present a different travel-talk each succeeding Wednesday night in the following order: "Egypt," January 6; "London," January 20; "Russia," January 27.

At the New Plainfield theatre on Thursday night, December 31, Cohan & Harris will present Scott Welch in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," by George M. Cohan, whose "Little Johnny Jones" has shown how thoroughly theatre-goers enjoy Mr. Cohan's clever productions in playwriting and music. "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" had a long run in Chicago, and has created the same interest in New York at the New Amsterdam theatre. The cast includes Scott Welch, Frances Gordon, Julia Ralph, Elizabeth Drew, Susan Chisnell, Eugene MacGregor, James Manning, James A. Davett, Harry Gwynette, Archie MacKenzie, Jr., and Harry Wilcox.

Currie & Gray will present on New Year's afternoon and night at the New Plainfield theatre, George Broadhurst's latest success, "An International Marriage." The play, which has been on tour for several weeks with the highest praise and commendation and will open at Weber's theatre on the following Monday for an indefinite run.

BASEBALL.

Cy Young will be the only old timer in the Boston Red Sox lineup when they go south next spring.

The athletic council of George Washington University of Washington, D. C., has decided to cut baseball from the sporting curriculum.

President O'Brien of the American Association is in favor of reviving the post-season series between his league and the Eastern, provided the championship races end at the same time.

Jim McGuire has declined an offer to become scout for the Cincinnati team. He is under contract to Cleveland and his contract provides for his release only if he gets a good managerial job.

Garry Herrmann says there is no intention of doing away with the world's championship series. Increasing the prices of admission and handling the tickets differently have been discussed by the National Commission, but not calling off the contests.

Exeter Academy has arranged the following schedule for its nine next spring: April 14, Lowell Textile; 16, Yale freshmen; 21, Bates; 24, Mercersburg; 30, Princeton freshmen; May 1, Maine; 5, New Hampshire; 12, St. Anselm's College; 15, Williston Seminary; 19, Cushing Academy; 22, Pennsylvania freshmen; 26, Harvard (provisionally); 29, Dean Academy; June 5, Andover.

Isn't it about time to let up on Merkle for his base running mistake that cost the New Yorks the championship? How many ball players wouldn't have made the same blunder even with the Pittsburg episode of recent occurrence? More than one important game has been lost through a physical error, and doubtless some through mental mistakes. Merkle is a good young ball player, mistake or no mistake, and it is charitable by now to cease harping on his base running lapse.

Jack Dunn has obtained his freedom from President Hanlon of the Baltimore Eastern League club and is at liberty to do business wherever he can find an opening. Jack, who, it is conceded, practically won the pennant for Baltimore, has found his opening and has grabbed the chance. He will manage the Brooklyn team next season. This much Jack admits, though he also says he has not yet been "officially notified."

Dunn has turned down several offers from American Association teams. Brooklyn was hot after Bill Dahlen. Boston refused to allow Dahlen to leave and Ebbets immediately opened negotiations with Dunn and landed him. Official announcement of this will come in a few days.

Clark Griffith is boomed to the skies in the Cincinnati newspapers just now as the greatest manager that ever sat on a bench. His picture is printed daily, prominent citizens are quoted extensively as to his worth, and in one particular yarn printed the other day his name appeared forty-seven times. Former managers of Cincinnati teams received similar treatment in midwinter, but the can was tied to all of them. Will Griffith meet a like fate?

GOLF.

Word has been received that the Onwentsia Club, of Lake Forest, Ill., is going to apply for the next amateur championship tournament of the United States Golf Association. It will be remembered that the national tournament was last held at Onwentsia in 1899, when Herbert M. Harriman won the title, defeating Findlay S. Douglas in the final round, thereby registering for the first time a victory in championship golf of an American.

tion of a course for next year's tournament certain devotees of the game have called attention to the fact that as Massachusetts has never held the amateur championship it is the turn of some club in the Boston district to have the event. In answer to this Ralph Cracknell, the well known critic, has the following to say:

"No Boston district club has applied for any of the championships Only three links near this city would be at all suitable for the amateur tournament—Myopia, which cannot hold it; the Country Club and Brae Burn.

"Brae Burn would have to be bunkered considerably more than it is now and lengthened somewhat before it would be the test of golf that the crack amateurs expect at a national amateur meeting. The Country Club's three new holes will be used late in the season of 1909, but they will not reach perfection until 1910, when at Clyde Park will be found links worthy in every way of the meeting.

"Eastern golfers always have gone to Chicago for championship meetings in larger numbers than the Western players have come East. At the Garden City Golf Club during the amateur championship this year a prominent Chicago golfer, who is president of a big railroad, was asked why this was so. He replied that the young Western players had to hold on to their jobs, and could not go careering all over the country playing golf. Immediately one thought of H. Chandler Egan and the Harvard and Yale golfers from the middle West who used to play in the championships during their college days, but now have to keep their noses to the grindstone.

"Year after year, however, the national championships become more the real events of importance to the crack golfers. The mug hunting stage has passed with the best of them and they like to take a go at the national championship. Many who formerly used to play in all sorts of tournaments now harbor their time, and possibly their funds, so that they can go to the United States amateur championship. To go to one of them means that they will feel the call each year, for no sporting meetings of any character bring together so many good fellows."

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Christmas services will be held at the First M. E. church Sunday morning and evening, and the Sunday-school will hold special exercises in the afternoon in Vincent chapel.

The sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the First Presbyterian church on Sunday, Jan. 3. Preparatory services will be held the Wednesday evening preceding.

Mrs. Charles Dayton of the Home Mission Circle of the Park Avenue Baptist church, has received a letter of thanks from the missionary in Mexico to whom a barrel of clothing was sent.

About sixty members of the Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school have been rehearsing for the Christmas cantata, "Santa's Mixup," to be given on Tuesday night, December 29. It will be the most elaborate entertainment yet undertaken by the school.

The Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will hold its Christmas entertainment on Monday, December 28. In the afternoon there will be a party and tree for the primary department, and at 8 o'clock in the evening a moving picture show will be given for the older members of the school and their friends.

CLOSED PORTALS.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will elect officers Thursday night, December 31, at which time the members will have a Christmas tree celebration.

Benevolent Council, No. 256, Jr. O. U. A. M., has elected these officers: Councilor, A. R. Tranchard; vice-councilor, Edward Honeyman; recording secretary, James Conklin; assistant secretary, George Cole; financial secretary, G. A. Ballantyne; treasurer, J. H. Adams; conductor, John Ayres; warden, John VanHorn, inside sentinel; Arthur Ferris; outside sentinel, Gilbert S. Martin, trustee, R. D. Conover; past councilor, W. H. I. Cubberly.

On his walk home early Sunday morning, Owen Logan, twenty-eight years old, of 734 Carman street, Camden, was badly beaten at Broadway and Ferry avenue after a quarrel. His assailants escaped. Logan's lacerated scalp was dressed at Cooper Hospital.

David Carr, of Newark, who has been visiting relatives here, has returned to his home.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The Reliance Club of Mantua will have a fox hunt Christmas morning.

Thousands of toys will be distributed to poor children by Atlantic City Elks Monday following Christmas.

Earl Stanger, of Westville, who received a shock at the electric powerhouse a week ago, is just able to be out. His feet were badly burned.

Rev. J. L. Howard, pastor of the Woodbury M. E. church, who was taken ill at his summer home, Bradley Beach, last summer, is said to be slowly recovering.

Gloucester saloon-keepers have received notice that their bars will have to be closed today because of the special election on the proposed $100,000 bond issue.

Charles Saetherer, 768 Line street, Camden, was shocked by a live electric wire yesterday, when at the same time the electric current knocked down a horse he was driving.

Young Richard Aumack had one round with a buzz saw in Vanaman's mill at Vineland Saturday and retired with three fingers missing. The boy nearly bled to death before a physician arrived.

Harrison L. Merchant, of Woodbury, who, it is charged, assaulted Foreman Harry Kulp at the Camden Coke Works, is now in the Camden jail, where he is likely to eat his Christmas dinner.

A half dozen bathers took short dips in the ocean at Atlantic City yesterday. Boardwalk strollers wrapped in furs shivered in sympathy with the husky bathers, who appeared to rather enjoy their chilly bath.

St. John's church, Paterson, was thronged to the doors Sunday morning by parishioners and visitors from several parts of the city who had attended to assist at the first mass sung by Rev. William E. Thompson, who was on Saturday morning ordained to the priesthood. Father Thompson, as a boy, lived in Paterson.

Tax Collector Lowry, of Atlantic City, received the largest check ever paid into his office Saturday, when the annual bill of the Marlborough-Blenheim Company, $23,566.96, was paid. Eight years ago the site of the big double hotel was occupied by charitable institutions which paid no taxes, and the big check represented clear gain to city finances.

A hundred of Trenton's poor families were provided with Christmas dinners, fuel and clothing and children with toys at a "Christmas giving session" of the Third Presbyterian church Sunday-school Sunday afternoon. Several weeks ago the scholars of the Sunday-school voted to forego their own Christmas treat of candy and give to the poor.

Wearing thin gowns, a woman, a man, two girls and two boys were baptized in the Delaware river, along the North Cramer Hill shore, East Camden, Sunday. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. G. Shireman, of 3362 Goodman street, Philadelphia, and was witnessed by a number of persons who stood along the river front shivering from the cold.

Charged with robbing a freight car at Columbus, Burlington county, Albert Simpson was placed in the lockup there Saturday night. When Constable Camp went to the prisoner's cell yesterday he found that Simpson had broken the lock and made his escape. Simpson was recently released from the county jail at Mt. Holly after a term for chicken stealing.

DETERMINED TO SELL RAILROAD LAND FOR TAX.

At noon yesterday Mayor Wittpenn, of Jersey City, stated that the law department had no notice of any application of the Central Railroad for an order of the Court of Chancery to restrain the sale by City Collector Robert Davis on Wednesday next of two valuable tracts of land under water in New York Bay. The land adjoins the Standard Oil property on Black Tom Island, and the sale is for unpaid taxes and interest of nearly $800,000 that has accumulated since 1887.

Mayor Wittpenn declared that the sale would go on unless stopped by an order of the court, as threatened by William D. Edwards, counsel to the railroad, when a check for $297,000, in full payment of the amount due as a compromise, was offered and refused by the city.

"If a restraining order is served on the city, we will postpone the sale to the day after the date set for the hearing on the rule to show cause," Mayor Wittpenn asserted. "We propose to advertise the sale of the valuable property extensively, in order to get large corporations to bid for it. There will be no compromise in this case. After defeat in the United States Supreme Court the Central should pay its taxes to Jersey City."

Mayor Wittpenn sent for Chief Clerk Michael J. O'Donnell, of the Tax Board, and the latter showed that the 1907 assessments of $5,470,000 had been reduced by the Board of Taxation to $2,490,000. Mayor Wittpenn declared that the property is worth twice that sum at least. He said that Jersey City ought to be able to satisfy an $800,000 tax lien at a sale.

Another Devil, Possibly.

The other day an ingenious looking person called with the message to the housewife that her husband had sent for his dress suit, which was to be pressed and redone by the tailor.

"Dear me," said the housewife, "he said nothing to me about it. Did he look quite well?"

"Yes, mum, he wuz in good health and spirits."

"And he seemed quite as if he knew what he was about?"

"He did that, mum."

"And did he look as if he were quite content with things about him?"

"Well," said the lady, "it seems strange that he should only think of that dress suit now, because it's ten years since he's dead and buried, and I've often wondered how he's been getting on."—Chicago News.

Baseball Fans.

"Dear me!" remarked the perspiring old lady who was making her first visit to a baseball game. "I don't see how people can tell such terrible fibs."

"What now, antie?" asked the city niece, in surprise.

"Why, the paper stated that there were thousands of 'fans' out here every afternoon and I am suffering with the heat and can't find one."

Miss Ruth Thompson, a teacher in the public schools of North Attleboro, Mass., is spending the holiday season at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson, of Craig place.

RUS IN URBE.

I wandered to the village, Tom,'
And asked for Asa Pratt.
"Why, Asy's in New York," they said;
"That's where he's living at."

Well, next I asked for Harvey Griggs,
But people made it clear
That he was living in New York—
Had lived there 'most a year.

The house where Bill Jones used to live
Was advertised for rent.
He now resides in New York town,
And writes that he's content.

I wandered to the smithy, Tom.
There where the two roads fork;
The blacksmith's mending motor cars
For some firm in New York.

And you remember Lizzie Dean?
They say she's doing well
As switchboard girl down in New York—
She's been there quite a spell.

I looked for Aunt Minerva Brown.
She's rounding out her days
In New York, with a boarding house
That folks here tell me pays.

This town's not grown so very much
Since you and I were here.
If you will ponder o'er the tale,
The reason will be clear.

—Charles R. Barnes.

A Wife to be Pitied.

"I don't believe in early shopping," said the short man in the corner of the car.

"Why not?" the man with the dark green hat asked him.

"For a very good reason," replied the short man. "If I don't give my wife her Christmas spending money until the day before Christmas she can't come back at me for more, can she?'"

And he grinned atrociously.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MIANTANOMO BOWLERS WALLOP THE PYTHIANS

The Miantonomo bowling team walloped the Knights of Pythias five to the tune of three straight games in a Fraternal league series at Campbell's alleys, last night. The winners rolled steadily throughout and in the last try piled up a total of 911, one of the best aggregates yet made. Radin and Willet, of the Miantonomos, both went over the 200 mark, while Nash, Jr., of the Knights, tallied 204 at the start-off.

The Knights had six men in readiness for the series and Clouston was substituted for Dailey in the second game but failed to reach the head pin. His score was a 94 and he was relegated to the bench before the final try.

The scores:

13 WINS, 2 DEFEATS FOR PARK BOWLERS

The Park Club five cleaned the boards last night with the Jersey City Club by taking all three games in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament on the local alleys. This gives the Parks a total of thirteen victories and two defeats Last year at this time the team had won ten and lost five games.

The Parks made fine scores last night. They took the first game by a score of 869 to 789, the second by a score of 841 to 792 and the third by a score of 925 to 796. Although only one member of the local team reached a double century, Mulford, who rolled 210, all the other members put up figures above the average. Barlow rolled a 180 in the first game and duplicated it in the tihrd. Daniel almost reached a double century, with a 198, while other scores were high enough to secure victories. The scores:

| Park Club. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Barlow | 180 | 164 | 189 |
| Daniel | 178 | 180 | 198 |
| Long | 173 | 136 | 159 |

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Young Men's Club of Hope chapel will hold a business meeting tonight at the chapel.

At the Christian Endeavor Society meeting at Trinity Reformed church, Sunday night, Miss S. Etta Raybert sang a soprano solo and Martin A. Korff rendered violin solos. Miss Adelia Dufford was the leader and the attendance was large.

The Immortal Bill.

A Philadelphian on his return from Berlin talked at the Philadelphia Club about Kaiser Wilhelm.

"You know the Kaiser's ballet of 'Sardanapalus?'" he said. "Well, this ballet made a success, and in its honor the Kaiser gave a dinner.

"Berlin is laughing over an incident of the dinner. It seems that one of the speakers said in the course of his speech:

"'This ballet teaches us a powerful lesson. It shows us that we cannot escape our fate. As the immortal William once said, "there's a diivinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may." And so—

"The Kaiser applauded thunderously.

"'That is clever, very clever,' he cried. 'But when did I say it? I've quite forgotten.'"— Washington Star.

The Alienist.

"Before I answer your question," said the great alienist, "permit me to refresh my memory."

Hereupon he consulted a notebook.

"May I ask," resumed the lawyer, "why you found it necessary to consult some memorandum before answering a simple hypothetical question of only a few thousand words?"

"The fact is," replied the alienist, sauvity, "that I did that to get the point of view. I'd forgotten which side I'd been retained on in this particular case. Kindly spring your conundrum again." — Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Oh, simply this; all we demanded was deference; but your cultivated gang wants admiration and submission, and will not let us possess our secret souls, even, in peace. And, then, the quality despised no one, but the cultivated despise every one. Ah, well—

These good old times are past and gone,
I sigh for them in vain,—

Janet, I wish Archie would fish his mandolin out and you would sing to me; I like to hear the songs of my youth. Not rag-time, or coon-songs, but dear old Foster's melodies; 'Old Kentucky Home,' and 'Massa's in the Col,' Col' Ground,' and 'Nellie Was a Lady'—what makes that so sad, I wonder?—'Nellie was a lady, las' night she died;' it's all in that single line; I think it is because it represents the pathetic idealization of love; Nellie was that black lover's ideal of all that was lovely, and she was dead. Is the orchestra ready—and the choir? Yes, shut the door; we are for art's sake only, not for the applause of the cold world in the car."

There Was No Answer.

Afterward, when he was angry over his own folly, his own blind, dogged, trustfulness against all the odds of evidence, Rupert Winter laid his weakness to that hour; to a woman's sweet, untrained, tender voice singing the simple melodies of his youth. They sang one song after another while the sun sank lower and stained the western sky. Through the snow-sheds they could catch glimpses of a wild and strange nature; austere, yet not repelling; vistas of foothills bathed in the evening glow; rank on rank of firs, tall, straight, beautiful, not wind-tortured and maimed, like the woeful dwarfs of Colorado; and wonderful snow-capped mountain peaks, with violet shadows and glinting streaks of silver. Snow everywhere; on the hillsides; on the close thatch of the firs; on the ice-locked rivers; snow freshly fallen, softly tinted, infinitely, awesomely pure.

Presently they came out into a lumber country where the mills huddled in the hollows, over the streams. Huge fires were blazing on the river banks. Their tawny red glare dyed the snow for a long distance, making entrancing tints of rose and yellow; and the dark green of the pines, against this background, looked strangely fresh. And then, without warning, they plunged into the dimness of another long wooden tunnel and emerged into lovely spring. The trees were in leaf, and not alone the trees; the undulating swells of pasture land and roadside by the mountains were covered with a tender verdure; and there were innumerable vines and low glossy shrubs with faintly colored flowers.

"This is like the south," said Miss Smith.

Archie was devouring the scene. "Doesn't it just somehow make you feel as if you couldn't breathe, Miss Janet?" said he.

"Are you troubled with the high altitude?" asked Millicent anxiously; "I have prepared a little vial of spirits of ammonia; I'll fetch it for you."

The colonel had some ado to rescue Archie; but he was aided by the porter, who was now passing through the car proclaiming: "You all have seen Dutch Flat Mr. Bret Hahte wrote 'bout; nex' station is Shady Run; and eve'ybody look and see the greates' scenic 'traction of dis or any odder railroad, Cape Hohn!"

Instantly, Mrs. Melville fished her guide book and began to read:

"There are few mountain passes more famous than that known to the world as Cape Horn. The approach to it is picturesque, the north fork of the American river raging and foaming in its rocky bed, 1,500 feet below and parallel with the track—"

"Do you mind, Mildred, if we look instead of listen?" Aunt Rebecca interrupted, and Mrs. Melville lapsed into an injured muteness.

Truly, Cape Horn has a poignant grandeur that strikes speech from the lips. One cannot look down that sheer height to the luminous ghost of a river below, without a thrill. If to pass along the cliff is a shivering experience, what must the actual execution of that stupendous bit of engineering have been to the workmen who hewed the road out of the rock, suspended over the abyss! Their dangling black figures seem to sway still as one swings around the curve.

Our travelers sat in silence, until the "Cape" was passed and again they could see their roadbed on the side. Then Mrs. Melville made a polite excuse for departure; she had promised a "Daughter" whom she had met at various "biennials" that she would have a little talk with her. Thus she escaped. They did not miss her. Hardly speaking, the four sat in the dimly lighted, tiny room, while mountains and fields and star-sown skies drifted by. Unconsciously, Archie drew closer to his uncle, and the older man threw an arm about the young shoulders. He looked up to meet Janet's eyes shining and sweet, in the flash of a passing station light. Mrs. Winter smiled, her wise old smile.

With the next morning came another shift of scene; they were in the fertile valleys of California. At every turn the landscape became more softly tinted, more gracious. Aunt Rebecca was in the best of humor and announced herself as having the journey of her life. The golden green of the grain fields, the towering palms, the pepper trees with their fascinating grace, the round tops of the live-oaks, the gloss of the orange groves, the calla lily hedges and the heliotrope and geranium trees which climbed to the second story of the stucco houses, filled her with the enthusiasm of a child. She drank in the cries of the enterprising young liar who cried "Fresh figs," months out of season, and she ate fruit, withered in cold storage, with a trustful zest. No less than three books about the flora of California came out of her bag. A certain vine called the Bougainvillea, she was trying to find, if only the cars would not go so fast; as for poinsettias, she certainly should raise her own for Christmas. She was learned in gardens and she discoursed with Miss Smith on the different kinds of trumpetvine, and whether the white jasmine trailing among the gaudy clusters was of the same family as that jasmine which they knew in the pine forests. But she disparaged the roses; they looked shop-worn. The colonel watched her in amazement.

"Bertie, I make you think of that little dwarf of Dickens', don't I?" she cried. "Miss Muffins, Muggins? what was her name? You are expecting me to exclaim, 'Ain't I volatile?' Thank Heaven, I am. I could always take an interest in trifles. It has been my salvation to cultivate an interest in trifles, Bertie; there are a great many more trifles than crises in life. Where has Janet gone? Oh, to give the porter the collodion for his out thumb. People with troubles, big or little, are always making straight for Janet. Bertie, have you made up your mind about her?"

"Only that she is charming," replied the colonel. He did not change color, but he was uneasily conscious that he winced, and that the shrewd old critic of life and manners perceived it. But she was mercifully blind to all appearance; she went on with the little frown of the solver of a psychological enigma. "Yes, Janet is charming; and why? She is the stillest creature. Have you noticed? Yet you never have the sense that she hasn't answered you. She's the best listener in the world; and there's one thing about her unusual in most listeners—her eyes never grow vacant."

Rupert had noticed; he called himself a doddering old donkey silently, because he had assumed that there was anything personal in the interest of those eyes when he had spoken. Of course not; it was her way with every one, even Millicent, no doubt. His aunt's next words were lost, but a sentence caught his ear directly: "For all she's gentle, she has plenty of spirit, Bertie, did I ever tell you about the time our precious cousin threw our great-great-grandfather's gold snuff-box at her? No? It was funny. She flew into one of her towering rages, and shrieking: 'Take that!' hurled the snuff-box at Janet. Janet wasn't used to having things thrown at her. She caught the box, then she rang the bell. 'Thank you very much,' says Janet; and when old Aunt Phrosie came, she handed the snuff-box to her as a present. But she sent it that same day to one of the sisters. There was never anything else thrown at her, I can tell you."

They found a wonderful sunset on the bay when San Francisco was reached. Still in her golden humor, as they rattled over the cobblestones of the picturesque streets to the Palace hotel, Mrs. Winter told anecdotes of Robert Louis Stevenson, obtained from a friend who had known his mother. Mrs. Winter had chosen the Palace in preference to the St. Francis, to Mrs. Melville's high disgust.

"She thinks it more typical," sneered Millicent; "myself, I prefer cleanliness and comfort to types."

Their rooms were waiting for them and two bell-boys ushered Mrs. Winter into her suite. Randall was lodged on the same floor, and Mrs. Melville, who was to spend a few days with her aunt on the latter's invitation, was on a lower floor. The colonel had begged to have Archie next to him; and he examined the quarters with approbation. His own room was the last of the suite; to the right hand, between his room and Archie's, was their bath; then the parlor of Mrs. Winter's suite next her room and bath, and last, to the right, Miss Smith's room.

Archie was sitting by the window looking out on the street; only the oval of his soft boyish cheek showed. The colonel went by him to the parlor beyond, where he encountered his aunt, her hands full of gay postal cards.

"Souvenirs de voyage," she answered his glance; "I am going to post them."

"Can't I take them for you?"

"No, thanks, I want the exercise."

"May I go with you?"

"Indeed, no. My dear Bertie, I'm only aged, I'm not infirm."

"You will never be aged," responded the colonel gallantly. He turned away and walked along the arcade which looked down into the great court of the hotel. Millicent was approaching him; Millicent in something of a temper. Her room was hideously draughty and she could not get anyone, although she had rung and telephoned to the office and tried every device which was effectual in a well-conducted hotel; but this, she concluded bitterly, was not well-conducted; it was only typical.

"There's a lovely fire in Aunt Rebecca's parlor," soothed the colonel; "come in there."

Afterward it seemed to him that this whole interview with Millicent could not have occupied more than four minutes; that it was not more than seven minutes since he had seen Archie's shapely curly head against the curtain fall of the window.

But when he opened the door, Miss Smith came toward them. "Is Archie with Aunt Rebecca?" said she.

The colonel answered that he had left him in the parlor; perhaps he had stepped into his own room.

But neither in Archie's nor the colonel's nor in any room of the party could they find the boy.

CHAPTER V.

Blind Clews.

"But this is preposterous," cried Mrs. Melville, "you must have seen him had he come out of the room; you were directly in front of the doors all the time."

"I was," admitted the colonel; "can—can the boy be hiding to scare us?" He spoke to Miss Smith. She had grown pale; he did not know that his own color had turned. Millicent stared from one to the other.

"How ridiculous!" she exclaimed; "of course not; but he must be somewhere; let me look!"

Look as they might through all the staring empty rooms, there was no vestige of the boy. He was as clean vanished as if he had fallen out of the closed and locked windows. The colonel examined them all; had there been one open, he would have peered outside, frightened as he had never been when death was at his elbow. But it certainly wasn't possible to jump through a window, and not only shut, but lock it after one.

Under every bed, in every closet, he prowled; he was searching still when Mrs. Winter returned. By this time Mrs. Melville was agitated, and, naturally, irritated as well. "I think it is unpardonable in Archie to sneak out in this fashion," she complained.

"I suppose the boy wanted to see the town a bit," observed Aunt Rebecca, placidly. "Rupert, come in and sit down; he will be back in a moment; smoke a cigar, if your nerves need calming."

Rupert felt as if he were a boy of ten, called back to common sense out of imaginary horrors of the dark.

"But, if he wanted to go out, why did he leave his hat and coat behind him?" asked Miss Smith.

"He may be only exploring the hotel," said Mrs. Winter. "Don't be so restless, Bertie; sit down."

The colonel's eye was furtively photographing every article of furniture in the room; it lingered longest on Mrs. Winter's wardrobe trunk, which was standing in her room. Randall had been dispatched for a hot-water bottle in lieu of one which had sprung a leak on the train; so the trunk stood, its door ajar.

"Maybe he is doing the Genevra stunt there—is that what you are thinking?" she jeered. "Well, go and look."

Light as her tone was, she was not unaffected by the contagion of anxiety about her; after a moment, while Rupert was looking at the wardrobe trunk, and even profanely exploring the swathed gowns held in rigid safety by bands of rubber, she moved about the rooms herself.

"There isn't room for a mouse in that box," growled the colonel.

"Of course not," said his aunt, languidly, sinking into the easiest chair; "but your mind is easier. Archie will come back for dinner; don't worry."

"How could he get by me?" retorted the colonel.

"Perhaps he went into the neighboring rooms," Miss Smith suggested. "Shall I go out and rap on the door of the next room on the left?" On the right the last room of the party was a corner room.

"Why, you might," acquiesced Aunt Rebecca; but Mrs. Melville cut the ends of her words.

"Pray let me go, Aunt Rebecca," she begged, suiting the action to the words, and was out of the door almost ahead of her sentence.

The others waited; they were silent; little flecks of color raddled Mrs. Winter's cheeks. They could hear Millicent's knock reverberating. There was no answer. "Telephone to the adjacent room," proposed the colonel.

"I'll telephone," said Mrs. Winter, and rang up the number of the next room. There was no response; but when she called the number of the room adjoining, she seemed to get an answer, for she announced her name. "Have you seen a young lad?" she continued, after an apology for disturbing them. "He belongs to our party; has he by chance got into your room? Sad is he there?" In a second she put down the receiver with a heightened color, saying: "They might be a little civiler in their answers, if it is Mr. Keatcham's suite."

"What did the beggar say?" bristled the colonel.

"Only that it was Mr. Keatcham's suite—Mr. E. S. Keatcham—as if that put getting into it quite out of the question. Some underling, I presume."

"There is the unoccupied room between. That is not accounted for. But it shall be. I will find out who is in there." Rupert rose as he spoke, pricked by the craving for action of a man accustomed to quick decision. He heard his aunt brusquely repelling Millicent's proposal of the police, as he left the room. Indeed, she called him back to exact a promise that he would not make Archie's disappearance public. "We want to find him," was her grim addendum; "and we can't have the police and the newspapers hindering us."

In the office he found external courtesy and a rather perfunctory sympathy, based on a suppressed, but perfectly visible conviction that the boy had stolen out for a glimpse of the city, and would be back shortly.

The manager had no objection to telling Col. Winter, whom he knew slightly, that the occupant of the next room was a New England lady of the highest respectability, Mrs. Winthrop Wigglesworth. If the young fellow didn't turn up for dinner, he should be glad to ask Mrs. Wigglesworth to let Mrs. Winter examine her room; but he rather thought they would be seeing young Winter before then—oh, his hat? They usually carried caps in their pockets; and as to coats—boys never thought of their coats.

The manager's cheeriness did not especially uplift the colonel. He warmed it over dutifully, however, for his womankind's benefit. Miss Smith had gone out; why, he was not told, and did not venture to ask. Mrs. Melville kept making cautious signals to him behind his aunt's back; otherwise she was preserving the mien of sympathetic solemnity which she was used to show at funerals and first visits of condolence and congratulation to divorced friends. Mrs. Winter, as usual, wore an inscrutable composure. She was still firmly opposed to calling in the aid of the police.

Did she object to his making a few inquiries among the hotel bellboys, the elevator boy and the people in the restaurant or in the office?

Not at all, if he would be cautious.

So he sallied out, and, in the midst of his fruitless inquisition, Millicent appeared.

Forcing a civil smile, he awaited her pleasure. "Go on, don't mind me," said she, mournfully; "you will feel better to have done everything in your power."

"But I shall not discover anything?"

"I fear not. Has it not occurred to you that he has been kidnaped?"

"Hmn!" said the colonel.

"And did you notice how perturbed Miss Smith seemed? She was quite pale; her agitation was quite noticeable."

"She is tremendously fond of Archie."

"Oh—she knows more than she will say."

"Oh, what rot!" sputtered the colonel; then he begged her pardon.

"Wait," he counseled, and his man's resistance to appearances had its effect, as masculine immobility always has, on the feminine effervescence before him. "Wait," was his word, "at least until we give the boy a chance to turn up; if he has slipped by us, he is taking a little pasear on his own account; lads do get restless sometimes if they are held too steadily in the leash, especially—if you will excuse me—by, well, by ladies."

"If he has frightened us out of our wits—well, I don't know what oughtn't to be done to him!"

"Oh, well, let us wait and hear his story," repeated the soldier.

But the last streaks of red faded out of the west; a chill fog smoked up from the darkening hills, and Archie had not come. At eight, Mrs. Winter ordered dinner to be served in their rooms. Mrs. Smith had not returned. The colonel attempted a military cheerfulness, which his aunt told him bluntly later in the evening, reminded her of a physician's manner in critical cases where the patient's mind must be kept absolutely quiet.

But she ate more than he at dinner; although her own record was not a very good one. Millicent avowed that she was too worried to eat, but she was tempted by the strawberries and carp, and wondered were the California fowls really so poor; and gave the sample the benefit of impartial and fair examination, in the end making a very fair meal.

It is not to be supposed that Winter had been idle; before dinner he had put a guard in the hall and had seen Haley, who reported that his wife and child had gone to a kinswoman in Santa Barbara.

"Sure the woman has a fine house intirely, and she's fair crazy over the baby that's named afther her, for she's a widdy woman with never a child excipt wan that's in hivin, a little gurrl; and she wudn't let us rist 'til she'd got the cratur'. Nor I wasn't objectin', for I'm thinking there'll be something doin' and the wimin is onconvanient, thim times."

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY PRESS

TYPHOID'S COST IS IMMENSE.

Common Sickness Measured Against Dollars and Cents.

It is worth while, says H. E. Jordan, in Municipal Engineering magazine, to consider the cost of typhoid fever in order to get the importance of its prevention well fixed in mind. It is a recognized fact that the greater majority of those persons who die from this cause are between the ages of 20 and 35. Basing one's estimate upon the value of human life as given in insurance estimates, the average value in life capital that is thus destroyed is about $5,000. In the summer of 1907 there were studied in the Seventh and Ninth wards of Pittsburg 194 cases, with especial reference to the actual cost in money expended. These cases occurred in 146 families; from them there were 11 deaths; 87 wage earners lost 864 weeks' work; care takers (not professional nurses, but members of the family) lost 182 weeks' work; there were 13 of the cases treated in hospitals; total cost, in these three factories alone, $24,300. This being proportioned among the 194 cases, amounts to $125 per case, or $2,200 per death. It is without question that the cost more nearly approximates $2,500 per typhoid death on account of the inability of the patient to resume work at his normal rate. This makes a total cost per death of $7,500. There is, then, with the sole question of the money cost in mind, a deep problem for solution before this one cause of destruction of human life is eliminated.

WHY FEW LOVE AT FIRST SIGHT.

Oliver Wendell Holmes Has Well Portrayed Situation.

I understand we were speaking of love at first sight—I remarked, mildly. Now, as all a man knows about a woman whom he looks at is just what a picture as big as a copper, or a "nickel," rather, at the bottom of his eye can teach him, I think I am right in saying we were talking about the pictures of women. Well, now, the reason why a man is not desperately in love with 10,000 women at once is just that which prevents our portraits being distinctly seen on that wall. They are painted there by reflection from our faces, but because all of them are painted on each spot, and each on the same surface, and many other objects at the same time, no one is "seen in" the picture. But darken a chamber and let a single pencil of rays in through a keyhole, and you have a picture on the wall. We never fall in love with a woman in distinction from women until we get an image of her through a pinhole. And then we see nothing else, and nobody but ourselves can see the image in our mental camera obscura.—From "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," by Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Measures Hardness of Metals.

An instrument to measure the hardness of metals has been recently devised, more especially designed and found very useful in the manufacture of tools like twist drills, where the hardness has to be kept between narrow limits. It consists of a glass tube, within which a steel ball of 40 grains' weight, treated by a special process so as to have jewel hardness, falls freely. The height of the rebound of the ball measures the hardness of the metal it strikes. Were the area of contact between the dropped weight and the metal larger, so that no appreciable dent were made, the rebound would be a measure of elasticity rather than hardness. The height of the rebound is measured on a scale, of which 100 is the average hardness of carbon steel, which is also found to be the safety limit for steel tools after reheating and tempering ready for use.

Log Far Underground.

Wood 404 feet underground in a perfect state of preservation was found at the Alabang stock farm the other day while boring for the second artesian well there. The drill had penetrated to a depth of 400 feet and had just been drilling hard rock when it suddenly struck a log which was five feet in diameter and in perfect state of preservation.

How a log could be so far underground and underneath a ledge of rock in perfect condition is a question that is puzzling the officials of the bureau of agriculture.—Manila Times

The Language of Science.

"I must say," remarked the plain every-day man, "that I feel as if I had a cold in the head. And I'm so hoarse I can hardly speak."

"I see," answered the scientist. "You are suffering from a slight cohyza, causing congestion of the mucous membrane and suffusion of the optical organs, and inducing a somewhat phlogistic condition of the pieglottis. Perhaps, however, you had better send for a physician."

"Send for a physician? No. I don't want a doctor. Send for an interpreter."

Literary Hit.

"Did your friend make a hit at the literary club?"

"I guess he did. He pronounced 'Les Miserables' in a brand-new way and then alluded to it as Victor Herbert's masterpiece."

Even Worse.

"A public man should be careful not to say anything he will be sorry for."

"Yes, and yet, he's lucky if he merely says it instead of putting it in writing and signing his name to it."

GENERAL CHURCH NOTES.

Rev. Peter Dschang, a Catholic Chinese missionary, has been conducting services in Chicago.

Special evangelistic work will be done all of this summer among the Finns, Swedes and Spaniards in New York.

The court of appeals in England has decided that churchyards may be taxed for the benefit of the poor.

The national board of church extension of the Christian church is trying to raise $1,000,000 by the end of next year.

The Norwegian Lutheran Free church is seeking to raise an endowment of $100,000 for Augsburg Seminary, at Minneapolis.

Archdeacon Moule of the Episcopal church has been working 47 years in China, and speaks more hopefully now than ever of the prospects.

The new buildings of the Wesleyan East End Mission in London cover one and three-fourths acres, and are the result of 23 years' work.

The Church Lads' Brigade of the British Isles has 1,190 companies, while the colonies furnish 107 more, there being over 300,000 members.

The first payment has been made on the three and one-half acre tract of land in Baltimore which is to be the site for the Episcopal cathedral in that city.

The summer vacation work of the Episcopal City Mission in Boston costs about $5,000, being devoted wholly to the care of women and children who need fresh air.

OLD NOUNS WITH NEW MEANINGS

Speed—A thoughtless man's idea of progress.

Conceit—The child of ignorance and self-reliance.

Untold Agony—The unrepeated secret of a gossip.

Hope—To-morrow's veneer over to-day's disappointment.

Diplomacy—The art of politely getting what you want.

Trouble—The one thing that anyone can readily borrow.

Filthy Lucre—What all your neighbors are striving for, but not yourself.

Comfort—That which the ignorant think is the same thing as happiness.

Clubs—Homes maintained by many who seldom use them, for the convenience of a few who have no better place to go.—Success.

WARM WEATHER PHILOSOPHY.

Many spoil much good work for the lack of a little more.

It is never safe to look into the future with eyes of fear.

You never know the joy of living till you try the luxury of giving.

It's not the smile you put on your face, but the oney ou bring to another that makes you happy.

He who lets an evil impulse become a deed must remember that it will be father to many like it.

It commonly happens that the more a man gets into his hands the less he can get into his heart.

The umbrella cynicism may be a good thing in a shower of sentiment, but he is a fool who keeps it up when the sun is shining.—London Saturday Journal.

THOUGHTS FOR THE DAY.

Do give other people the privilege of being vain about something; it is a harmless safety valve.

Telling the whole truth is not compulsory when it serves only to wound. —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It is most discouraging to notice that bad luck often fails persistently on people who don't deserve it.

Millions of words have been written to drive away worry, though nothing is worth much but forgetfulness.

Instead of keeping silent in order to gain a reputation for wisdom, why not keep on saying pleasant things and get a reputation for kindness?

FOOL'S CAP IDEAS.

A small pin may lick a big balloon to a frazzle.

I'd rather be a mule's oculist than his chiropodist.

There are always six fools among seven wise men.

The fellow that's always right is generally wrong.

You can't judge a dog's hurt by the size of his holler.

It is idle for a sick man to boast of his careful habits.

This is no season to fire the cook; you should freeze her.

THE NEW BOOKS.

The tinted title's now the thing;
'Tis real word painting, I may say.
The Purple Box, the Crimson Wing,
The Yellow Mask, the Scarlet Day;
It opens up a vaster field
Than ever writing did before.
The Green Golosh, the Blood Red Shield,
All these and half a hundred more.

However much the tale be worth,
We find our fervor flags and fades
Unless the title is set forth
In rainbow hues or pastel shades;
The Tan Cravat, the Brown Valise,
The Blue Balloon, the Yellow Head,
And things of pink, gray and cerise—
These are the books we have to read.

And when the book folk advertise
Some new and highly colored wares,
It costs me only heavy sighs—
I know not how the story fares.
To self-denial of new prints
I've had to bid me be resigned,
Because the titles are all tints,
And I, alas! am color blind.
—New York Sun.

TWIN SOULS.

Miss Smartt—You don't seem to think very much of Mr. Jorkins, yet you are with him a great deal.

Mr. Swelle—Oh! I know he's an awful idiot; but what can one do? His political views are the same as mine.

Among Fishermen.

This great dispute,
Once more we strike;
Is a pike a pickerel,
Or is a pickerel pike?

Not a Chip of the Old Block.

"You want a job, do you, young man?" said the manager of the department store.

"Yes, sir."

"Are you willing to begin at the foot of the ladder?"

"No, siree!" answered the applicant. "That's the way my father began, 25 years ago, and he's still carrying a hod. I want something a little higher up than that."

So the manager, who hadn't encountered that type of boy before, put him in the packing department, on the top floor.—Chicago Tribune.

She Was Skeptical.

They were alone in the parlor scene—he was holding down an easy chair and she had the sofa all to herself.

"I thought," she said, "you were something of a mind reader."

"So I am," he rejoined.

"Well," she said, as her eyes rested on the unoccupied end of the sofa, "I don't believe it."—Chicago Daily News.

Picked Them Up as He Went Along.

"And what," asked the Sunday school teacher, "is your name?"

"Arthur Henry Brown Williams Green Joyce Brown Corwin."

"Gracious! How did your parents ever happen to give you all those names?"

"They didn't give me all of them. My step-parents helped."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Real Thing.

The Colonel—Did you notice how naturally the soldiers stormed the fortress in that military drama last night?

The Major—Yes; and it was due to their long training. Most of them have been barnstormers for years.—Chicago Daily News.

What She Is.

"Mme. Tetrazzini is a mezzo-soprano, is she not?" asked Mrs. Oldcastle.

"No, replied her hostess, pushing a solid silver cuspidor back from the edge of the $3,000 rug. "I think I heard Josiah sayin' she was an Eye-talian."—Chicago Record-Herald.

It Depended.

"Is your husband very ill?" asked the solicitous neighbor.

"It all depends," replied the wife. "If you believe the doctor, he'll be out in a day or two, but if you believe my husband he's so sick he's liable to die any minute."—Detroit Free Press.

A Fruitless Scheme.

"The Jinkses have lost that splendid cook of theirs."

"How came that?"

"So many were after her that the eldest son married her to keep her in the family."—Baltimore American.

SOME XMAS PROGRAMS

Midnight Mass at St. Joseph's Church Will Be an Impressive Service.

ANNOUNCEMENTS FOR SUNDAY.

Elaborate Music the Feature in All the Churches in Both Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Elaborate music, as usual, will be the feature of the Christmas Day services. Here are some of the programs already announced:

St. Joseph's Church.

Arrangements for the midnight mass at St. Joseph's church, Christmas Eve, have been completed by Rev. William H. Miller, the rector, and it has been decided that admission to the church this year will be by ticket only. The crowd, heretofore, has been so great that the worshippers have been disturbed and therefore passes limited to the seating capacity can be obtained from Father Miller.

Father Brennan will be the celebrant, a Passionate Father from Hoboken the deacon and Father Miller the sub deacon. The music will be in accordance with the decree of the Pope, strictly Cecelian and Gregorian. The selections will include "Mass of the Angels," by Biedermann, and "Adeste Fidelis," by Novello, as an offertory. The chorus choir of men and boys will be in charge of James Bailey, director. Mrs. Harry DeMeza will preside at the organ. The misical features will include a duet by Alfred La Porte and James Bailey. Father Miller will preach the sermon.

The other masses on Christmas morning will be at 8:30 and 10:30 in charge of Father Miller.

Warren Chapel.

Elaborate Christmas services have been arranged for Warren chapel on Sunday. There will be special music morning and evening with an extra program for the Sunday-school in the afternoon. An orchestra will assist and Mrs. Joseph O. McKelvey, organist, will have charge of the music to be rendered by the chorus choir. The morning program will be as follows:

Carol, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," Mendelssohn, choir; organ prelude, "Shepherd's Pastorale," Leybach, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey; response to the Commandments, Sir George Elvey; anthem, "While Shepherds Watched Their Flock," T. Edwin Solly, choir; offertory anthem, "The Birth of Christ," J. Wesley Hughes, choir; organ postlude, "O Joyous Morn," Anon.

The Sunday-school exercises will be held at 2:45 o'clock in the afternoon, consisting of recitations, and songs by the primary department, carols by the entire school, assisted by Martin A. Korff and Robert Stewart, violins; Elmer Wheeler, flute; William Dunn, organist, and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, pianist. James Sanley, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church quartet, will sing twice and the address of the afternoon will be delivered by James E. Church.

The evening program at 8 o'clock will be as follows:

Organ prelude, "He Shall Feed His Flock," (from the Messiah), Handel, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey; anthem, "The Heavenly Stranger," Charles Gabriel, choir; offertory solo, "Nazareth," Gounod, Miss Nora B. Schenck; postlude, "Praeludium," C. G. Stanger, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey. Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor, will preach both morning and evening.

Church of the Heavenly Rest.

Announcement is made of the special services to be held at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. There will be holy communion at 7 and 8 o'clock and at 10:30 there wil be a choral celebration and sermon by the rector, Rev. Charles Townsend; Introit hymn, "O Come All Ye Faithful;" Nicene creed, Steane; hymn before sermon, "Angels from the Realms of Glory;" anthem, "There Were Shepherds;" "Gloria in Excelsis," Steane. The Christmas festival will be held at the church Monday evening at 7 o'clock, to be followed by a play given by the children in the parish house and the distributions of gifts.

Highland A. C. Elect Officers.

The Highland A. C., prominent in local baseball circles last season, opened its new club rooms on East Third street, last night, and discussed plans for the winter. The club has a membership of eighteen. These officers were chosen for the year: President, Eddie Conshay; vice-president, Howard Stewart; secretary and treasurer, John Kyle, superintendent of the building, Thomas Higgins; executive committee, H. Winters, I. Curtis and George Hurst. After the business refreshments were served.

MISS MARY G. RUNKLE INTRODUCED IN SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Runkle, of West Eighth street, gave a reception and dance at their home, last night, for their daughter, Miss Mary Grey Runkle, the occasion marking her introduction to local society. It was a charming affair attended by two hundred guests, including many people from out of town. The decorations were appropriate to Christmastide, there being a tasteful arrangement of holly and flowers. Holly was used chiefly in the large hall, while the prevailing color in the dining room was pink. In the billiard room, where the guests danced, there was a novel arrangement of little incandescent lights, together with holly.

Miss Runkle was the recipient of a wealth of beautiful flowers from friends, and she was also showered with congratulations and best wishes. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Daniel Runkle, Miss Dorothy Fisk, Miss Louise Booth, Miss Annie Fisk and Miss Molly Perkins, of this city; Miss Katherine Gardner, of Georgetown, Va.; Miss Louise Polhemus, of Newark; Miss Dorothy Smith, of Germantown, Pa., and Miss Mercy Lloyd, of Brooklyn.

After the reception the rest of the evening was devoted to dancing, music for which was furnished by Elliott, of New York. Later an elaborate supper was served by an out-of town caterer. The guests included nearly all of the younger society set of the city and borough, as well as many from out-of-town.

CHARITY DAY AND NIGHT COME ON NEW YEAR'S EVE

"Charity Day and Night," December 31, will afford the people of Plainfield and North Plainfield an opportunity to contribute to the charities of the city, including the Organized Aid, the Children's Home, Muhlenberg Hospital and the Day Nursery. The committee of arrangements, of which Mayor Charles J. Fisk is the chairman, has secured the co-operation of the proprietors of the amusement places in Plainfield to contribute the profits from their entertainments to the charities named, and the success of the plan seems alerady assured.

The proceeds and contributions received will be deposited in a general charities fund, to be distributed by a committee of citizens, one to be appointed by each of the institutions and one by the general committee. Contributions may be sent to Mayor C. J. Fisk, chairman, or William F. Arnold, treasurer, or any member of the committee, comprised of Joseph A. Shallabarger, Harry L. Hall, William C. Kinney, F. W. Butler, L. G. Timpson, Dr. F. C. Ard, and David T. Kenney.

The attractions for the day and night will include George M. Cohan's big musical success, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," with a cast of forty people. This wil be given at the New Plainfield theatre, afternoon and evening at regular theatre prices. Tickets are now on sale.

At Proctor's theatre, there will be a strong attraction offered, including the Cameraphone vaudeville, moving pictures, illustrated songs, commencing at 10 o'clock in the morning and running continuously throughout the day and evening until 10:30 o'clock. The latest pictures will be shown.

Moving picture shows will also be the attraction at the Bijou theatre and the Park theatre on East Front street, arrangements having been made to offer exceptional programs for the day and evening.

In addition there will be the "Bachelors' Dance" at the Hartridge School auditorium. J. Hartley Mellick is chairman of the committee in charge and C. Ames Brooks the treasurer. The profits from all these affairs will go into the charity fund, and everybody is requested to contribute their mite toward making sunshine where shadows fall.

Timbo Social Club Elects.

At the annual meeting of the Timbo Social Club, last night, the following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Alden E. Wagner; vice-president, Isaac L. Elliott; secretary, J. Archibald Davie; treasurer, Erwin Y. Neighbor. The reports showed the membership to be close the 100 mark while the club's finances are in excellent condition. During the coming winter months, the organization will conduct several smokers and other social affairs for the members and their friends.

—As a special Christmas vegetable offering, Neuman Brothers will have twenty-five dozen bunches of fancy table celery tomorrow. Place orders early.

"JOHN JONES" SENTENCED

Negro Suspected of Shooting William Messerschmidt Gets Two Months in Jail.

CONCEALED WEAPON CHARGE.

Victim Positively Identifies Him and He Will Again Be Arraigned in Court When Time Is Up.

"John Jones," the negro arrested on suspicion after the shooting of William Messerschmidt at his home on Washington street, by an unknown man, several weeks ago, was arraigned before Judge Atwater in the Union county court, this morning and sentenced to two months in jail. While he is suspected of being Messerschmidt's assailant and has positively been identified by the latter, the only charge against him so far is that of carrying a concealed weapon, a revolver having been found in his possession whe nhe was arrested. While he is serving his sentence, the local police will get their evidence in shape in order to prefer an additional charge of felonious assault with intent to kill.

Messerschmidt visited local police headquarters Monday and picked out a picture of "Jones" as one of the man with whom he had grappled in the dark at his home, having surprised him in a burglarious search. Yesterday he went to the county jail and when "Jones" was brought before him he declared without hesitation that he was the assailant. The prisoner has denied all along that he was near Messerschmidt's home on the night in question and maintains that he came to Plainfield to visit a friend. He first said he lived in Williamsport, Pa., but later changed it to Philadelphia.

It is alleged by the police that Messerschmidt's identification of "Jones" was not accomplished according to their plans because of objection on the part of Warden Dodd, of the county jail. They intended that the suspect should be lined up with a dozen other prisoners but when Detective-Sergeant Flynn made the request, he was told that it would not be granted. He reported to Chief Kiely over the telephone and the latter appealed to the prosecutor but Dodd, it is said remained obdurate. He declared that "Jones" would be brought out alone and in no other way. Because of a court trial, the officials could not very well be reached and the warden was finally allowed to have his way.

The police maintain that it was very important that Messerschmidt's remembrance of his assailant should be put to a thorough test in order to be fair to "Jones" and the only way to do it was to place him in line with other men.

LOCAL SOCIETY GREETS LABRADOR MISSIONARY

A reception to Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell given by Mrs. Percy H Stewart at the Park Club yesterday afternoon was attended by nearly 400, a gathering that amply testified to the popularity of the doctor and to the interest that is being taken in his work in Labrador.

Dr. Grenfell spoke of the hospital and religious work among the fisherman on the northern coast. The Hungarian Band of New York, supplied the musical program and refreshments were served. Flowers and plants helped to carry out the color scheme in the dining room of red and green. Palms, ferns and evergreen in abundance were tastily arranged about the room.

Among those who assisted Mrs. Stewart in receiving were: Mrs. Walter Stewart, Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. Edward H. Ladd, Mrs. Frederick Mead, Miss Mead, Mrs. R. S. Rowland, Miss Rowland, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Miss Hegeman, Mrs. Thomas B. Newell, Mrs. Francis de L. Hyde, Mrs. William F. Taliaferro, Mrs. Eugene Moore, Miss Ida Stewart, Mrs. Alfred Streuli, Mrs. Frank D. Warren, Mrs. J. S. Zelie, Mrs. James R. Joy, Miss Elsie Goddard, Mrs. George Mellick, Mrs. Frederick Yates, Miss Amy Tapping, Miss Mosier, Mrs. Thomas Ewing, Jr., Mrs. Frederick Wallace, Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Mrs. J. D. Miller, Miss Huntington.

—The circulating department of the Plainfield public library will be closed on Christmas Day. The reading room will be open in the afternoon from 2 until 6.

—Don't forget a good comfortable rocking chair for father or mother; the best assortment at Shirley & Johnston's, Babcock building.  12 22 2

GRENFELL ON LABRADOR

His Hospital Ship Cruising Among the Ice Bergs Has Saved Many Lives.

RELIGIOUS AND MEDICAL AID.

Fisherman of Northern Coast Benefitted by the Missionary Invasion—Stereopticon Pictures Prove to be Instructive.

Dr. Winfred T. Grenfell, noted surgeon, master mariner and missionary, who is devoting his life's work to far off Labrador, delivered a remarkably interesting lecture at the City High School auditorium last night to a large audience. Stereopticon views furnished vivid impressions of the beautiful scenery and general characteristics of the country.

Dr. Grenfell's hospital ship cruises up and down the Labrador coast, rendering medical aid to the fishermen and their families. At a number of the ports he has established hospitals, in which are assistant physicians and nurses. In addition to caring for the sick, the sanitary conditions are looked after, as tuberculosis is the most prevalent disease they have to combat. The natives had been accustomed to closing their houses tight to keep out the cold, fuel being scarce, and breathing only foul air. The expense of the work is borne by contributions from all over the world and from all classes of people.

The fishermen were described as being of strong physical capacity, due to their life in the open air. The natives generally are sober and naturally religious, he said. The evidences of superhuman power were everywhere about them, and they therefore had a predisposition to believe in something else than one's self. They could see God's work for themselves.

There was no superfluous wealth and no established government. Dr. Grenfell is the acting magistrate but he had not had many cases to try. When he was away on a cruise the litigants must wait until he returned and in the meantime would often adjust the differences among themselves. There were no lawyers and the speaker declared that he could not see that the cases were any slower in being disposed of because of that fact. There were but few saloons, the liquor laws being adequate and easily administered. A small jail had been built at one place but was finally turned into a clubhouse and sometimes an overflow of patients from the hospital were treated in it.

Pictures of huge icebergs thrown on the screen brought applause from the audience. The effects of these massive cakes of ice floating into a harbor was said to be noticeable to a great degree by a change of temperature, and they were a remarkable addition to the aesthetic side of Labrador.

Codfish was named as the principal food supply, though salmon and halibut were plentiful. Sperm whales were sometimes captured and there were many fur bearing animals. A herd of 250 reindeer had been brought from Siberia for use on the sledges, there being too few dogs for the requirements. Lumber mills were being built and mat making, weaving and spinning taught. Seal fishing is also one of the principal industries.

Many interior and exterior views of the hospitals were shown, including patients on cots endowed by various persons living in their country and in England.

Students from Yale, Harvard, Oxford and other colleges often spent their vacation months on the coast and are giving valuable assistance in the work being carried on, especially in improving the sanitary conditions. When a typhoid or tuberculosis patient should be taken to the hospital, a fumigation of the home was made before the person returned to it.

Dr. Grenfell told of receiving the best Christmas present of his life. It came when he was about to take part in the distribution of presents, and was an injured boy who had been hurt by the explosion of powder. He was able to save the child's life and restore him to his parents and in so doing he believed he was carrying out the true spirit of Christmas, viz: doing something to make some on else happy. The boy had been brought by his father in a box on a sled drawn by dogs from a distant place, and the other children, seeing the strange outfit and not knowing its true nature, supposed it was Santa Claus and were greatly impressed.

The doctor said he had been called upon to do many strange things. Once a man asked him to make a proposition of marriage for him to a girl in another town, which he did and in so doing made two ene-

WANT PICTURE RETAINED

Movement Started to Have the Lincoln Portrait Kept on Five Cent Stamps.

MOST APPROPRIATE NEXT YEAR

Senator Ackerman Believes People Will Support the Plan—Celebration of Anniversary February 12.

Believing it to be a mistake to remove Lincoln's picture from the five cent postage stamp, State Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, as a member of the Royal Philatelic Society, has started a movement looking toward the retention of the Martyr-President's face on the stamp. Among his strongest arguments in favor of this is that it has been used on the stamp for forty years and its removal will take the issue back to the early 70's.

Another argument is that next year the country will celebrate the birth centennial of Lincoln and that it is an honor due to the memory of the great President to retain his picture on the stamp. He believes that the people of the whole country will join in favoring this idea and the Senator declares that the movement has only begun. Since the announcement that Mr. Ackerman was using his influence to have Lincoln's picture continued on the stamp, he has received many letters of encouragement.

As soon as Senator Ackerman learned of the change to be made by Postmaster-General Meyer, he communicated with President Roosevelt with a view to preventing the removal of Lincoln's picture. The President at once took the matter up with the Postmaster General, and the latter informed him that all the plates for the new issue were made and he regretted his inability to comply with the request at present. There is one hope, however, that possibly President-elect Taft may appoint a successor to Mr. Meyer and the desired end may be obtained in the near future.

CHILDREN IN BOROUGH CELEBRATE CHRISTMAS

The Somerset School kindergarten rooms were filled with the parents of the little pupils this morning when the Christmas exercises were held. This program was carried out:

Suit Against Local Man.

Honan H. Beals, of New York, a wholesale dealer in brass goods, has commenced suit in the Supreme Court to recover $896.50 from David S. Dunavan, of this city. He alleges that the money is due for materials furnished, while Dunavan has filed a plea denying that he is in the debt of Beals. The case will be heard before Supreme Court Justice Bergen and a jury at Elizabeth during the January term. Beals is represented by Judge William Newcorn.

ASKS $7,000 DAMAGES FROM TROLLEY COMPANY

Through his counsel, Craig A. Marsh, Willaim C. Chamberlain, the local painting contractor, has commenced suit in the New Jersey Supreme court to recover $7,000 damages from the Public Service Corporation for injuries received in an accident at Third and Richmond streets last June. The action is one of the most important coming from this city in the past year and will be heard before Judge Bergen at Elizabeth.

In his complaint, Chamberlain alleges that on June 27 he was driving along Richmond street, near East Third, with four of his workmen in his business wagon when a trolley car belonging to the defendant company came up behind and crashed into the vehicle. He claims that it was running at a high rate of speed, that the motorman was careless and that no warning gong was sounded. Continuing his complaint, Chamberlain states that the collison knocked himself and his four men out of the wagon and that as a result he has been premanently injured, that he suffers continued pain and that he has been unable to give proper attention to his business. His horse was injured, he says, and the paints and other material in the vehicle at the time were destroyed.

The amount of damages asked by Chamberlain is much higher than that ordinarily demanded in a case of this kind and the result will be awaited with interest. It is possible that other suits will be brought by the workmen who were in the wagon at the time the accident occurred.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF HARRY B. SUYDAM

Funeral services over Councilman Harry Bennett Suydam, the curb broker, who was killed by John C. Lumsden, a New York inventor, were held at the Church of the Heavenly Rest this afternoon. Rev. Charles Townsend, the rector, officiated. Interment was made later at Elmwood cemetery, New Brunswick.

Huge masses of floral tributes covered the casket and adorned the chancel of the pretty little edifice which was thronged by business associates, personal friends and local politicians who were there to pay their last respects to a man they admired and esteemed. The casket was placed at the foot of the chancel during the impressive service. The entire membership of the Common Council attended the service. Many of the dead man's fellow curb brokers were among the mourners and there was also a goodly representation from the Men's Club of the Heavenly Rest church, of which Mr. Suydam was recently elected president.

The pall bearers were Councilmen Herbert Buxton and Charles C. Randolph; George Hooley and William Miller, brokers, and Juan Babcock and William Arrowsmith.

TWO DRINKS MADE WURGAND TRY TO KILL AN INDIAN.

Arraigned in the city court, this morning, on a charge of intoxication, William Wurgand, an undersized German, made the startling assertion that only two drinks of whiskey had been responsible for his giving battle to a wooden Indian in front of a cigar store, yesterday afternoon. He was trying his best to knock the face off the stoical Big Chief when Patrolman Dobson happened along and saved the tobacco dealer the cost of a new sign.

"I was excited over the purchase of a Christmas tree" was the way William put it when Judge Runyon asked for an explanation; "I got all upset because I couldn't get what I wanted and I took two drinks of whiskey; just two and no more. I can't understand how I came to be scrappy."

The court tried to make him admit that he had gotten away with more than two hookers but he held fast to his original assertion. His Honor suspended sentence "because it was Christmas time" but warned William if two drinks induced him to go on the war path he had better climb on the water wagon for a long stay.

"The Hebrew Fugitive."

The feature film at the Bijou theatre this afternoon and tonight will be "The Hebrew Fugitive." It is an entirely new subject and tells a dramatic story. The films are changed at the Bijou every day and it is drawing large attendances every afternoon and night.

—If you want to spend twenty-five cents or $25.00, Shirley & Johnston, Babcock building, will give you the best values.  12 22 2

DEFENDS REFORM LAWS

State Senator Ackerman Says Party Cannot Afford to Take a Backward Step.

DIRECT PRIMARY MUST STAND.

Civil Service Also Should Not Be Tampered With—The Future of New Jersey.

Attacks made on recent political reform measures such as the direct primary, civil service and similar laws by Secretary of State Sam Dickinson and other "bosses" are depreciated by Governor J. F. Fort, State Senator E. R. Ackerman, former State Senator Everett Colby and other independent Republicans. The Union county solon, in particular, strongly disapproves of the onslaughts and had no hesitation today in explaining his views.

In an interview with a representative of The Daily Press, State Senator Ackerman said:

"New Jersey cannot afford to take any backward steps. The people regard the Republican party as being aggressively committed to maintain on the statute books the legislation of recent years for it is responsible for the passage of the laws. It is this record which has enabled the Republican party to hold the confidence of the people and to continue in power. To repeal such measures, as for instance the Direct Primary or the Civil Service laws, would at once place the Republican party on the defensive, producing a political situation both unwise and unwarranted, since the demands of the hour require that both laws should be upheld by the Republican party.

"The direct primary law, like any other new piece of legislation, may have shown some points which need strengthening but it has been clearly demonstrated by results that the people are interested and wish to take a direct and active part in the nomination of party candidates and the people will justly resent any interference with this right, but the question of the extension of the principle of direct primaries so as to abolish State conventions and platforms, and thereby destroying responsible party government presents a serious proposition which should be deeply and thoughtfully considered.

"The increasing power of the State and its municipalities urgently require that the Civil Service shall be based on merit and fitness, that an efficient and honest public employe shall be protected in the work for the people. The State must have its work done for it on the same plane as a well conducted business organization.

"I am looking forward to the coming session of the Legislature with confidence. A majority of the members have had previous experience and it appears reasonably certain that no backward steps will be taken on the questions arising from the progressive reforms which have marked and made distinguished the administrations in our State since the people have placed the Republican party in power. The people are watchful and the Republican party to retain the voters' confidence must be equally watchful to save money, reduce taxation and amply protect all the interests of the people.

"The work of a legislative body is always important and particularly so in a growing State like New Jersey, where vigilance must prevail so that legislative enactments shall not harm but shall encourage growth and development.

"Wise and safe laws to stimulate and protect labor and capital must continue in the interest of the great and varied manufacturers of the State—over 1,500 different lines of manufacture with its payroll of millions and its thousands of skilled operators.

"To keep within the boundaries of the State all these magnificent enterprises ought to be the ambition of every citizen and the policy which will produce that result lies along the pathway of caution. Those who may advocate radical legislation should be certain of its final effects on the peoples' business before proposing any great changes which might act to depress, decrease or destroy. The questions involved represent vital economic factors in the prosperity of the Commonwealth and everything must be done to maintain, to increase and to build.

"How will the work of the Legislature at Trenton affect the future?" queried the reporter. "The near future will see large additions to the population of the State and many of the questions arising from the deeds of greater communities will have to be carefully and rightly settled by legislation to thoroughly safeguard the interests and health of the people. This will not require

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

The Christmas cantata, "An Old Fashioned Santa Claus," will be given by the Sunday-school of the Presbyterian church Monday night. Presents will be distributed to the pupils of the school from an Xmas tree, and the needy of the community will be remembered as well, for, as has been the custom for several years, those who attend will carry with them some useful article, wearing apparel or food and these will be given to any, regardless of church affiliations, who are having difficulty in providing for the winter.

The elders of the Presbyterian church, who were elected last week, were ordained and installed Sunday morning, as follows: C. D. Chichester, for one year; George Cameron, F. R. Wyncoop and J. E. Tonzeau, for three years; F. W. Vail as deacon to fill F. Wilson's unexpired term.

The Junior Society of Christian Endeavor have elected these officers: President, Irma Baldwin; vice-president, Edith Wyckoff; secretary, Eldon Swackhamer; treasurer, Ruth Voorhees.

Mrs. Tunis Quick, of Readville, Conn., is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. Quick, near New Market.

C. W. Cunningham, of New York, visited over Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Chichester.

Miss Eva Higgins, of Watchung, spent Sunday with Mrs. George Hanford, of Lincoln.

William T. Lambert, of Geneva, N. Y., has been visiting John Sanderson.

Mrs. Abner Burdick is visiting friends in Roselle Park.

Mrs. Frank Ledden is visiting in Plainfield.

NORTH BRANCH.

It has leaked out that the annonymous giver of the new piano to the Methodist Episcopal church at Neshanic Station, for use in the lecture-room, was James B. Duke, the millionaire president of the American Tobacco Company, who has a country estate near Raritan. Mr. Duke has long been a liberal giver to the churches of Somerset county.

The Sunday-school connected with the Reformed church in North Branch will hold its Christmas entertainment this evening. A program of especial interest will be presented by the members and Rev. Charles E. Corwin, the pastor, will make a short address.

Samuel D. Opie and James H. Van Dyke, of this ((Branchburg) township, have been elected members of the board of directors of the Somerset County Board of Agriculture. Bedminster Township is represented by A. Layton Nevius and William C. Lane.

Miss Helen R. Hart, who is a student in Wellesley College, in Massachusetts is spending the holiday vacation with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. John Hart, at the Reformed church parsonage at Neshanic.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram DuMont and daughter will move from North Branch Depot about January 1 to the residence of the late Judge Bartine in Somerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Case, of South Branch, have been entertaining Freeholder and Mrs. J. S. Everett and son Marvin, of Neshanic, for a few days.

The public schools in Branchburg Township will close tomorrow afternoon for the holiday vacation.

Miss Cora Hoffman, of Somerville, has been visiting relatives in this place during the past week.

A. R. Holcombe, of Neshanic, is having his house treated to a fresh coat of paint this week.

Miss Ella Pearce, of Easton, Pa., is spending a week with relatives at Pluckemin.

James A. Lowe, of North Branch, was a guest yesterday of friends in Somerville.

BOUND BROOK AND VICINITY.

The Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school societies of the Congregational church of Bound Brook and the Reformed church of South Bound Brook will be held Thursday night.

Mrs. Mary Klein, of Morgan Station, is being entertained at the home of her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. James Klein, in Franklin street, South Bound Brook.

Mrs. Amzi Storr, of Belle Mead, is spending several days at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Koehler, at Elizabeth and High streets, South Bound Brook.

Frederick Bart, of Somerville, was entertained Sunday at the home of his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Miller, in Elizabeth street, South Bound Brook.

Miss Margaret Helfin, of New York, was lately a guest at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andre Helfin, in East Second street extension, Bound Brook.

Guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Whitenack, in Franklin street, South Bound Brook, are Miss Julia Altman and Charles Adair, of New York.

Mrs. J. Worden, of Price street, Elizabeth, was lately a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Verhoff, in Clinton street, South Bound Brook.

Mrs. A. R. Hoffman, of Main street, South Bound Brook, has returned from a visit at the home of her son, Daniel Hoffman, at Kingston.

A son lately arrived to gladden the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Cowins, at Prospect and Elizabeth streets, South Bound Brook.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Santa Claus paid his first visit of the year to town last night when the members of the Baptist Sunday-school and their friends enjoyed an old-fashioned Christmas celebration in the church. The weather could not dampen the ardor of the members and their friends in turning out and the night was an ideal one for Santa Claus to get to town without delay. An excellent program of recitations, music and carols, each class in the school taking an active part in furnishing the entertainment. Just at the close of the recitations and songs Santa Claus arrived and delighted the younger members with his strange tale of life in Santa Claus land, at the North Pole. From the size of the bundle of presents the old fellow brought with him, it did not look as though hard times had reached Santa's home, as there were presents of books, toys, etc., for all, as well as candy. The pastor, Rev. Franklin Mathiews, and Supt. Charles R. Vincent were both remembered, the pastor receiving a small package with a musical jingle, which was said to contain a neat sum of "necessary articles" something that is used by all. Supt. Vincent received a mysterious package, the contents of which will be a pleasant reminder in the years to come of the old fashioned Christmas celebration of the Baptist Sunday-school in the year 1908.

Funeral services of the late Mrs. Nancy Wilcox, who died at her home on Front street Monday night, were held from the Baptist church this afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Franklin Mathiews, pastor of the church, officiating. Interment was made in the family plot in the cemetery adjoining the church.

Notwithstanding the hard times, it looks as though every one would enjoy Christmas as usual, that is if the number of mysterious packages that are arriving in town are all Christmas presents.

The weekly prayer-meeting will be held in the Baptist church tonight, instead of Friday night, on account of the day being Christmas.

A number of young people from here and Plainfield will hold a masquerade dance in Excelsior Hall, Tuesday night, the 29th.

The ice on Marsh's lake is in fine condition for skating and the lovers of the sport are enjoying skating while it lasts.

Harry Flannery, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. George Johnston, has returned to his home in Elizabeth.

The public school closed today for the holiday vacation and will reopen again on Monday morning, Jan. 4, 1909.

Miss Jennie Hoyt, of Brooklyn, has been visiting friends in town.

Plainfield, N. J., December 23, 1908.

The Christmas season is a merry one, but just the same merriment comes high.

Will Governor Fort place that Reformatory plum in someone's Christmas stocking?

If you don't shovel the snow off your sidewalk, the city will and then you'll get a nice little bill.

Let's see, didn't some commission make a report on the excise situation. Pshaw, how short our memory is!

Senator Bourne wants the President's salary raised to $100,000, taking the stand that he is poorly paid, but then just figure up the damage that some of them do.

Richard Croker says that never again will he come to America. We could name a thousand more of his calibre, who would cause great rejoicing among their fellow-countrymen should they make such a resolution.

"Sam" Dickinson, who holds the office of secretary of state, much to the disgust and mortification of many public spirited Jerseymen, is leading a fight against the direct primary. A few more like him would assure the law for all time.

What Mr. Carnegie confesses about the cost of steel applies equally to all tariff fostered trust products. Mr. Taft has given his promise for the much needed relief from these burdens in response to public clamor and hence the day is not far distant when the consumer will not have to pay two or three times the honest price.

LARGE GATHERING AT LOUIS CLARK'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Louis Kossuth Clark, whose death occurred after a long illness, was held at his late home on Jackson avenue, Netherwood, yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. Morgan Ashley, rector of St. Stephen's church, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends, among the latter being delegations from the local Painters' Union, the Odd Fellows and the Red Men, of which he was a member.

During the service, two instrumental selections were rendered by George Staats, piano, and George Bennett, cornet. They were seated in a distant part of the house and the strains reached the attendants as if from afar off. There were numerous floral tributes.

Burial was made in the family plot at Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being selected from the three organizations to which Mr. Clark belonged.

a multiplication of enactments or a great mass of new laws but rather a determination to see that the future valuable public rights of the people are not thoughtlessly sacrificed or given away. The growth referred to will not be wholly confined to one section of the State—two counties, Atlantic and Bergen, have doubled in population since 1890 and among others, Camden, Essex, Hudson, Mercer, Passaic and Union have shown decided increase in numbers.

"The tunnels under the Hudson and Delaware rivers are removing the last obstacle to the thousands who appreciate New Jersey's attractiveness as a place of residence and who will leave the sun-restricted and narrow streets of the great city to establish homes on the beautiful hills or in the charming and unequalled suburbs of New Jersey. Where development work is in progress, as it is in New Jersey, it is always possible for the Legislature to help or retard progress by good or bad action as the case may be. Measures may be passed with the best of motives which in operation may be damaging to the public welfare, therefore it seems to me it will prove quite helpful if citizens will closely study the situation in the State regarding development and possibilities and communicate their ideas to their representatives for consideration so the progress may be safely encouraged as the result of intelligent co-operation. Among the many questions may be found those relating to the reservation of territory for public parks, protection to and guarantee of a pure and healthful water supply and the construction of adequate and permanent sewage systems. In fact, in many parts of the State there are great expanses of land now practically unoccupied which will soon be the scene of activity in preparation for the coming homeseekers. Looking at the situation from an overcrowded city standpoint, New Jersey in some respects is a new field and we must gain knowledge from the experience of our sister States and in facing the problems of the future avoid their mistakes, especially in the way of narrow streets and badly ventilated tenements. The health of the people must be considered of the first importance. While these questions are of a local aspect, still the Legislature has many of them to deal with in a general way. It is a fact that some of our cities are getting so large and with so many conflicting interests that it appears, at times, almost impossible to successfully meet their requirements without creating conditions not desired by other municipalities. That is to say, a remedy which might apply to Jersey City might not be suited to Elizabeth or Paterson. This is merely mentioned to illustrate some of the difficulties which legislators have to meet and solve. With these subjects as a whole, I think the Legislature has done some very excellent work.

"From what has been said it may easily be seen that legislators have many and varied propositions thrust upon them which call for the highest degree of skill and patience. It should be the aim to keep the standard very high in New Jersey so that the State may continue to increase its reputation for having a wise, cautious and business like government, that all citizens will be protected, that it is a safe place for the investment of capital and also desirable from a residential point of view. In fact our every move should be to build and to attract others to the State to either invest or to live among us. New Jersey has a great future and the intelligence of her citizenship demands wisdom from her legislators."

N. P. H. S. CLASSES DANCE AT XMAS ENTERTAINMENT.

The senior class of the North Plainfield High School gave its semi-annual reception to the juniors last night at Debele's hall. The principal feature was a parcel of roasts handed out by Santa Claus, who was impersonated by Leslie Powlison. He was assisted by LeRoy Vanderbeek. No one was slighted and some received extra large ones. Following this interesting part of the program dancing was indulged in until midnight. About 100 were present including the members of the faculty.

The decorations were evergreens enlivened by the school colors, maroon and black, and senior class colors, maroon and gold.

The "roasting" committee was composed of Miss Florence Fowler, chairman; Miss Anna Daley, Miss Ruth Day, LeRoy Vanderbeek and Leslie Powlison. Miss Francis La Porte was chairman of the entertainment committee and Miss Marion Major of the committee on decorations.

GRENFELL ON LABRADOR

mies, for the girl got mad and the man wouldn't believe he had ever asked her.

Dr. Grenfell is a graduate of Oxford University in England and before going to Labrador cruised along the coasts of Norway, Iceland, Ireland and Scotland in hospital ships. He leaves his work for a few months at intervals of three or four years to lecture, and is thus successful in raising funds for the carrying out of his plans. Many hardships are met with in the northern regions and several times he has narrowly escaped disaster. Only last spring he was adrift on an ice cake and was rescued just when all chance seemed to be gone.

Doctors Meet Grenfell.

One of the most important events arranged for the entertainment of the missionary-surgeon, Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, who spent a busy day in the city yesterday, was a luncheon given by the Plainfield Medical Association at the Park Club at 1 o'clock. In a half hour's speech he told of the medical work on shipboard, describing the primitive start and how hospitals had been built along the coast in addition to the relief ship. His address was entirely on the medical aspects of the work. About twenty physicians were present.

Miss Ida Ayres, of Somerville, has been visiting friends in Plainfield for a few days.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

At the regular meeting of the Middlesex Volunteer Fire Department last night, these officers were elected: Chief, William Hamilton; president, H. J. Manning; vice-president, H. W. Winders, Sr.; recording secretary, H. M. Winders, Jr.; treasurer, Robert Horn; stewart, Charles Randolph. Two bills were ordered paid, one to William Winger, and the other to McDonough Brothers.

The Sunswick Poultry Farm will have a fine lot of birds on exhibition in Madison Square Garden at the poultry show on December 29. They will send ten buff orpingtons, twelve black orpingtons and sixteen white orpingtons for open competition. There will also be exhibited three other pens of ten birds in each pen.

The report of the baseball committee showed that they had taken in $87 during the season, and the profits are estimated to be between $60 and $70. A check for $40 was received from the Board of Freeholders for the rental of their room on election day.

TREASURER ARNOLD PROMPTLY PAYS TAX.

City Treasurer William F. Arnold yesterday sent a check to the county collector for $113,451, representing Plainfield's share of the State school and county tax for 1908. This is about $8,000 more than that of last year.

When it is considered that the total tax charged up to Plainfield for 1908 was about $324,000 and that all but about $65,000 of this has been collected, some idea of the excellent work accomplished can be realized. Collector Townsend urges that those still owing poll tax to settle promptly and thus avoid the payment of interest.

County Chairman an Uncle.

Announcement is made of the birth of a son to Dr. and Mrs. Chas. M. Burdick, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., which occurred yesterday. Mrs. Burdick was formerly Miss Ernestine C. Smith, and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Smith, of Madison avenue, and a sister to County Chairman Frank H. Smith, also of this city. Dr. Burdick is on the staff of physicians at the New York State Hospital at Ogdensburg.

Circular Passers Fined.

Because they neglected to secure licenses to pass circulars in the borough, H. C. Larson and Charles L. Larson, of New Market, were arrested yesterday by Chief of Police George Weiss. At the hearing this morning before Recorder Dolliver they were each fined $5 on suspended sentence.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. J. S. Smith, of West Front street, is confined to her home with a severe attack of the grip.

Miss Minnie Smith, of Roselle, who has been visiting friends here for a few days, has returned home.

Carol C. Taylor, of Jackson avenue, the borough, has been detained at home by illness for the past week.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius G. Williams, of West Front street, is recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

Ward Birch, of Fairview avenue, has gone to Troy, N. Y., where he will remain for his health an indefinite time.

Mrs. Frederick S. Thompson, of West Front street, has recovered from a long and severe illness, which has detained her at home for many weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Stranzenbach, of South Plainfield, formerly of this city, are the parents of a young son who came to their home a few days ago.

Mrs. Charles Birch, of Fairview avenue, and her mother, Mrs. H. G. Tappen, of Troy, N. Y., who has been visiting her, have gone to Troy to attend the funeral of Hugh Tappen, of that city, a brother of Mrs. Birch.

Mrs. C. M. Maxlow, of Bensonhurst, L. I., is visiting her sister, Mrs. George Glover, of Watchung avenue. In her honor a dinner party was given a few nights ago and tomorrow night a musicale has been arranged by Mrs. Glover.

Bad Weather for Menders.

Two umbrella menders who drifted into the borough with the snowstorm last night, imbibed too freely of liquor and were arrested by Marshals Pope and Kiernan, charged with being drunk and disorderly. They gave their names as Charles Harris, of Jersey City, and James Drome, of Bayonne. They were each given a twenty days' suspended sentence this morning by Recorder Dolliver.

Don't Forget the Children.

Friends of the Children's Home are reminded not to forget the children at Christmas time. In years past liberal donations have been made of useful articles and the board of managers hope that this year will not prove an exception to the rule.

At German Reformed Church.

There will be Christmas services at the German Reformed church on Christmas Day at 4 o'clock. Some of the members will speak of the blessings of Christmas.

Donald Mortimer's Success.

Donald C. Mortimer, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mortimer, of West Seventh street, will visit his parents on Christmas. This will be his first visit home since last June, when immediately following his graduation from the Plainfield High School, Class '08, he took a responsible position with the New England Dairy Supply Company, with offices in Boston, Mass. Mr. Mortimer joined the Y. M. C. A. at South Boston and after a severe competition he made the position of centre on the first basketball team. Saturday night the Young Men's Club of Hope chapel will play a basketball game with the Holy Cross Club, and Mortimer will no doubt be seen playing his old position as centre on the Hope team.

St. Stephen's Church.

Christmas morning there will be services at 7:30 and 10 o'clock at the St. Stephen's church, with holy communion and sermon at the latter hour by the rector, Rev. Morgan Ashley. There will also be a full choral service at 10 o'clock. On Saturday, St. Stephen's Day, there will be holy communion at 7:30 and 10 o'clock in the morning. The Christmas festival of the Sunday-school will be held Monday night at 7:30 o'clock.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Sunday-school of the Congregational church will hold its Christmas entertainment Tuesday night, December 29.

According to the custom of previous years the local churches will observe the week of prayer the first week in January.

The Christmas service will be held at Grace M. E. church on Sunday, when the quartet choir will render special music morning and evening.

The prayer-meeting at the First Baptist church tonight will be appriate to the Christmastide season. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss will be in charge.

The Junior department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school will celebrate Christmas Wednesday afternoon, December 30, with a special program.

The Young People's Association of the First Baptist church is planning for an elaborate musical of a high character to be given sometime during January.

Christmas services will be held at the First Baptist church Sunday morning and in the afternoon the Sunday-school will have a special program, including the singing of carols and recitations. The chorus will sing Christmas anthems at the morning and afternoon services. There will be no evening service, as usual.

Faith chapel, which was recently constituted an independent Baptist body, will hold Christmas services on Sunday, morning and night. The change in the church government will become effective January 1. The name Immanuel, which was at first suggested, is to be changed, it having come to the knowledge of the members that there is another church in the city of that name.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The Klimit & Gazzolo Amusement Company, who have supplied the popular priced theatrical field with many melodramatic hits, have sent forth another winner called "The Rocky Mountain Express," which will have its initial presentation here at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. A large company interpret the numerous characters of the play, which is in four interesting, exciting acts and sixteen elaborately painted scenic surprises.

The "Ninety and Nine," from the pen of the playwright, Ramsay Morris, is the underlined attraction for the New Plainfield theatre Christmas afternoon and night, and while it is not a religious play as its title might suggest, it carries a moral story that teaches a strong temperance lesson, and founded as it is in a country town of the middle west, its pretty love story, with its intrigues, plots and counter plots, carries a wholesome air of the flower ladened prairies of Indiana, and coupled with the air of a master stage builder the show is, one of the real offerings of the season. The original New York production will be used.

Henry B. Harris in engaging a company to present on tour James

Scene from "The Traveling Salesman," at New Plainfield theatre, Saturday, matinee and night.

Forbes' laughable comedy success, "The Traveling Salesman," spared no effort to procure a collection of artists equally as noteworthy as the one now being seen in the sixth month of the run of this great success at the Gaiety Theatre, New York. Among those who will endeavor to create in this city the high esteem for "The Traveling Salesman" as obtained by it in New York is Diana Huneker, sister of James Huneker, the famous writer on musical topics. Miss Huneker was formerly editor of the Woman's Page of the Philadelphia Enquirer. She made her debut on the stage with Grace George in "Clothes," and has since played with Virginia Harned in "Anna Karenina," and was recently a member of Robert Edeson's company. "The Traveling Salesman" will be at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night.

The attraction at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night will be the beautiful four act drama "The Light of Tomorrow," by Malcolm Douglas, an all star cast, including such well known artists as Kathryn Brower, late leading woman in "The Great Divide," with Henry Miller; Milton Nobles, the well known impersonator of old men characters, and others of equal prominence. The production which has been staged under the personal direction of Mr. Holbrook Blinn now playing with Mrs. Fiske in "Salvation Nell" at the Hackett theatre, New York, is the assurance of a first class performance.

"Zig-Zag Journeys Around the World," is the sub-title of a delightful series of pictorial "Talks of Travel in Distant Lands," to be presented by Fred Niblo, the American humorist-tourist, at the New Plainfield theatre on four consecutive Wednesday nights. The premier offering will be "Africa, from the Cape to Cairo," December 30; "Egypt, from Cairo to Khartoum," January 6; "London, from Windsor Castle to White Chapel," January 20; "Russia, from the Black Sea to Siberia," January 27. Each of the series is graphically illustrated by hundreds of superbly colored, illuminated views, panoramic photographs and moving pictures, all taken "on the spot" by Mr. Niblo and his assistants during his globe-girdling tours to the uttermost ends of the earth.

George M. Cohan has given the stage an entirely new type of theatrical offering. It is rather well exemplified in "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," which Cohan and Harris will present at the New Plainfield theatre Thursday night, December 31, featuring Scott Welch in the role of "Kid Burns," and Frances Gordon as "Mary" together with the original cast and production. The proper term would seem to be a "musical drama," for it is a type of a piece which has a well defined plot whose unfolding not only holds the interest of the theatregoer, but reveals surprise after surprise. It is logical and convincing, and while the interpolated musical numbers scored a deserved success, one feels that they are not essential to the success of the piece. So entertaining and interesting is the story itself that one could well dispense with the musical part of the play.

George Broadhurst's latest, and many consider, greatest play, "An International Marriage," with Digby Bell at the head of the cast, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre New Year's afternoon and night. As in "The Man of the Hour" Mr. Broadhurst treated live political topics in tense but not heavy dramatic form, so his latest play deals satirically and not too seriously with one of the vital social problems of the day. The surface of a Broadhurst play ripples with laughter and light comedy reflections of current manners and characters, yet there is always a strong dramatic undercurrent that carries the audience steadily onward; to the logical and inevitable conclusion of the thesis he has selected.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Deputy Sheriff C. C. Cunningham, of Woodbury, is suffering greatly with eye trouble, and will undergo an operation, which is expected to restore his sight.

The body of William Beale, a foreman on the Panama Canal, who died at Colon, December 2, arrived at his former home in Woodstown yesterday and was buried in the Presbyterian cemetery at Daretown.

The Republican members of the Camden Council held a conference last night on the organization of the new body on January 1. It was decided to give Charles W. Wolverton a fourth term as president and to continue James E. Hewitt as the majority floor leader.

Thomas Crandall and Edward Dean, Atlantic City fishermen, declare that they shot at a big fur seal that came up close to their boat near Brigantine Sunday. The men had guns loaded with duck shot, but say they were unable to strike a vital spot in the seal, which dodged and went to sea.

During the heavy fog yesterday morning the ferryboats City of Reading and the Ocean City, of the Reading lines, collided off Kaighn's Point, Camden. The collision caused considerable excitement among the passengers, but no one was injured. The bow of the City of Reading was splintered and partly carried away.

If the man who dropped his hat in fleeing from a citizen who found him in a yard at 135 Ward street, Paterson, last night at 10 o'clock, will call at police headquarters he will have the headgear returned to him. But it is also likely that in the event of his calling he will be held as a suspicious character, so a visit from him is not expected.

Bravery of Mrs. Ola Downs saved the life of twelve-year-old Violet Crawford in her home at 500 Arctic avenue, Atlantic City, after the child's dress had caught fire from a gas stove. Mrs. Downs wrapped her apron around the youngster and smothered the fire. The woman and girl were severely burned before the fire could be extinguished.

Occupants of Atlantic City's city hall cells who awoke with nervous reminder of Sunday night's debauch offered to chip in and pay the fine of George Andrews, who had a live duck in his possession when arrested for drunkenness yesterday. The duck awoke with the day and quacked without ceasing until Andrews got a hearing and was released under fine.

Jessie Kantz, daughter of George Kantz, of 82 Vine street, Camden, was badly burned yesterday. The child was burned while stuffing paper into the kitchen fire, the sudden outburst of flames igniting her garments. She ran into the street screaming. James McHugh, a Pennsylvania Railroad brakeman, heard her, and taking off his coat, wrapped it around the girl. She was taken to the Cooper Hospital. Physicians said she had little chance to recover.

Frank Hem, of Vineland, awoke at 4 o'clock yesterday morning and staggered downstairs to doctor himself for nausea, not thinking for a moment that his illness was due to gas from the cellar furnace, in which a fire had been built yesterday for the first time this winter. At 5 o'clock Ham called his wife and son. When the boy awoke he immediately recognized the peril his mother was in. Rushing to her room he opened the windows and saved her life. For a time the physicians thought she might not recover.

ANNIE RUSSELL COMING IN "THE STRONGER SEX."

Klaw and Erlanger signed contracts yesterday with Wagenhals and Kemper by which Annie Russell in her New York and London comedy success, "The Stronger Sex," will soon visit this city. Immediately after her present New York engagement, Miss Russell will begin a four weeks' tour which will start at Norfolk and end at Memphis and will include only the most important Southern and Texas cities.

Miss Russell in "The Stronger Sex" is the reigning success of New York, where her engagement will last one hundred and fifty nights. The play ran a year in London. The original cast and production will be brought here and the entire tour will be by special train.

Grant Sent to the Reformatory.

Richard P. Grant, who was arrested in this city on a charge of false pretences, having represented himself as a piano tuner from the Steinway Piano Company, of New York, was sent to the Reformatory at Rahway on Monday, where he will serve a least one year. Considerable criticism has been heard regarding the disposition of this case, many believing that Grant should have been sent to State prison. It is believed that influence on the part of New York friends had something to do with the light sentence.

FURTHER SUGGESTIONS FOR XMAS OBSERVERS

As a final warning to householders who observe Christmas with decorations and trees, Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, issued the following suggestions from his office this morning:

"Use mineral wood for decorating instead of cotton; it is cheaper, shows up better and is absolutely fire-proof.

"Do not cover electric light bulbs with paper or any other material as it is very dangerous.

"Never allow the candles on a Christmas tree to be lighted unless a man is present. Always have a pail of water handy (an approved fire extinguisher is better) and place sheet tin or zinc under the trees to catch the drip or sparks.

"Every Santa Claus costume of flannel should be dipped in a solution to make it fire-proof.

"Keep in mind that a gas flame will set fire to paper, muslin and similar material twenty or thirty inches away and be governed accordingly."

ARCHITECTS NUMBER 843 IN NEW JERSEY TODAY

New Jersey is fairly well supplied with practising architects, as is shown in the annual report of the State Board of Architects which has been submitted to Governor Fort.

There are 843 architects registered in New Jersey, of which number 442 were admitted under the original act, providing that all persons who were engaged in this business on March 24, 1902, should be admitted to practice without examination. Since the last report twenty-eight have been admitted under the provision of the law that members of the American Institute of Architects shall be admitted without examination. Two certificates have been issued to persons holding certificates in like institutions in other States.

There are now 128 members of the American Institute of Architects practising under New Jersey regulations within the State. One hundred and forty-four certificates have been issued to persons who have passed the examinations of the State Board.

In the last report of the board attention was called to degeneration of practice of the business of architects. Since this profession has been under State control, the board says, the standard has been materially raised.

MINSTREL SHOW GIVEN AT BUSINESS COLLEGE.

More than five hundred people attended the Christmas entertainment given at the Plainfield Business College, last night, which was provided by the Franklin Ministrel troupe, assisted by the "Musical Stewarts," who have just returned from a trip around the vaudeville circuit with a number of new stunts in the line of making music by means of tin cans, twirling steel discs, ringing bells, etc.

The ministrel troupe was on the boards during part first of the program and the numerous local hits were greatly appreciated. The individual singing and chorus work were features. The end-men, William J. Firstbrook, George D. Wilson, George Rittenhouse and George Schmidt, were up-to-date in their jokes and the songs were received with hearty applause. "Fuzzy" Firstbrook in his "Don't Take Me Home" song was encored a number of times.

At the close of the entertainment Prof. Herr spoke briefly on the work accomplished during the present year, plans for future growth and concluded by expressing his pleasure over such a large audience and wishing all a merry Christmas and happy New Year. After the entertainment there was an informal social.

A Large Funeral.

The funeral of Felice DeMizio, who was killed at the Hetfield stone quarry Monday, was held this morning and was one of the largest seen at Scotch Plains in years. There were twenty-two coaches and numerous other vehicles in the cortege that proceeded to St. Mary's church, Stony Hill, where mass was said by Rev. Father Schwartz. Burial was made in the Stony Hill cemetery.

Postmaster's Rib Cracked.

Postmaster E. H. Bird while playing a game of basketball at the Y. M. C. A. two weeks ago was accidentally thumped in the side by one of the players and one of his ribs was cracked. He did not discover the fact until Monday and he then had the bones set by his physician. The injury has not detained him from his office.

Infant Is Buried.

The funeral of Douglas E. Chapman, the two-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Bert E. Chapman, took place today at 3 o'clock, Rev. J. O. McKelvey officiating. Interment was made at North Plainfield cemetery.

Clarence Hand, of Fairview avenue, of Cornell University, is home for the holiday season.

Ten Years for Murder.

Ignazio Penrone, charged with murdering Luigi Melessare in the borough of Kenilworth on the night of December 31 last, was this morning sentenced by Justice Bergen to ten years at hard labor in State prison, following a verdict of murder in the second degree with recommendations for mercy.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Christmas entertainment will be held at Warren chapel, Tuesday afternoon for the small children and in the evening for the older members of the school and chapel. Admission will be by ticket only. The entertainment both afternoon and evening will consist of moving pictures.

The Christmas entertainment at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, of which Rev. J. T. Diggs is the pastor, will be held Friday night, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. In addition to a program of recitations and songs by the children, Mr. Diggs will give an illustrated lecture, "An Evening in the Old World," consisting of fine steel and highly colored pictures of the Old and New Testaments. The children will receive gifts from a Christmas tree.

Romance Marred by Bigamy Charge.

Walter Smalley, of Westfield, who it is said, has a wife and two children and Miss Catherine Eustace, aged 17 years, also of Westfield, were arrested in Newark, yesterday, the former on a charge of bigamy, and the latter as a witness. Mrs. Smalley is being held at police headquarters, Newark, and will be called when the charge is pressed against Smalley. It is said that the couple was married by Justice of the Peace Muranox in Newark on November 21. Their arrest was made on complaint of the Westfield police. Smalley will have to face a charge of bigamy.

Ducks—Long Island Products—They truly look as if they were stuffed for the occasion.

Geese—Well to be a Christmas Goose ought to be honor enough without further description.

And so it goes; we could continue indefinitely telling of Jersey Fowls, Broilers, etc., in endless variety, but enough.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

The colonel admitted that he shared Haley's opinion. He questioned the man minutely about Mercer's conduct on the train. It was absolutely commonplace. If he had any connection (as the colonel had suspected) with the bandits, he made no sign. He sent no telegrams; he wrote no letters; he made no acquaintances, smoking his solitary cigar over a newspaper. Indeed, absolutely the only matter of note (if that were one) was that he read so many newspapers—buying every different journal vended. At San Francisco he got into a cab and Haley heard him give the order: "To the St. Francis." Having his wife and child with him, the sergeant couldn't follow; but he went around to the St. Francis later, and inquired for Mr. Mercer, for whom he had a letter (as was indeed the case—the colonel having provided him with one), but no such name appeared on the register. Invited to leave the letter to await the gentleman's arrival, Haley said that he was instructed to give it to the gentleman himself; therefore, he took it away with him. He had carried it to all the other hotels or boarding places in San Francisco which he could find, aided greatly thereto by a friend of his, formerly in "the old —th," a sergeant, now stationed at the Presidio. Thanks to him, Haley could say definitely that Mercer was not at any of the hotels or more prominent boarding houses in the city, at least under his own name.

"And you haven't seen him since he got into the cab at the station?" the colonel summed up.

Haley's reply was unexpected: "Yes, sor, I seen him this day, in the morning, in this same hotel."

"Where?"

"Drinking coffee at a table in th' coort. He wint out, havin' paid the man, not a-signin' an' he guv the waiter enough to make him say 'Thank ye, sor,' but not enough to make him smile and stay round to pull aff the chair. I follied him to the dure, but he got into an autymobile—"

"Get the number?"

"Yis, sor. Number—here 'tis, sor, I wrote it down to make sure." He passed over to the colonel an old envelope on which was written a number.

*"M. 20139," read the colonel, carefully noting down the number in his own memorandum book. And he reflected: "That is a Massachusetts number—humph!"

Haley's information ended there. He heard of Archie's disappearance with his usual stolid mien, but his hands slowly clenched. The colonel continued:

"You are to find out, if you can, by scraping acquaintance with the car-

"Yes," he Said, Very Quietly, "It is Blood."

riage men, if that auto—you have written a description, I see, as well as the number—find out if that auto left this hotel this afternoon between six and seven o'clock. Find out who were in it. Find out where it is kept and who owns it. Get H. Birdsall, Merchants' Exchange building, to send a man to help you. Wait, I've a card ready for you to give him from me; he has sent me men before. Report by telephone as soon as you know anything. If I'm not here, speak Spanish and have them write it down. Be back here to-night by ten, if you can, yourself."

Haley dismissed, and his own appetite for dinner effectually dispelled by his report, Winter joined his aunt. Should he tell her his suspicions and their ground? Wasn't he morally obliged, now, to tell her? She was coguardian with him of the boy, who, he had no doubt, had been spirited away by Mercer and his accomplice; and hadn't she a right to any information on the matter in his possession?

Reluctantly he admitted that she did have such a right; and, he admitted further, being a man who never cheated at solitaire, that his object in keeping the talk of the two men from her had not been so much the desire to guard her nerves (which he knew perfectly well were of a robuster fiber than those of most women 20 or 40 years younger than she); no, he admitted it grimly, he had not so much spared his aunt as Janet Smith; he could not bear to direct suspicion toward her. But how could he keep silent longer? Kicking this question about in his mind, he spoiled the flavor of his after-dinner cigar, although his aunt graciously bade him smoke it in her parlor.

And still Miss Smith had not returned; really, it was only fair to her to have her present when he told his story to his aunt; no, he was not grabbing at any excuse for delay; if he could watch that girl's face while he told his story he would—well, he would have his mind settled one way or another.

Here the telephone bell rang; the manager informed Col. Winter that Mrs. Wigglesworth had returned.

"Wigglesworth? What an extraordinary name!" cried Millicent when the colonel shared his information.

"Good old New England name; I know some extremely nice Wigglesworths in Boston," Mrs. Winter amended with a touch of hauteur; and, at this moment, there came a knock at the door.

*Of course, no allusions are made to any real M. 20139.

There is all the difference in the world between knocks; a knock as often as not conveys a most unintentional hint in regard to the character of the one behind the knuckles; and often, also, the mood of the knocker is reflected in the sound which he makes. Were there truth in this, one would judge that the person who knocked at this moment must be a woman, for the knock was not loud, but almost timidly gentle; one might even guess that she was agitated, for the tapping was in a hurried, uneven measure.

"I believe it is Mrs. Wigglesworth herself," declared Aunt Rebecca. "Bertie, I'm going into the other room; she will talk more freely to you. She would want to spare my nerves. That is the nuisance of being old. Now open the door."

She was half-way across the threshold before she finished, and the colonel's fingers on the doorknob waited only for the closing of her door to turn to admit the lady in waiting.

A lady she was beyond doubt, and any one who had traveled would have been sure that she was a lady from Massachusetts. She wore that little close bonnet which certain elderly Boston gentlewomen can neither be driven nor allured to abandon; her rich and quiet black silken gown might have been made any year within the last five, and her furs would have graced a princess. She had beautiful gray hair and a soft complexion and wore glasses. Equally evident to the observer was the fact of her suppressed agitation.

She waved aside the colonel's proffered chair, introducing herself in a musical, almost tremulous voice with the crisp enunciation of her section of the country. "I am Mrs. Wigglesworth; I understand, Col. Winter—you?—y-yes, no, thank you, I will not sit. I—I understand Mrs. Winter—ah, your aunt, is an elderly woman."

"This is my sister-in-law, Mrs. Melville Winter," explained the colonel. "My aunt is elderly in years, but in nothing else."

Mrs. Wigglesworth smiled a faint smile; the colonel could see a tremble of the hand that was unconsciously drawing her fur collar more tightly about her throat. "How very nice—yes, to be sure," she faltered. "But you will understand that I did not wish to alarm her. I heard that you wanted to speak to me, and that the little boy was lost."

"Or stolen," Mrs. Melville said, crisply.

The colonel, in a few words, displayed the situation. He had prevailed upon his visitor to sit down, and while he spoke he noticed that her hands held each other tightly, although she appeared perfectly composed and did not interrupt. She answered his questions directly and quietly. She had been away taking tea with a friend; she had remained to dine. Her maid had gone out earlier to spend the day and night with a sister in the city; so the room was empty between six and seven o'clock.

"The chambermaid wasn't there, then?"

"I don't think so. She usually does the room and brings the towels for the bath in the morning. But I asked her, to make sure, and she says that she was not there since morning. She seems a good girl; I think she didn't—but I have found something. At least I am af—I may have found something. I thought I might see Mrs. Winter's niece about it"—she glanced toward Millicent, who said, "Certainly," at a venture; and looked frightened.

"And you found—?" said the colonel.

"Only this. I went to my rooms, turned on the light and was taking off my gloves before I untied my bonnet. One of my rings fell on the floor. It went under a rug, and I at once remarked that it was a different place for the rug to the one where it had been before. Before, it was in front of the dresser, a very natural place, but now it is on the carpet to one side, a place where there seemed no reason for its presence. These details seem trivial, but—"

"I can see they are not," said the colonel. "Pray proceed, madam. The ring had rolled under the rug!"

Mrs. Wigglesworth gave him a grateful nod.

"Yes, it had. And when I removed the rug I saw it; but as I bent to pick it up I saw something else. In one place there was a stain, as large as the palm of my hand, a little pool of—it looks like blood."

Mrs. Mellville uttered an exclamation of horror.

The colonel's face stiffened; but there was no change in his polite attention.

"May we be permitted to see this—ah, stain?" said he.

The three stepped through the corridor to the outside door, and went into the chamber. The rug was flung to one side, and there on the gray velvet nap of the carpet was an irregular, sprawling stain about which were spattered other stains, some crimson, some almost black.

Millicent recoiled, shuddering. The colonel knelt down and examined the stains. "Yes," he said, very quietly, "you are right, it is blood."

There was a tap on the door, which was opened immediately without waiting for a permission. Millicent, rigid with fright, could only stare helplessly at the erect figure, the composed, pale face and the brilliant, imperious eyes of her aunt.

"What did you say, Bertie?" said Rebecca Winter. "I think I have a right to the whole truth."

CHAPTER VI.

The Voice in the Telephone.

"Well, Bertie?" Mrs. Winter had gone back to her parlor in the most docile manner in the world. Her submission struck Rupert on the heart; it was as if she were stunned, he felt.

He was sitting opposite her, his slender, rather short figure looking shrunken in the huge, ugly upholstered easy chair; he kept an almost constrained attitude of military erectness, of which he was conscious, himself; and at which he smiled forlornly, recalling the same pose in Haley whenever the sergeant was disconcerted.

"But, first," pursued his aunt, "who was that red-headed bellboy with whom you exchanged signals in the hall?"

The colonel suppressed a whistle. "Aunt Becky, you're a wonder! Did you notice? And he simply shut the palm of his hand! Why, it's this way: I was convinced that Archie must be on the premises; he couldn't get off. So I telephoned a detective that I know here, a private agency, not the police, to send me a sure man to watch. He is made up as a bellboy (with the hotel manager's consent, of course); either I, or Millicent, or that boy has kept an eye on the Keatcham doors and the next room ever since I found Archie was gone. No one has gone out with our seeing him. If any suspicious person goes out, we have it arranged to detain him long enough for me to get a good look. I can tell you exactly who left the room."

"It is you who are the wonder, Bertie," said Aunt Rebecca, a little wearily, but smiling. "Who has gone out?"

"At seven Mr. Keatcham's secretary went down to the office and ordered dinner, very carefully. I didn't see him, but my sleuth did. He had the secretary and the valet of the Keatcham party pointed out to him; he saw them. They had one visitor, young Arnold, the Arnold's son—"

"The one who has all the orange groves and railways? Yes, I knew his father."

"That one; he only came a few moments since. Mr. Keatcham and his secretary dined together, and Keatcham's own man waited on them; but the waiter for this floor brought up the dishes. At nine the dishes were brought out and my man helped Keatcham's valet to pile them a little farther down the corridor in the hall."

These items the colonel was reading out of his little red book.

"You have put all that down. Do you think it means anything?"

"I have put everything down. One can't weed until there is a crop of information, you know."

"True," murmured Aunt Rebecca, nodding her head, thoughtfully. "Well, did anything else happen?"

"The secretary posted a lot of letters in the shute. They are all smoking now. Yes—" he was on his feet and at the door in almost a single motion. There had been just the slightest tattoo on the panel. When the door was opened the colonel could hear the rattle of the elevator. He was too late to catch it, but he could see the inmates. Three gentlemen stood in the car. One was Keatcham, the other two had their backs to Winter. One seemed to be supporting Keatcham, who looked pale. He saw the colonel and darted at him a single glance in which was something like poignant appeal; what, it was too brief for the receiver to decide, for in the space of an eye blink a shoulder of the other man intervened, and simultaneously the elevator car began to sink.

There was need to decide instantly who should follow, who stay on guard. Rupert bade the boy go down by the stairs, while, with a kind of bulldog instinct, he clung to the rooms. The lad was to fetch the manager and the keys of the Keatcham suite.

Meanwhile Rupert paced back and forth before the closed doors, whence there penetrated the rustle of packing and a murmur of voices. Presently Keatcham's valet opened the farther door. He spoke to some one inside. "Yes, sir," he said, "the porter hought to be 'ere now."

The porter was there; at least he was coming down the corridor which led to the elevator, trundling his truck before him. He entered the rooms and busied himself about the luggage.

Doggedly the colonel stuck to his guard until the valet and another man, a clean-shaven, fresh-faced young man whom the watcher had never seen before, came out of the room. The valet superintended the taking of two trunks, accepting tickets and checks from the porter, with a thoroughly Anglican suspicion and thoroughness of inspection, while the young man stood tapping his immaculate trousers-leg with the stick of his admirably slender umbrella.

"It's all right, Colvin," he broke in, impatiently; "three tickets to Los Angeles, drawing room, one lower berth, one section, checks for two trunks; come on!"

Very methodically the man called Colvin stowed away his green and red slips, first in an envelope, then in his pocket-book, finally buttoning an inside pocket over all. He was the image of a rather stupid, conscientious English serving creature. Carefully he counted out a liberal, but not lavish tip for the porter, and watched that functionary depart. Last of all, he locked the door.

With extreme courtesy of manner Winter approached the young man.

"Pardon me," said he. "I am Col. Winter; my aunt, Mrs. Winter, has the rooms near yours, and she finds that she needs another room or two. Are you leaving yours?"

"These are Mr. Keatcham's rooms, not mine," the young man responded, politely. "He is leaving them."

"When you give up your keys, would you mind asking the clerk to send them up to me?" pursued the colonel. "Room 327."

"Certainly," replied the young man, "or would you like to look at them a moment now?"

"Why—if it wouldn't detain you," hesitated Winter; he was hardly prepared for the offer of admittance.

"Get the elevator and hold it a minute, Colvin," said the young man, and he instantly fitted the key to the door, which he flung open.

"Excuse me," said he, as they stood in the room, "but aren't you the Col. Winter who held that mountain pass to let the other fellows get off, after your ammunition was exhausted?"

"I seem to recall some such episode, only it sounds rather gaudy the way you put it."

"I read about you in the papers; you swam a river with Funston; did all kinds of stunts—"

"Or the newspaper reporter did. You don't happen to know anything about the price of these rooms, I suppose?"

The young man did not know, but he showed the colonel through all the rooms with vast civility. He seemed quite indifferent to the colonel's interest in closets, baths and wardrobes; he only wanted to talk about the Philippines.

The colonel, who always shied like a mettled horse from the flutter of his own laurels, grew red with discomfort and rattled the door knobs.

"There the suite ends," said the young man.

"Oh, we don't want it all, only a room or two," Col. Winter demurred. "Any one of these rooms would do. Well, I will not detain you. The elevator boy will be tired, and Mr. Keatcham will grow impatient."

"Not at all; he will have gone. I—I'm so very glad to have met you, Colonel—"

In this manner, with mutual civilities, they parted, the young man escorting the colonel to his own door, which the latter was forced to enter by the sheer demands of the situation.

But hardly had the door closed than he popped out again. The young man was swinging round the corner next the elevator.

"Is he an innocent bystander or what?" puzzled the soldier. He resumed his march up and down the corridor. The next room to the Keatcham suite was evidently held by an agent of the Fireless Cooking Stove, since one of his samples had strayed into the hall and was mutely proclaiming its own exceeding worth, in very black letters on a very white placard.

"If the young man and the valet are straight goods, the key will come up reasonably soon from the office," thought the watcher.

Sure enough, the keys, in the hands of Winter's own spy, appeared before he had waited three minutes. He reported that the old gentleman got into a cab with his secretary and the valet, and the other gentlemen took another cab. The secretary paid the bill. Had he gone sooner than expected? No; he had engaged the rooms until Thursday night; this was Thursday night.

The colonel asked about the next room, which was directly on the cross corridor leading to the elevator. The detective had been instructed to watch it. How long had the Fireless Cooking Stove man had it? There was no meat for suspicion in the answer. The stove man had come the day before the Keatcham party. He was a perfectly commonplace, good-looking young man, representing the Peerless Fireless Cooking Stove with much picturesque eloquence; he had sold a lot of stoves to people in the hotel, and he tried without much success to tackle "old Keatcham;" he had attacked even the sleuth himself. "He gave me a mighty good cigar, too," chuckled the red-headed one.

"Hmn, you got it now?"

"Only the memory," the boy grinned.

"You ought to have kept it, Birdsall would tell you; you are watching every one in these rooms. Did it have a necktie? And did you throw that away?"

"No, sir, I kept that; after I got to smoking, I just thought I'd keep it."

When he took the tiny scrap of paper from his pocket-book the colonel eyed it grimly. "'A de Villar y Villar,'" he read, with a slight ironic inflection. "Decidedly our young Fireless Stove promoter smokes good cigars!"

"Maybe Mr. Keatcham gave it to him. He was in there."

"Was he? Oh, yes, trying to sell his stove—but not succeeding?"

CREDITOR HAD BEEN WORRIED.

Over-Sensitive About a Debtor Who Took His Time to Pay Up.

"Well, thank goodness, there's one man I can meet now without feeling uncomfortable," the man said.

"How's that?" asked his companion. "Did you owe him money and settle up?"

"Just the other way around," said the first speaker. "He owed me a small sum of money for more than a year.

"I met him a great deal, and several times he dunned himself about the money, but he never paid. After awhile I got so I didn't like to meet him, because I felt all the time he was going to say to himself: 'I owe this man money and he knows I ought to pay and still he doesn't like to remind me.'

"Absolutely it got so I would go blocks out of the way to avoid him. I felt that he felt he never could mention spending money for anything when he was in my presence without my feeling that that money ought to have gone to pay the debt he owed me.

"Maybe he didn't feel that way about it at all, but I felt that way, and now I'm glad he has paid up, so that in this detail at least I am comfortable in my mind."

SNAKE SCARED THE EMPLOYES.

Poisonous Reptile Among the Archives of Portugal's Peers.

Some time ago it was reported in the press that while workmen were searching for certain documents in the archives of the house of peers several snakes appeared from among the dust-covered volumes.

The panic-stricken employes immediately fled, and absolutely refused to return to such a dangerous occupation.

The presence of the snakes has never been accounted for.

Recently, however, all the documents were carted to the underground archives of the ministry of the interior.

Recently it was reported in the press that while the documents were being sorted out a flat-headed snake suddenly wriggled out, biting the employe on the lip. It then disappeared among the piles of documents. Half an hour later the man died in terrible agony. The body turned black and was horribly swollen.

Notwithstanding the government officials' entreaties, all the employes refuse to descend to the archives.

Busyness the Refuge of Small Souls.

Extreme busyness is a symptom of deficient vitality; while a faculty for idleness implies a catholic appetite and a strong sense of personal identity. There are dead-alive, hackneyed people about, who are scarcely conscious of living except in the exercise of some conventional occupation. Bring these fellows into the country or set them aboard ship, and you will see how they pine for their desk or their study. They cannot be idle. Their nature is not generous enough, and they pass in a sort of coma those hours which are not dedicated to furious molting in the gold mill. When they do not require to go to the office, when they are not hungry and have no mind to drink, the whole breathing world is a blank to them. This does not appear to me as being success in life.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Fled from Hoodoo Cat.

Deserted by her crew at the very moment of sailing for the north, the fishing schooner Edrie, due to leave at two o'clock Friday afternoon, still lies at her moorings and all because of a cross-eyed black cat. Friday the crew was making final arrangements to sail, when a yell resounded out of the hold. A sailor burst through the hatch, scrambled over the side and made off before anyone could stop him.

While the others were gazing after his retreating form a yowl came from the darkness below and a black cat appeared upon the deck. One look at the stub-tailed, green-eyed feline was enough. Every man of the crew picked up his bundle and silently departed, nor can the captain by any means lure any of them back on board.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Melba and the Sick Child.

Mme. Melba once told a pretty story about a sick child who lived on the same floor that she did at the Savoy hotel. Mme. Melba used to practice every now and then, though it may be remarked parenthetically that great singers do not practice half as much as small ones, and the little one lying in her cot used to listen to the Australian nightingale with the liveliest pleasure. When the little girl got well, and was running about the corridors, she saw Mme. Melba entering the room whence had come the music. The child rushed up to Mme. Melba and said: "O, please take me in and let me see the bird that sings so prettily." — Beau Broadway, in New York Telegraph.

Seeing the Show.

Sam Shubert used to tell this: "A rustic came to Buffalo and bought a ticket for the theater. Through blundering about the doors he found himself in the adjoining billiard saloon. Seeing a novel performance going on, with a big crowd witnessing the same, he settled himself in a chair and patiently watched the play for an hour or two. Having satiated his appetite he left the room, and, going out on the street, was asked if the show was over. 'Over? Oh, no,' he replied; 'it's a-goin' on yet. They are knockin' away like all the world in thar.'"

HINDU PROVERBS.

Father Tignous, a missionary from India who is trying to recover his health in France, has sent the translation of several Hindu proverbs which will be found interesting. He has prepared these for the Field Afar:

The plant that could not be bent to the grave.

The plant that could not be bent when it was a twig will not bend when it is a branch.

A stone will wear away by the continual creeping of ants over it.

To acquire science in later years is like dyeing a dirty cloth.

There is no man who knows everything; there is none who knows nothing.

Anybody will say: I have no memory; nobody will say: I have no sense.

None is ruined by telling the truth; no one prospers by telling lies.

The flood which has passed the dam will not come back even if you cry.

Do not put your foot in the river without knowing its depth.

Even when a wound is healed a scar will remain.

If a neighbor's roof catches fire one's own is in danger.

When the cattle is on one shore, the opposite looks green, when it is on the opposite shore, the other side looks green.

A slip of the tongue is worse than a slip of the foot.

Do not believe all you hear; do not say all you believe.

QUAKER MUSINGS.

Most of us can find fault with our eyes shut.

A man can play the races without indulging in horse play.

When a woman is 71 would you say that she is just turned 17?

When fortune smiles on a man he can afford to laugh and grow fat.

Nine men are ready to believe a lie where one will believe the truth.

It is doubtful if the sailor knows as much about sales as the auctioneer.

The glove manufacturer feels that most people should be taken in hand.

The bill collector isn't the only man who feels that the world owes him a living.

The man who is satisfied to rest on his laurels is generally afflicted with insomnia.

Many a man who puts his best foot forward merely succeeds in stubbing his toe.

Sillicus—"When is a bore not a bore?" Cynicus—"When he talks to us about ourselves."

No Maude, dear; just because a girl bleaches her hair it doesn't necessarily follow that she is light on her feet.

"Faint heart ne'er won fair lady," quoted the wise guy. "And thereby probably kept out of a lot of trouble," added the simple mug.—Philadelphia Record.

THE TEN MISTAKES OF LIFE.

There are certainly more than ten mistakes which erring mortals make; but the following are sufficiently important to merit thoughtful consideration:

To refuse to yield in immaterial matters.

To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.

To look for perfection in our own actions.

To expect uniformity of opinion in this world.

To measure the enjoyment of others by our own.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To worry ourselves and others with what cannot be remedied.

To set up our own standard of right and wrong, and judge people accordingly.

To refuse to alleviate, so far as lies in our power, all that which needs alleviation.

To refuse to make allowance for the infirmities of others.—N. Y. Weekly.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY.

History is full of "also rans."

Even the bigamist may discover that a wife in the hand is worth two in the divorce court.

A man used to be satisfied to paddle his own canoe, but now nothing less than an ocean-going yacht satisfies him.

A HARD STRUGGLE.

Many a Plainfield Citizen Finds the Struggle Hard.

With a back constantly aching,
With distressing disorders,
Daily existence is but a struggle
No need to keep it up.
Doan's Kidney Pills will cure you.

Plainfield people endorse this claim:

Robert Love, 44 Duer street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For eight or nine years I was a victim of kidney complaint. Every cold I contracted settled in my kidneys and caused my back to ache severely. Any heavy lifting or much standing on my feet gave me additional pain. In the morning upon arising, my back was in a bad condition and the lameness did not disappear until I had exercised for some time. I doctored and used several so called kidney cures, but this was only a waste of money. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended in the newspapers, I procured a box at Randolph's Pharmacy and began their use. When I had taken about half the contents of the box, by condition was greatly improved and before long the pain left me entirely. I will always speak a good word for Doan's Kidney Pills when the opportunity offers."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

THE BUSINESS MAN AND THE MAID.

A Maid once loved a Business Man,
Full young he was and fair.
He had big innocent blue eyes,
And wavy golden hair.
But so demure and shy was he,
No wile, however sweet,
The Maiden in her love designed,
Could bring him to her feet.

But now it was the glad leap year,
When privilege was hers
To ask his hand, as each maid may
Of him she most prefers.
She took him for a trolley ride
Adown to Bay Shore park,
And popped the question in a place
Romantically dark.

He hung his head quite bashfully
And asked for time to think,
When he would soon, as 'twas his wont,
Reply by pen and ink.
But when his missive she received,
She could not understand,
It was, "Dear Miss:—
I'll let you have Refusal of my hand."
—Baltimore American.

SAVING HIS CONSCIENCE.

Prospective Buyer—Place entirely free from mosquitoes?

Hiram Wayback (thoughtfully)—Yes, if you come around at the right time of year.

Sensible Heiress.

"I'll not wed the count," she said
"His bride I'll never me.
His castles fair are in the air,
I'd suffer from insomnia there—
So it's America for me."
—Chicago Daily News.

Written in Good Faith.

"I thought you wrote me there were no mosquitoes at your place," said the visitor.

"Well," answered Farmer Corntossel, "I thought I was tellin' you correct. I didn't believe they was any mosquitoes here. When I wrote that I was up to Si Simlin's place and I thought all the mosquitoes in the world must be in his front yard."—Washington Star.

Willing to Wait.

Miss De Rich—Now, my love, you must ask pa.

Mr. De Poore—Oh, I'm in no hurry. Let's wait.

"I do not object to a long engagement, if it is your wish, but how long?"

"Um—er—how old is your pa?"—New York Weekly.

Sure.

"Pa!"

"Well?"

"The angels live up in th' sky, don't they?"

"Yes, I suppose so."

"They're star boarders, ain't they, pa?"—Cleveland Leader.

A Nice Time.

Miss Tiptop—Did you enjoy yourself at the opera last evening?

Miss Westend—Oh, awfully. Mr. Blatherskite is the most delightful conversationist I ever attended a musical performance with.—New York Weekly.

Rooster, the Dog.

Bill—What do you call your dog?

Jill—I call him Rooster.

"Funny name for a dog. Why Rooster?"

"Because he's a setter dog, but he never lays any eggs!"—Yonkers Statesman.

The Natural Way.

"Your rival has got ahead of you, Jenks. He won your lady's favor by presenting her small nephews with a big billy goat."

"There! I knew the impudent fellow would find a way to butt in."—Baltimore American.

Cause for Jealousy.

"What's the matter with the barber?"

"He's jealous."

"About what?"

"The boss just put in another talking machine!"—Yonkers Statesman.

More Room Needed.

"How many persons do you seat in a pew?" asked the parson.

"Well, we used to seat five; but since the 'Merry Widow' hat made its appearance, only two."—Yonkers Statesman.

Fresh Reporter.

"Yes," said Stormington Barns, "I love the stage. I am bound to it by many ties, as it were."

"Railroad ties?" queried the fresh reporter.—Chicago Daily News.

Prominent Institution.

Gotham—What is the most prominent institution in Brooklyn?

Church—The baby carriage.—Yonkers Statesman.

Told in Brief.

"What was the fruit of your wooing?"

"A lemon."—Baltimore American.

FARM HAND ROBBED THE COOPER FAMILY

Mrs. John C. Cooper, of Warrenville, telephoned local police headquarters this morning asking that the officers be on the look-out for a young man who had been working for the family for the past two months and who departed quietly yesterday, taking with him considerable property that wasn't his own. The articles he took included a gold ring with the monogram "J. H. C.," a child's bank containing $3 and a quantity of clothing.

The young man came to the Cooper place last October and gave his name as Charles Carroll, claiming that Captain Carroll, of the Newark police department, was his father. He declared that his people wanted him to work on a farm for the benefit of his health and he was given employment. There was nothing about his actions to indicate that he was anything but what he claimed and the family were beginning to like him when he disappeared.

Chief Kiely telephoned to Newark after receiving Mrs. Cooper's statement and was informed by Captain Carroll that he has no son and has no idea who the young man can be. He is described as being about nineteen years old, light complected, about five feet seven inches tall and weighing probably 150 pounds. When he left the farm yesterday he wore a black suit and a corduroy cap.

The Coopers have only just recovered from a series of misfortunes, among which were the serious illness of Mr. Ceeper with pneumonia, three of the children with diphtheria and the loss of two valuable work horses.

CHRISTMAS STAMPS FOR WORTHY CAUSE

Red Cross stamps, bearing Christmas greetings, are selling rapidly at The Daily Press office as well as at Laing's and at Estil's stationery stores and at Miller's and at Randolph's drug stores. There is no expense attached to the sale and every penny received is clear profit for the Plainfield Tuberculosis Society's campaign against the great white plague. Remember, the Christmas stamp will not carry a letter but a letter will carry it. Remember also that the campaign is purely local and the proceeds of this sale will be used right here in Plainfield. A packet of nine sells for ten cents and a packet of twenty-four for twenty-five cents.

Elizabeth's trade board, through the medium of the Red Cross Christmas stamp, has entered the fight against tuberculosis, and yesterday Charles H. K. Halsey, president of the Board; William F. Groves, secretary, and Board members generally purchased in all sixteen hundred stamps. Mr. Halsey purchased one thousand stamps for his personal correspondence.

Within the last twenty-four hours more than thirty-five hundred stamps have been sold in Elizabeth. This makes a total of almost sixty-four thousand to date. The sale of the stamps has met with such success that the Red Cross Stamp Committee has decided to continue the sale until after the first week in January.

Shortest Session of District Court.

This morning's session of the District court was perhaps the shortest in its history, it requiring about three minutes for Judge Newcorn to adjourn the thirty-six cases listed and present a box of cigars to Sergeant Hezekiah Hand and Clerk Horace G. Adams. While there were many cases cited for trial, a majority of the lawyers were not ready and Judge Newcorn being anxious to catch a train decided to put off the whole list for a week.

City Bank Remembers Patrons.

The City National Bank today remembered its patrons and friends by sending them a souvenir for 1909 in the shape of a combination pencil and pen, something most useful for everyone. The gift was accompanied by a neatly printed statement of the bank's financial condition, together with a greeting of "best wishes for your health and prosperity."

Appropriate Xmas Gift.

The patrons of the First National Bank have been pleasantly remembered by the institution with a souvenir of Christmastide, consisting of a handsome blotter, fastened with a pretty miniature. A complete and up-to-date list of the fire-boxes of the city and borough makes the gift of great use.

GUARDSMEN SOON WILL BE AMONG THE REGULARS

Every member of Company K in common with all members of the National Guard in the State of New Jersey, is interested deeply in the annual report of Gen. Luke E. Wright, Secretary of War, who calls especial attention to the act approved May 27, 1908, which makes the organized militia of the several States available for service during the period of commission of the officers, or enlistment of the men, and within and without the boundaries of the United States.

It is decreed under this new law "that every officer and enlisted man of the militia shall be mustered for service without further enlistment."

"The call of the President," says the Secretar yof War, "will therefore, of itself, accomplish the transof the organized militia from its State relations to Federal relations. The militia so called forth becomes at once a part of the army of the United States, and the President becomes its Commander in Chief; it is therefore as completely under the orders of the President and as completely serviceable, both as to time and place, as the regular army."

It is not generally known among the rank and file that after Jan. 21, 1910, the fixing of the organization, armament and discipline of the organized militia will be the same as that of the regular army, providing that the organized militia shall be called in time of emergency into the service of the United States in advance of any volunteer force. The Secretary of War will have authority and financial means to provide for the participation of any part o the organized militia in joint encampment and field instruction with any part of the regular army.

He can open service schools of the regular establishment to the officers and enlisted men of the organized militia and require that every company, troop and battery of the organized militia participate "each year for at least five consecutive days in practice marches or camps of instruction, and assemble for drill and instruction in company, battalion or regimental armories or rendezvous, or for target practice not less than twenty-four times in order to be entitled to the use of funds allotted to the States."

Under the Revised Statutes as amended, the Secretary of War is authorized on the application of a Governor of any State to detail officers to attend encampments of the organized militia, and to detail officers and enlisted men to report for duty.

"The conditions established by this new legislation," says Secretary Wright, "make it possible for the first time in the history of the United States to prepare in time of peace a scheme of organization of all organized land forces with a view to immediate mobilization of such farces on the outbreak of war. The working out of the plans of mobilization will make it possible to avoid the confused and congested conditions which have in the past characterized the initial periods of some wars. It is expected that the new conditions will lead to the establishment of mobilization plans so complete that, on the outbreak of war, it will be necessary simply to open reserve depots of supplies and to call the troops to their respective colors.

"There are at present approximately 111,000 officers and men in the organized militia. It is considered that about 75 per cent. of this number would respond to a call to arms, and of the number responding a small percentage would be eliminated probably by physical disqualifications. It is estimated that little more than 60 per cent.—that is, about 67,000—would be available at present in case of an emergency."

Approaching Marriage.

CONFESSES TO BIGAMY

Walter Smalley Admits Crime and is Held for Grand Jury Without Bail.

LODGED IN COUNTY JAIL.

The Prisoner Had a Wife in Plainfield When he Married A Child In Newark.

Walter Smalley, of this city, who was arrested in Newark Tuesday night on a warrant charging bigamy, was arraigned before Judge Toucey at Westfield this morning and held for the Grand Jury without bail. He was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth at noon. When arraigned he entered a plea of guilty.

Smalley was arrested at Washington and Academy streets, Newark, by Detectives Quinn and Kuhn, for the Westfield police. At the same time the detectives took into custody Catherine Eustice, seventeen years old, who produced a certificate, purporting to show that she and Smalley were married by Justice of the Peace Murano, at his office, in Newark, November 21. Smalley has a wife and two children residing at 15 Somerset street, this city, and immediately following his arrest he was turned over to Chief of Police O'Neil, of Westfield, and the girl subsequently started for her parents' home in Westfield.

Smalley, while admitting his second marriage yesterday, declared that he had entered into the contract because of a dare. He was so drunk, he said, that all he remembered of the ceremony was that he paid the justice of the peace $5. The prisoner caused a flutter of excitement at headquarters when as he was about to be taken away he declared that the Eustice girl had a husband named Harry Coles, to whom she was wedded in Morristown several months before she became "Mrs. Smalley." The detectives questioned her about the Morristown marriage and she averred she did not marry Coles, but admitted having told Smalley that she did.

According to the Westfield police, Smalley was employed up to two months ago as a clerk for S. Schurer & Co., at the firm's grocery store in Westfield, but since that time had done little or nothing but visit back and forth among the various nearby towns. Mrs. Smalley No. 1 is a woman of excellent character and this is not the first time that she has had trouble with her husband, it is said.

EX-POLICE LIEUTENANT DIES ON BOARDING TRAIN

John S. Gilligan, of 694 Dawson street, the Bronx, formerly of this city, a former lieutenant of police in New York, died suddenly of heart disease today as he was about to enter a subway train at the elevated station at Prospect avenue, New York. He was on his way to the Chemical National Bank, Broadway and Chambers street, New York, where he was a special officer.

Gilligan was within two feet of the third car of the train when he threw up his hands and collapsed. By the time a doctor arrived from Lebanon Hospital he was dead.

Xmas at the Hospital.

Christmastide will be appropriately celebrated by the nurses of Muhlenberg Hospital at the Nurses' Home, tonight, when a Christmas tree, laden with suitable gifts will be a feature. All of the nurses, connected with the hospital, as well as all of the physicians of the city and borough, will attend the celebration. It is said that a great surprise has been arranged for the nurses. The festivities will be concluded with a dance.

Lowest Temperature of the Season.

Weather Prophet John Neagle reported the lowest temperature of the season, this morning, the thermometer registering seven degrees as the minimum. The maximum was thirty-one degrees. The weather forecast today is "threatening weather with probably rain or snow late tonight and Friday; rising temperature."

Engagement Announced.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Gertrude Craig Dunham, of Clinton, to Walter D. Wright, of this city.

—Fancy table apples, selected oranges and grape fruit are to be had at Neuman Brothers. The finest assortment of fancy fruits in the city is to be found at this store.

—Send immediately to L. W. Randolph's for Huyler's. Why did I forget? ***

"ABE" HOOLEY TYPICAL "WALL STREET MAN"

When an intelligent actor—whether he is familiar with any of the personalities of the street or not—is told to make up as a banker or a broker, there at once occurs to him a definite mental image of the character, his manner of dress, his mode of speech, and even the facial expression which gives the final note of individuality to a fixed type of character. Nor is this conception far from wrong, though it has lent itself to some broad anomalies and fantastic exaggeration. But it is an undeniable fact that the environment of Wall street stamps itself on the character of a man, and in many cases virtually recasts him.

The story is told in the street to show that a Wall street man may be spotted anywhere in the world by a traveller who has become acquainted with the type in this city. Three well known business men last year visited London, Paris, Berlin and St. Petersburg, and their most interesting diversion, when they had been located at a hotel and had looked over the rest of the persons stopping there, was to make bets as to the profession of the Americans present.

All three of them made guesses with varying success, but, strange to say, they were always correct in picking a Wall street broker or a banker. In this connection it is said by those qualified to speak from experience that no matter what the calling of a man before he entered business in the street, it took about only six months of the new surroundings to completely divorce him from his former business idiosyncracies and transform him into a typical "Wall street man." One of the most striking illustrations of this fact is Abraham Hooley, of the Stock Exchange firm of Hooley, Learned & Co.

No one meeting Mr. Hooley today either in business or socially could ever imagine that he had been a rough and ready ranchman in the West—not one of those tenderfeet who pose as cow punchers, who are in reality housed and well fed while others are doing the real work, but the real hustling, hard working reality.

Mr. Hooley was the type of cowman celebrated in fiction but now becoming a mere memory. He was, and is still, a daring and tireless rider, possessed of a constitution that defied fatigue and often enabled him to spend the day and night in the saddle without rest. He dressed, ate and worked with his own men, was out on the range in the deadly frost of winter and under the scorching sun of summer, braving storms and floods in the work which brought to him the joy that a perfectly healthy and strong man finds in outdoor exertion.

Also he could throw a lariat with the best of the ropers and ride any bronco that ever kicked the atmosphere to tatters.

Out in the cow country they still tell the story of how "Abe" Hooley, as he was familiarly called, would often, after a hard day's work, ride twenty-five miles to tackle some horse that was found too vicious for the expert bronco busters of that region. Today Mr. Hooley is one of those quiet, gentlemanly men who can in a few minutes give you more information on the stock market than could be elicited from the "know it alls" in a week. In looks, in speech and in action he is the typical broker with not the slightest suggestion of the rough riding man of the plains.—New York Telegram.

PLANS FOR MARSHALL'S NEW LAUNDRY PLANT.

H. W. Marshall has broken ground at Watchung avenue and Fourth street for a three-story brick and stone building, to be used as a laundry and the two upper floors for lofts. The structure will be thirty feet front, thirty-two feet in the rear and 109 feet deep and Mr. Marshall has just acquired an addition strip of land which will give him a driveway of eight feet in the rear of the building and ten feet on the east.

He plans to use the basement for his washing machinery and the first floor for ironing, offices, etc. Provisions have been made for an unusual number of windows. A. L. C. Marsh is the architect, and Tallamy Brothers the masons. Alexander Milne will do the carpentry work. Mr. Marshall planned to move from West Front street because the property he now occupies was recently sold and he desired to locate permanently, where he could have all the modern conveniences.

Christmas Music Programs.

To insure their insertion, Christmas musical programs intended for publication on Saturday, must be received at this office by 9 o'clock on Saturday morning.

—As Christmas is a legal holiday in New Jersey, The Daily Press will not be published tomorrow.

SUIT FOR $85 DAMAGES COSTS COUNTY $250

Taking two days for trial, at a daily cost of $125 to the county, the suit of Samuel R. Manning, the Piscataway farmer who brought suit for $700 damages from the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad for fire in his fields from locomotive sparks, was decided yesterday at New Brunswick in favor of the railroad. The jury was composed of farmers, neighbors of the man bringing the action, and the case was before Judge Lloyd.

The case illustrates one of the absurdities of litigation. The plaintiff has only proved about $85 worth of damage, yet it is costing the county $125 a day to conduct the trial and at least two full court days will have been consumed by the time the case is ended. And that is not taking account of the legal expenses for both sides.

The company contends that the fire was accidental and unavoidable and that therefore it is not liable for damages.

The defense opened yesterday afternoon. Colonel Dungan, for the railroad, tried to show by numerous railroad men, experts in locomotive construction and operation, that it was impossible for cinders such as Mr. Manning described to pass through the flues and screens of the locomotives that passed over the tracks adjoining the Manning farm. Much time was devoted to finding out the type of screen used to prevent the throwing of fire in the engines at the time of the fire.

SILENT TRIBUTE PAID TO SLAIN CURB BROKER

The New York curb brokers yesterday paid a silent tribute to the memory of Councilman Harry P. Suydam, their comrade, who was shot down by John C. Lumsden, the inventor, in his office, No. 39 Broad street, on Saturday last, and who died Monday morning at the Hudson Street Hospital.

Mr. Suydam's funeral was set for 1:30 o'clock yesterday, and at that hour E. S. Mendels, chairman of the Curb Agency, bared his head and lifted his hand. Immediately the noise of the trading stopped and the silent brokers took off their hats and, dividing into two sections, stood in line on either side of the roped off space in Broad street.

A large crowd of outsiders had assembled to witness the strange spectacle and most of them joined in the tribute to the dead broker. Business was suspended for five minutes, during which time not a word was spoken by any member of the curb. In the offices of the brokers similar silence was preserved during the five minutes and busines was practically suspended throughout Broad street for this space of time

A delegation from the curb attended the funeral service in the church of the Heavenly Rest yesterday.

PLANS FOR FORMATION OF A MEN'S ASSOCIATION.

The Consistory of Trinity Reformed church met last night and among the topics discussed was that relative to the formation of a men's association. The idea was considered an excellent one and will be considered at further length at a special meeting to be held next week, following the prayer-meeting.

Four members of the Consistory, together with the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, were present last night, and they prefer to wait until all the members can attend before taking any action. There was a men's association in the church sometime ago, but it was allowed to disband for one reason or another. It is now the belief that with the assistance of a regular pastor, such an association can successfully be maintained.

Funeral of Mrs. Grosset.

The funeral of Mrs. Alexander Grosset was held at her late home on Woodland avenue yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, assisted by Rev. Morgan Ashley, and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and friends. Two hymns "Jesus Lover of My Soul" and "Abide With Me," were sung by Miss Bertha VanNuis Willis. The body was placed in the receiving vault at Hillside cemetery.

FACES SWINDLING CHARGE

Newark Man Collected for Groceries That Were Never Delivered.

HELD FOR THE GRAND JURY.

Many Colored People His Victims—Mentions Charles P. Senger as Implicated in the Scheme.

Accused by several local colored women of swindling them out of a dollar each on a pretext of giving a grocery order worth that amount and a handsome premium beside, John M. Walsh, a middle-aged man who claims Newark as his home, was held in $200 bail for the grand jury by Judge Runyon this morning. The magistrate's decision was reached after the defendant had made an ineffectual attempt to discredit the charge and was forced to admit that he had made statements to his victims that he could not substantiate. He was unable to furnish the necessary bond and was committed to the county jail.

Walsh's scheme of getting grocery orders at one dollar each was one of the flimsiest the police have encountered in a long time but it developed that he had met with considerable success among the Plainfield negroes. He purported to be a representative of the Weinberger wholesale house, of Mercer street, Newark, and beside having the groceries forwarded for the amount paid, would give each purchaser the choice of a handsome premium. These included parlor rockers, sideboards and couches. The alluring bargain brought him lots of orders and they were to have been delivered in a week but never came.

Among Walsh's victims were Mrs. Belle Taylor and Mrs. Lucy Warrick, of East Third street, and the husbands of both got after him when two weeks passed by and no groceries or premium showed up. Taylor was put off with the excuse that so many orders had been received that it was almost impossible to fill them on time while Warrick was told that because of a heavy fog the ships bearing the goods were unable to land. When the latter expressed astonishment that the groceries were coming over the seas, Walsh replied:

"Oh, yes, our firm does a big business and has to buy in Europe in order to give customers the benefit of sharp trading."

Further inquiry as to why the groceries and premiums were not produced were met with other excuses and demands for the return of the money were refused. As a result, Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Warrick preferred complaint to the police. Walsh was arrested last night at the Kensington hotel where he has been stopping.

When questioned in court, this morning, the defendant declared that he had been engaged to solicit the orders by Charles P. Senger, the Plainfield man who has figured in several court cases lately. Judge Runyon asked him if it was true that after his arrest last night, Senger had visited him in his cell and induced him to sign a paper exonerating him from any responsibility in the matter, he replied:

"I signed a paper but I don't known just what was on it; I was so greatly upset I didn't take time to read it carefully. What I meant to do was to free him from any blame of getting money. I kept all I got for the orders and used it for myself and family. It was he who advanced the order proposition to me and he said he would give me twenty per cent of the first one I took and fifteen per cent thereafter. He said the goods would be forwarded by the Weinberger house."

Directly afterward he admitted that he had never given Senger any written order for the forwarding of goods and that the only thing he did after receiving the money was to report to him verbally. All the dollars he collected were put in his own pocket and he never bothered further to figure out what kind of business the Weinbergers conducted when they would ship groceries all over without receiving the collateral. All his answers were hesitating and not the least bit plausible.

In response to Judge Runyon's query about the ships being held back by the fog, Walsh said that that was true because he had read of it in the papers but he was unable to say positively that any of the boats carried goods consigned to the Weinbergers.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

While shopping in Philadelphia, Miss Emma Locke, of Woodbury, lost her gold watch and chain, and Charles Hinman, of Paulsboro, lost $80.

Confirmation of the appointment of Edward Midleton as a clerk in the sheriff's office was made by Judge Joline in Camden yesterday. His salary was fixed at $1,200 a year.

Woodbury now has a full-fledged Board of Trade, made up of the leading citizens. Permanent organization was effected last night, when Colonel G. G. Green was named president.

Dogs visited the farm of Scattergood Bethel, on the Beaver Dam turnpike, near Millville, Monday night, and killed a flock of fine geese which had twice won prizes at poultry shows.

Captain James E. Downs, well-known Inlet skipper and boat contractor at Atlantic City, died at his home there yesterday after a lingering illness. He was one of the pioneer residents of the city.

Death came quickly to Israel Fisk, of 212 North Sixth street, Camden, who passed away yesterday from pneumonia. He was in the best of health until Sunday, when he was attacked with the disease.

While romping with a dog yesterday, Anna, the small daughter of Daniel Green, of Millville, fell to the ground. She did not think she was hurt until at night, when her arm became swollen and Dr. Jones found it broken above the elbow.

Falling from a scaffold at the R. D. Wood Iron Works, Florence, yesterday, Claude Githens, eighteen years old, of Wood Lynne, sustained a fracture of the spine. He was removed to Cooper Hospital, Camden, and today was reported in a serious condition.

Unable to see on account of the heavy snowfall, Stephen Tenescue, nineteen years old, of 652 Ferry avenue, Camden, walked directly in front of an electric train on the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad at Railroad and Ferry avenues, and sustained scalp lacerations. He was removed to Cooper Hospital.

Camden has received more cash for taxes in the past few days than in any similar period. The last day before the seven per cent. penalty went into effect nearly $160,000 was taken in by Receiver Roberts and his assistants. One noticeable feature this year is the large number of citizens who are handing up their $1 poll tax. More have met this obligation than in any past year.

A northeast snow storm did not deter the 100 "newsies" from attending the twelfth annual newsboys' dinner at Asbury Park last night at Craig's restaurant, given by J. Lyle Kinmonth. Every boy was on time when the roll was called at 7:30, and the racket incident to serving turkey and all the fixings, with fruit and ice cream, precluded any attempts at entertainment features or speeches.

Every prisoner that faced Judge Joline in the Camden Criminal Court yesterday escaped with the exception of Winfield Sadler, a negro. He was accused of pilfering blankets, corn, harness and other articles from farmers in the lower part of the county. He tried to explain his acts, but he became so deeply involved that Judge Joline cut him short by sending him to State prison for one year.

While preparing beef tea for her husband, Captain Harrison Godfrey, at their home, 230 Line street, Camden, yesterday, and upon hearing a slight noise in the bedroom, she was surprised when she approached the bed to find her husband had died during her absence. He was sixty-nine years of age. Death was due to heart failure. For years he was captain of tugboats of the American Dredging Company.

BASEBALL.

The Cornell baseball schedule for next spring has been announced by Manager Scott The Ithacans will play twenty-two games, most of them on their home grounds, though four trips will be made. The Southern trip has been cut down to four games. Harvard will be played twice, while Brown will be seen in Ithaca for the first time in years. Columbia will play one game.

The schedule follows: April 3, Georgetown University at Washington; 5, Georgetown University at Washington; 6, Walbrook Athletic Club in Baltimore; 7, Naval Academy at Annapolis; 8, Mount Washington Club in Baltimore; 17, Lafayette in Ithaca; 29, Bucknell in Ithaca; May 2, Pennsylvania State in Ithaca; 5, Williams in Ithaca; 8, Carlisle in Ithaca; 12, Brown in Ithaca; 15, Columbia in Ithaca; 21, Carlisle in Carlisle; 22, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; 23, Michigan in Ithaca; 29, Harvard in Ithaca; 31, Pennsylvania in Ithaca; June 12, Harvard in Cambridge; 18, Williams in Williamstown; 19, Yale at New Haven.

Twenty-two games are on the Naval Academy baseball schedule for next spring, with several more likely. The Army-Navy game comes last and is due to be played at West Point this time. The other games will be played at Annapolis. The schedule: March 27, Gallaudet; 31, Maryland Agricultural College; April 1, Pennsylvania State; 3, Amherst; 7, Cornell; 8, Princeton; 10, Columbia; 14, Fordham; 15, Yale (probable); 17, Bucknell; 21, Western Maryland; 24, Pennsylvania; 29, Agricultural and Mechanical College; May 1, West Virginia; 6, Mount Washington Athletic Club; 12, Rock Hill College; 13, St. John's; 15, Dickinson; 19, Maryland Athletic Club; 20, Walbrook Athletic Club; 22, Georgetown; 29, Army.

The official batting and fielding averages of the New York State League players show that while there are eight men with a batting average of more than .300 there are only three with an average between .280 and .300. Eagan, the Utica catcher who was purchased by Connie Mack for the Philadelphia Americans, leads the league in batting with .386 for eighty-six games. The others of the .300 class are Killingsworth of Albany, .333 for 28 games; Lawler of Elmira, .330 for 113 games; McCormick of Syracuse, 324 for 99 games; Howard of Scranton, .305 for 24 games; Goode of Troy, .305 for 139 games, and Madden of Utica, .302 for 127 games.

Catcher Jack Kleinow of the New York Americans says that Second Baseman Cardner, who played with the team last fall, is another Johnny Evers. Arthur Irwin, who dug Gardner up in Hartford, declares that he is the best young ball player he ever has seen.

GOLF.

The first step toward secession from the United States Golf Association will be taken at the annual meeting of the Western Golf Association, to be held in Chicago next month, according to information received in New York yesterday. A resolution will be offered at that time for the Western Golf Association to change its name and eliminate all geographical boundary lines.

Word has also been received from a man on the inside that the Western Golf Association will adopt its own set of special rules for bogie and par competitions. This is a policy that was advocated several months ago, and seems to prove conclusively that the radical utterances that have come out of the West have been something more than mere threats induced by disappointment.

It is expected that the coming meeting of the Western Golf Association will be the liveliest in its history, and also the most largely attended. In the fear of a general stampede it is understood that a number of the more conservative Westerners still loyal to the parent organization are planning to attend the Chicago meeting with a view to heading off the insurgents. It is claimed, however, that the conservative element will be decidedly in the minority.

The West was sorely disappointed in not having a man from that section selected for the next president of the United States Golf Association. Silas H. Strawn was the man the Western golfers wanted, but the nominating committee preferred to keep the presidency in the East, and named Mr. Strawn as one of the vice-presidents, a place he now holds.

The feeling is so bitter against the national association in the West that a Chicago man said yesterday that in his opinion there would not be enough representatives of the West at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association "to wad a gun." He said further that an independent ticket would not be considered, inasmuch as it would be impossible to get anybody to run on it with such a small chance of beating the organization ticket. "Nobody wants to be put up for the sake of being knocked down," was the way he put it, and added:

"The time has come when the Western golfers have got tired of asking, and propose to act. If the more conservative men in the West think they can control the insurgents who are keen for rebellion they will find a good fight on their hands."

Important alterations that will increase the playing length of the course of the Country Club, of Atlantic City, to more than six thousand yards are now under way. There will be a rearrangement of the lower holes, as the first nine are called, the idea being to rotate the short with the long holes, and in that way avoid congestion on tournament days.

A water hazard has been constructed in front of the former second green, which is now the fifth, while the former third hole, now the sixth, will be made an island green. The old fifth hole, 545 yards, known as "Long Tom," will be extended to 585 yards, making it difficult, except for the hard hitters, to get home in three shots.

More than twenty deep pits will be constructed so as to guard greens, and other side hazards are also contemplated. The tees will also be altered to run longitudinally of the course, so as to make it possible to lengthen or shorten holes by at least fifteen yards.

Many important tournaments have been held over the Atlantic City links. The national amateur championship there in 1901 marked the introduction of the rubber-cored ball. The intercollegiate tournament has also been decided over the Northfield course, and two years ago the women held their Eastern championship there. When all the improvements have been completed it is not improbable that this popular organization by the sea will once again be in line for a competiton of national importance.

The public course at Forest Park was closed for the winter on Saturday, the idea being to preserve the turf as much as possible. Since then boys have been tobogganing on the hillsides and, according to the disgruntled golfers, working a deal more damage than they could possibly do with their clubs.

The annual report of Leighton Calkins, of this city, the former secretary of the Metropolitan Golf Association, has been issued in pamphlet form, and will be sent to each club in the organization. This is the first time that a report has been given such prominence.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The First Baptist church Christmas entertainment will be held during the week between Christmas and New Years.

The next communion service will be held at the First Presbyterian church, Sunday, January 3, with reception of members.

Appropriate Christmas music will be rendered at Grace M. E. church on Sunday and the Sunday-school will have exercises in the afternoon.

Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor, conducted the mid-week prayer-meeting at the First M. E. church, last night, the topic being appropriate to Christmastide.

The Christmas service at the First Baptist church Sunday afternoon will comprise recitations, the singing of carols by the school and anthems by the choir.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will omit its weekly meeting tomorrow night, on account of it being a holiday.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will not meet tomorrow night, its service being combined on Wednesday night with the regular church meeting. The same arrangement has been decided upon for next week.

The Christmas entertainment at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be held Monday night and will consist of a moving picture show. There will be the usual Christmas tree. In the afternoon there will be a party for the smaller children.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will have a Christmas tree celebration tonight.

N. J. INTERSTATE FAIR PAYS GOOD DIVIDENDS.

Dividend checks were sent out to the stockholders of the Interstate Fair Association, to the amount of seven per cent., yesterday, by Colonel Mahlon R. Margerum. The total amount of the dividend on the preferred and common stock is $9,450, and there are 647 stockholders. This is the same as last year and as large as any other dividend in the history of the association.

The report of Secretary Margerum shows that the fair of 1908 earned enough money for the paying of the seven per cent. dividend, and yet leave a comfortable balance for the year, the dividend element of the directorate was given its way.

When these dividend checks, which were sent out yesterday, are collected by the stockholders there will remain in bank, drawing three per cent. interest, the handsome working balance of $46,000. This is the largest balance the fair has ever had, and it makes the Trenton exhibition the greatest in the United States in this respect.

The declaring and paying of this dividend marks the close of all business of the fair of 1908, the twenty-first of the association. Dividends have been paid in twenty one years amounting to the grand total of $100,395. There have been but three fairs which did not earn sufficient money for dividend purposes, those of 1895, 1899 and 1900.

TO BUILD FINE ROAD.

Middlesex Will Have 26 Miles of Macadam in Spring.

The Middlesex Board of Freeholders yesterday decided to macadamize the road between Monmouth Junction and Dayton and the aqueduct near Carnegie Lake at Princeton. The work will be commenced in the spring. Mercer county wanted Middlesex county to macadamize the Trenton turnpike from New Brunswick to Aqueduct, but Middlesex balked at the cost—about $120,000. Instead they will connect the Cranberry turnpike, which is now macadamized, with the end of the Mercer county road at Aqueduct.

This can be done for about $30,000 and will give a continuous stone road from New Brunswick to Trenton, twentysix miles long. The Freeholders also decided to issue $125,000 of road bonds to pay for the roads to be improved.

BOY'S DREAM ROUTS THIEF.

The shouts of a small boy dreaming of a basketball contest in which he had participated shortly before was responsible for frightening away a burglar from the home of J. D. Cooper, Fourth avenue, Roselle. The shouts awakened his family, who heard the burglar rummaging about. Then he fled. George Burkly, a negro, arrested at Elizabeth yesterday, is thought to be the man who was frightened off. A knife which fits into nicks in Cooper's window sill was found on him.

FAVORS ABOLITION OF SPRING GUNNING SEASON

Members of the Association of New Jersey Sportsmen, representing a score or more clubs in this State, gathered in the association's annual meeting and banquet at the Trenton House, Trenton, Tuesday evening. The affair was one of the most enthusiastic ones ever held by the organization, and there was a free discussion of the present game laws.

The association had as its guests several prominent men, among whom were Dr. A. K. Fischer, of the Biological Survey of Washington, D. C.; William Dutcher, president of the National Audubon Society; Col. Austen Colgate and Professor Alexander Hamilton Phillips, of Princeton.

During the evening Dr. Fischer gave a most interesting talk in which he encouraged the movement for the abolition of spring shooting. Dr. Fischer had much data by which he sought to prove the harm of early seasons. He pointed out the fact that birds shot in the early spring are unfit for food, and also that just at that time they are breeding and their destruction means the destruction of much bird life. Six species of birds breed in this State, according to Dr. Fischer's statement, and he recommended a closed season that a good supply of birds might be assured.

Dr. Fischer suggested State game preserves such as are being spoken of in many States and such as New York State has inaugurated in the Adirondack Mountains for the propagation of moose, elk and deer. He also scored heavily the present law which divided the State of New Jersey into two shooting districts. He asserted that the climatic difference between the north and south of New Jersey is not great enough to warrant such a division, and remarked that if Texas feels that one law is necessary, New Jersey should think so also.

Colonel Colgate spoke on the difficulty of securing game legislation. He said that laws are made that shooters might have more chances to shoot instead of for the protection of the birds, and it is that sentiment which must be first overcome before proper game laws can be enacted. He referred to the Legislature men from South Jersey as "the solid south," and said that they would trade off the Ten Commandments for a favorable game law. He referred to the suggestion to stop all gunning between January 1 and August 1, and said that while such a law in his judgment would be a good one, he was confident that the people were not ready for it and that consequently it would not be wise to introduce it.

The executive committee in its report to the association suggested that five of the twelve months of the year be made closed seasons, and that not a gun be fired between January 1 and August 1. In that manner it is claimed the species would not only be retained but replenished. The committee also recommended a residence license fee of one dollar except to landowners and their sons shooting upon their own grounds.

The election of officers held during the evening resulted in the reelection of George Batten, of Montclair, to the presidency, and Edward Winslow, also of Montclair, secretary and treasurer.

HAD COUNTERFEITING OUTFIT.

Machine to Sweat Bills and Spurious Money on Two Men.

Detective Sergeants Lord and Keppler yesterday arrested two men who are believed to be the heads of a band of counterfeiters who were preparing to flood the city of Paterson with spurious bills. The men gave their names as Louis Cohn and Jacob Freidman. They had just arrived in Paterson when Lord's attention was attracted to them and he and Keppler followed them to a boarding house. They carried a queer looking box.

At police headquarters in Paterson it was found that the outer cover of the top was of wood, and inside it was a peculiar shaped copper affair. Inside of this was found a machine used by counterfeiters to sweat bills. This process means taking a genuine bill and sweating a facsimile on a piece of paper. The box was fitted up with electric batteries. The men were searched and on them were found two counterfeit five-dollar bills and two counterfeit one-dollar bills.

Freidman pleaded that he had just met Cohn by accident and did not know him. Captain Flynn, of the Secret Service Bureau, has been notified.

MIDDLESEX FREEHOLDERS THINK COURTHOUSE EXEMPT.

The Board of Freeholders of Middlesex County has directed its counsel, Allan H. Strong, to appeal from the tax assessment of the city on the courthouse property in the courthouse square, including the courthouse, jail and county buildings. This property has been valued by the city at $40,000, the annual taxes amounting to about $770. The assessment was made under the act of 1907. The taxes were paid last year, but the freeholders claim under the amendment that the property is exempt.

JERSEY CLAY RANKS HIGH.

State Glad it Hasn't Any Oil or Natural Gas to Waste Money On.

The commission to investigate the natural resources of the State and to report to Gov. Fort upon how best to conserve them, says that in the production of zinc, cement, clay and clay products, sand, gravel and road material New Jersey take high rank. Of iron ores, which took high rank in Colonial days, the commission says there is left plenty of low grade ores which in time will be utilized.

The commission remarks that "the non-occurrence of oil and natural gas has saved large sums to the people of the State which would have been otherwise expended in fruitless prospecting.

"Saved the State $1,000,000 almost every year," says the commission of the work of the forest fire brigade.

The commission says that the work of improving the inlets along the Atlantic Coast is one of prime importance.

The commission notes the almost denuded forests of the southern part of the State, and says that the forestry policy of the State and the encouragement given to the farmers by the State Board of Agriculture and free scholarships in the State College of Farming will do much to make New Jersey the greatest State for forests and farming in the near future.

FIND KID OF BOND OWNER.

Thomas Gorman Cousin of Woman Whose Bonds Country Has Held Since 1879.

Charles H. Treat, of the United States Treasury Department, who has been trying to locate the owner of United States bonds in the name of Miss Kate Burke, of Elizabeth, has discovered that Thomas F. Gorman, of that city, is a second cousin of the Kate Burke referred to. The coupons for interest on these bonds were returned to the Treasury Department in 1879 and have been accumulating interest since.

At present it is not known whether the woman is living or dead. In 1878 she was placed in the State Asylum for the Insane at Morris Plains, but was afterward released and went to her birthplace, Ballintoutes, county Cork, Ireland. The authorities have written to that place to find if the woman is still alive.

It is the belief of those who are investigating that Miss Burke is not alive, in which case the bonds may fall to her relatives in Elizabeth. Just what the amount is the Treasury Department refuses to make known, but the United States bonds are not in denominations less than $1,000. It is said there are five of them.

"ROOKIES" BARRED OUT.

Raw Recruits Will Not Be Allowed at State Camp.

Under authority of Governor Fort, there was issued yesterday an order which will keep from camp all soldiers or sailors of the State camp who enlist after March 31 in each year. This does not apply to men who have previously served an enlistment. This order covers the sailors of the naval militia reserve.

The reason for the order is found in the experience of the regular army officers that State troops sent them were composed in some cases of raw recruits and these recruits behaved badly in the annual army maneuvers. The Secretary of War decided that no men enlisted less than six months can be sent to the maneuvers, and the State Military Board took the matter up and by resolution adopted the same policy for the State camp and the State annual cruise of the naval reserve.

Would Hire 650 Acres.

Another application for oyster beds has been placed on file with the clerk of the commissioners of shell fisheries at Hartford and posted in the town clerk's office in Stonington borough.

David E. Fitzgerald, of New Haven, onl ywants 650 acres, bounded as follows: Starting at Stonington point, thence south to the outer breakwater, thence westerly to the easterly line of grounds of E. E. Ball, thence northwesterly about 4,000 feet, thence due north to state jurisdiction line, thence easterly to place of beginning.

There is not much land under water left for the local fisherman if this grant is made. The notice will be returned to Hartford on Dec. 29. —Westerly, R. I., Sun.

Steal Christmas Packages.

For the third time within a year the freight house of the Central Railroad at Whitehouse Station was broken into and ransacked by burglars Monday night. Entrance was effected by knocking out a window pane and loosening the clasp on the sash. The freight packages, including many Christmas gifts, were overhauled and a few of them were taken. Some other goods were also stolen, including two cases of pocket knives consigned to a local dealer. The break is believed to have been made by hoboes from a freight train who got off when the train stopped at Whitehouse Station to take water some time during the night, made the haul, and took the next train out.

EXONERATES THE OYSTER.

Dr. Darlington Unable to Find What Sickened Five Thanksgiving Diners.

Health Commissioner Darlington, of New York, who has been trying to ascertain what caused the death of two men of a party of five who dined at a New York hotel on Thanksgiving eve and the illness of the three others, said yesterday he hadn't found that the eating of oysters was responsible. Dr. Walter Hensel, after inspecting the beds of Sayville, Lynnhaven Bay and Cape Cod, whence come most of the oysters used in the city, reports them free from typhoid conditions.

"Of the three survivors of the dinner party," Dr. Darlington said, "one gave us no information and the other two say they ate no oysters. They had been out of town for several weeks prior to their illness and in cities in which they visited possibly could have contracted typhoid. The two who died had eaten oysters."

Louis A. Hopkins, of New York, who was named as one of the party and is just recovering from typhoid fever, said last night that no effort had been made by Commissioner Darlington to question him as to whether he ate oysters. He said he did eat them and eat at the same table with J. B. Rowland and A. B. Elliott, who died. He said that Herbert Lytle, the racing car driver, and Thomas Wetzel, who are also recovering from typhoid, sat at an adjoining table. Lytle is still in a hospital in Toledo.

Report on State's Resources.

New Jersey is one of the leading States in the Union, so far as the conservation of its natural resources is concerned, according to the report of a commission having the subject in charge, which has just been submitted to Governor Fort. The report, however, points out that too many commissions in charge of the various resources result in duplication of effort and conflict of authority. It is therefore urged that a permanent department of the State be established to take full charge of this work, so that harmonious action may be had.

Princeton Man the Boss.

Foster Crowell, commissioner of street cleaning in New York city, sent his resignation to Mayor McClellan yesterday, to take effect on January 1. The resignation was accepted and the Mayor announced that he would appoint William H. Edwards to the vacancy. Edwards is now first deputy in the department. He is known as "Big Bill" Edwards and was famous as a football player in Princeton University.

AULD ACQUAINTANCES SHOULD NEVER BE FORGOTTEN ON THE 25th DAY OF DECEMBER.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Funeral services of the late Mrs. Nancy Wilcox, held yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Baptist church was well attended by friends and neighbors who had known and loved her during her many years residence among them. Rev. Franklin Mathiews, pastor of the church, had charge of the service and spoke words of comfort and sympathy to the family and relatives. Interment was made in the family plot in the Baptist cemetery, the pall bearers being John Bownmann, David Hand, Edward Johnston and John Robison.

The teachers and pupils of the school parted yesterday afternoon for their two weeks holiday vacation, with the best wishes for a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year. The teachers received a number of pretty Christmas gifts from their classes. Miss Smith at the close of the school session gave a Christmas party to the pupils of her room at her home in Cranford.

No special holiday events are scheduled for tomorrow, but it is a sure thing that the majority of the residents will enjoy a Merry Christmas. The stores will close at an early hour and the factories will observe a full day.

Ernest Clark is arranging to hold a pool tournament during the early part of January. The town has some experts with the cue and the rivalry is strong for the local championship.

Mrs. Long and daughter, who have been living in the Meyer cottage on Westfield avenue for the past year, have removed to the Coles' property on Front street.

Charles Meyer will exhibit some of his fancy bird pigeons at the Madison Square Poulary Show, which will be held the last week in the month.

The Methodist Sunday-school holds its Christmas exercises in the church tonight. The public is invited to enjoy the treat with the school.

The snow plows were right on the job yesterday morning, paths being made on all the streets before the school children were obliged to go out.

Rev. T. Moore-Smith, who has been seriously ill for the past two weeks, was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital for treatment yesterday.

Miss Winifried McGowan, of the corps of teachers, will spend her holiday vacation at her home in Pennsylvania.

The Township Committee meet in the town rooms Saturday night.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

A meeting of the Boys' Athletic Association of the Baptist Sunday-school, was held last night at the home of Victor Attlee.

Miss Ellen Ostige, teacher in the public school, is spending her vacation with friends in Dunkirk, N. Y.

The public school closed yesterday for the Christmas vacation. It will reopen on Monday January 4.

Joseph Miller spent last night with friends in North Plainfield.

THE FORUM.

Wants Black Hands.

Editor, The Daily Press:

Although fully appreciating the enterprise of the local merchant through whose efforts an illuminated clock has been placed on West Front street, I believe the time-piece would be of two-fold service if the hands were heavier, to show blacker. The artistic qualities of the clock would not be impaired by such a change and a pedestrian could see the time at a distance of several hundred feet further away.

BLACK HAND.

December 24, 1908.

Set the Hedge in Winter.

Winter is a good time to set out a hedge, as most of the plants used are hardy, many varieties evergreen. California privet will be selected in most cases, but the flowering hedges of Japanese quince, Rosa rugosa and Berberis Thunbergii are growing in favor. For an evergreen hedge there are few quicker growers or more thoroughly hardy than the Siberian arbor vitae; though the American arbor vitae is cheaper. In transplanting hedge plants, especially evergreens, do not expose the roots to the sun. Setting out wilted plants is the cause of many failures. Unless the heads of evergreens are too large for the root growth they need not be cut back when first planted.

For the Dainty Woman.

A combination satchet and corset holder is made of white linen, on which the monogram can be embroidered. The bag is made large, with the lower half fashioned into a little pocket in which crepe paper envelopes of sachet can be kept. One always needs a corset holder, and the best material for one is white linen. Of course the finishing touches can be supplied in any dainty pattern.

—As Christmas is a legal holiday in New Jersey, The Daily Press will not be published tomorrow.

MRS. JANE DE MAURIAC DIES IN 91ST YEAR

Announcement of the death of Jane Wilson, wife of the late Jean Octave de Mauriac, in her ninety-first year, recalls to the minds of several Plainfielders the time when Mr. de Muriac taught a private school in this city, where the Schepflin building now stands, from 1843 to 1845, and he had the reputation of being one of the best tutors in this section of the country. Among his pupils now living are L. V. F. Randolph, Halstead C. Compton and Ira Randolph, and they speak in the higsest terms of their teacher of the early days. He wah eminently successful as an educator.

Mr. de Mauriac died a number of years ago. His wife passed away yesterday at Allendale, where she had been living for some time. The funeral service will be held from the late residence at 12:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

SERVICES ON XMAS DAY

mendous volume and power.

The first offering for the organ will be taken on Christmas Day, tomorrow, offerings being made at the 6 o'clock, 8 o'clock and 11 o'clock services. At the 6 o'clock early morning communion service the young people of the parish will be present.

The church is profusely decorated with trees, roping, holly wreaths and many carnations for the altar.

The children's carol service and Christmas tree will be held in the church on Monday evening, December 28, at 7:45. Each child will receive a box of Huyler's candies and the little ones are expected to bring presents of toys, games, groceries and fruits to be given in at this service. The tree will be beautiful with innumerable tiny electric lights of various colors.

The following musical program will be rendered by the choir tomorrow at the 11 o'clock service:

St. Peter's Lutheran Church.

Christmas services will be held at St. Peter's Lutheran church at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning, with a sermon by the pastor, Rev. John Duerschner. The service and festtival of the Sunday-school will be held at 8 o'clock in the evening, with distribution of gifts.

St. Stephen's Church.

Charles M. Suhr, organist and choirmaster at St. Stephen's church, has prepared an elaborate musical program for the 10 o'clock service at the church tomorrow morning. These numbers will comprise the program:

Processional, "O, Come All Ye Faithful," Fideles; anthem, "O, Zion that Bringest Good Tidings," Stainer; kyrie, in E flat, Foster; Gloria Tibi, in E flat, Nevin; hymn, "While Shepherds Watched," Gabriel; anthem, "O Be Joyful in the Lord," Lacey; Credo, in E flat, Foster; Sursum Corda, in E flat, Foster; Benedictus, in E flat, Foster; Agnes Dei, in E flat, Foster; hymn, "Draw Nigh," Dohini; Gloria in Excelsis, Old Chant; Amen, in A, Stainer; Nunc Dimitis, Langdon; recessional, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," Mendelssohn. There will be Holy Communion at 7:30 and 10 o'clock, with a sermon by the rector at the latter hour.

The solo parts will be taken by Miss Emily Lacey, soprano; Miss Christina Soresen, contralto; Rev. Morgan Ashley, tenor, and C. A. Sprowl, baritone.

Church of the Holy Cross.

Special interest will be attached to the Christmas services at the Church of the Holy Cross tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, when the handsome new organ will be used for the first time. H. Raymond Loder, organist and choirmaster, will be in charge, and the program will be as follows:

Processional, "O, Come All Ye Faithful," Novello; Venite, Clare; Te Deum, Bennett; Jubilate, Nevin; Kyrie and Gloria Tibi, Eyre; offertory anthem, "Drop Down Ye Heavens from Above," Barnby; Sanctus, Agnes Dei, Gloria in Excelsis; recessional, Eyre; "Angels from the Realms of Glory," Mendelssohn.

Can Be Made at Home.

The modified Florentine garment is between a jumper and a directoire, yet, withal, original. A dress of this kind was a figured satin, gathered slightly for a space of two inches at the waist line to give a short-waist effect. All outlines, including the rounded yoke, armholes, slashed right seam and hem, were trimmed with yellow satin, matching the yellow design upon the satin. The yoke, sleeves and pleated panel beneath the slashed seam were made of finely tucked white chiffon. The left underarm seam was closed with large yellow satin buttons to the beginning of the opened seam. You see this is a very simple style, even girlish, and not the least difficult to fashion.

MAKING SHEETS IN THE HOME IS BEST.

Every good housewife is interested in the care of sheets, and many of them will like to hear a few suggestions made by an economical and clever woman.

She said: "I never have my sheets made with a small hem on one end. There is always a three-inch hem on both ends—so there is no top or bottom—and the sheets wear just twice as long as they otherwise would. It is not difficult to do, for I always have my sheets made in the house by a seamstress, so they will be the right size. And, speaking of size, do you know what to do when ready-made linen sheets are too short for the beds?"

Of course I did not, so she told me that a false hem might be added, and either fagoted or hemstitched to the one already on the sheet. In this way the sheet could be easily made as long as desired, and the embroidery only added to the beauty of the sheet.

This is certainly very useful information, for many a mother has a tall boy who is constantly complaining that the sheets are too short. The addition of the false hem is quickly done, and the extra material required does not form a very large item in the family expense account.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

"The Rocky Mountain Express" is bound to arrive on time at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, as the red light will be hung out from the above station; there is no chance of her being side-tracked or abandoned, as she will run on special orders and come in on the fast track. This should be the signal for a big turn-out, as "The Rocky Mountain Express" will bring to town a theatrical company of decided merit, and a production of importance.

Manager Counihan has secured for his attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow afternoon and night the rural drama, "The Ninety and Nine," a play that will live forever, and one that bears the distinction of being the best ever, coming here clad in new raiment, new scenery. It is a play of human interest and strongly appeals to the heart of its hearers. The management has selected a company of star players, each and every one an artist of merit. In addition to this excellent cast, all the scenery and electrical effects will be carried.

Although "The Traveling Salesman," James Forbes' laughable comedy which comes to this city next Saturday afternoon and night, where it will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre, has combinations of the best conditions necessary for the success of a play—a good story to begin with, good players, good stage surroundsings, yet Herbert Corthell, who plays Bob Blake with this organization, claims that it was a black cat that insured the success of the piece, proving that superstition is not yet stifled. It is said that even Corthell is not entirely free from the belief that the cat had a little something to do in influencing the success of the piece. The incident concerning this happened on the stage the morning that the company assembled to hear the piece read. Corthell was seated near the author, Mr. Forbes, who had just begun the second act, when the actor felt a touch at the calf of his leg. He was a bit startled, and bent down to look beneath his chair. His eyes met the yellow ones of a little faintly disposed black cat. Not wishing to interrupt the reading, he said nothing, but a moment later the kitten walked over to Mr. Forbes, and rubbed against him. The others then saw the little animal, and of course the reading of the play stopped for a few moments to discuss how much luck the piece was going to have because of the cat's appearance at that special time. The fact that the play has been extraordinarily successful is attributed by many of the company to the superstition concerning a black cat.

Few attractions have gained such a wide reputation in so short a time as "The Light of Tomorrow," by Malcolm Douglas, which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night. The play is in four acts, the story of which is said to be the most beautiful ever written. It deals with a woman of the stage, who has grown up in life, ignorant of who her father and mother really are. However, she discovers her father who is on the verge of death and later on her mother, who is living in luxury, having remarried a wealthy man and all ends happily reunited.

"Take a trip around the world and be back home by bed-time," is the inviting proposition offered by Fred Niblo at the New Plainfield theatre, Wednesday evening, December 30, when he will give "Africa," the first of his delightful series of four pictorial "Talks of Travel in Distant Lands." These celebrated zig-zag journeys around the world are all graphically illustrated with hundreds of superbly colored views and moving pictures, as well as panormaic photographs. Mr. Niblo will present a different travel-talk each succeeding Wednesday night in the following order: "Egypt," January 6; "London," January 20; "Russia," January 27.

Cohan & Harris present the famous musical play, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night, with the original cast, new scenery, new costumes and a general overhauling under the personal direction of the celebrated actor-author-manager-composer-and-director, George M. Cohan. This production is now in its fourth year and because of the excellence of its book, the tunefulness of its music, the wit of its lines and the logic of its story still holds first place in the estimation of amusement lovers. There are beautiful girls and a cast of clever artists, including Scott Welch, Frances Gordon, Mary E. Cunard, Elizabeth Drew, Susan Chisnell, Eugene MacGregor, James A. Davett, James H. Manning, Harry Gwynette and twenty others.

Singers Works' Holiday Recess.

The big plant at the Singer Sewing Machine Company, at Elizabethport, shut down last evening for the holidays and to take an account of stock. The works will resume operations January 4, thus making the suspension only ten days. Last year the plant was closed for three weeks. The 7,000 employes, however, will not be paid until next Saturday. On the following Saturday they will be paid for a week and three days, and when they go back to work will not get any pay for two weeks.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Dec. 27, 1908.
By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Foreign missions. The new life in China.—Ezek. xxxvii, 1-14.

China is the most ancient nation in the world that is still playing an important part in the present day history of the world. It was once surrounded by a great wall to prevent association with the other peoples of the world, and, though the wall perished, the desire for seclusion still remained, and in their mysterious beliefs and methods of living the Chinese continued a secluded nation and an enigma to the rest of the world. But China is awakening. This mighty kingdom, with its millions of people, is beginning to see the light of a new day and to desire to advance along the lines of more modern civilization. The ground once considered so sacred now trembles beneath the weight of passing trains. The hatred of foreigners, which once seemed indigenous to the soil, is losing its hold upon the people. Missionaries are no longer so bitterly opposed, but in high places at least they are very much encouraged. The political condition of China is also rapidly changing. Moreover, the tendency of China seems to be to strongly affiliate with the United States. This fact will, if continued, bring a great opportunity to the Christians of America and place a great responsibility upon us. China is also adopting up to date educational methods. So that quietly, but surely, the great masses of China are beginning to move forward. How will the result affect the world's history? Not for evil, for God's hand is in this movement. The "yellow peril" is a bugaboo, and no one need be frightened by it. Instead we should rejoice in this movement from darkness to the light and should do all in our power through the gospel to hasten it.

The Presbyterian Christian Endeavor Manual gives the following "Mission Notes From China" illustrating its new life:

The nations that have wronged China may well fear the awakening of the giant to a realization of its vast power and hasten to make right, so far as possible, what has been wrong.

It was the great success of Japan that finally led China to see its weakness, and Japan is now leading China into a military prowess that will enable her also to conquer the mighty nations of Europe.

The first woman's newspaper in China shows the changed attitude toward women. So do the rapidly increasing number of girls' schools.

One of the most significant changes in China is the adoption of European dress, especially by the young business men. With this goes the cutting off of the cue.

About ten years ago a young Chinese in California received a letter from his father disowning him because he had become a Christian. A short time ago a young Chinese in Los Angeles wrote to his father the story of his conversion and asked him to paste the letter on the walls of his ancestral hall, so that many others, reading it, might turn to the Saviour. His father did so and replied, "When I know how I will tear down my idols and worship Christ with you."

The most powerful official in China, Yuan Shih Kai, viceroy of the capital province, though himself a Confucianist, wrote a book pleading for the most respectful treatment of the Christian missionaries, "since they come to persuade men to the practice of virtue."

Dr. J. Walter Lowry declares that more has happened in China during the last two years than during the previous thousand years.

The Chinese president of the Chinese Reform association says that more than 20,000 Chinese students are pursuing advanced modern courses of study, that more than 4,000,000 Chinese can speak English, that more than 10,000 American, English and European works have been translated into Chinese and that the courts are being remodeled after the English system. Some 5,000 common schools have been started in the one province of Canton.

BIBLE READINGS.

Isa. iii, 1-7; Nah. i, 15; Matt. xxviii, 19, 20; Luke xv, 1-10; John iii, 16; Acts i, 8; xiii, 1-3; Rom. x, 14, 15; Ps. ii; Rev. xxii, 17.

In Duty.

I am a Christian Endeavorer because I want to do something. A reverend and much loved brother walked into my study one day and asked me the meaning of "Endeavor." I immediately turned up my big lexicon and found that it comes from two French words—en (in), devoie (duty). What a splendid motto for a society—in duty, in duty. Duty is that which I am bound to do. Young men and women around me, boys and girls, old and lonely, sick and poor, are crying to me for help. The Christian Endeavor shows me how I can help them. I never allow my Christian Endeavor meetings to be frittered away over useless twaddle or matters of business. Time is too precious. Lives are at stake. Soul lives are being thrown away. Men and women are perishing, and I am "in duty." I must find work in God's world. No one can find it for me. If there is not an open door, I must knock a hole in the wall. There is a word of praise to be given, a buttonhole of flowers to be placed in the pulpit, a token of love for some one who wants it, and because I love to be always "in duty" therefore I am a Christian Endeavorer. — Australian Christian Endeavor Link.

A Training School.

Christian Endeavorers are "Christ's apprentices." The Christian Endeavor society is the training school.—Christian Endeavor News (England).

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

He said he was trying to get past the valet and the secretary; he thought if he could only get at the old man and demonstrate his stove he could make the sale. He could cook all right, that feller."

The colonel made no comment, and presently betook himself to his aunt. She was waiting for him in the parlor, playing solitaire. Through the open door the white bed that ought to have been Archie's was gleaming faintly. The colonel's brows met.

"Well, Bertie? Did you find anything?" Mrs. Winter inquired, smoothly.

"I'm afraid not; but here is the report." He gave it to her, even down to the cigar wrapper.

"It doesn't seem likely that Mr. Keatcham has anything to do with it," said she. "He, no doubt, has stolen many a little railway, but a little boy is too small game."

"Oh, I don't suspect Keatcham; but I wish I had caught the elevator tonight. He looked at me in a mighty queer way."

"Did you recognize his secretary as any one whom you ever saw before?" asked Mrs. Winter.

"I can't say," was the answer, given with a little hesitation. "I'm not sure."

"I don't think I quite understand you, Bertie; better make a clean breast of all you know. I'm getting a little worried myself."

The colonel reached across the cards and tapped his aunt's arm affectionately. He felt the warmest impulse toward sympathy for her that he had ever known; it glistened in his eyes. Mrs. Winter's cheeks slowly crimsoned; she turned her head, exclaiming, did she hear a noise; but the colonel's keen ears had not been warned. "Poor woman," he thought, "she is worried to death, but she will not admit it."

"Now, Bertie," said Mrs. Winter, calmly, but her elbow fell on her cards and spoiled a very promising game of Penelope's Web, "now, Bertie, what are you keeping back?"

Then, at last, the colonel told her of his experience in Chicago. She heard him quite without comment, and he could detect no shift of emotion in her demeanor of absorbed but perfectly calm attention, unless a certain tension of attitude and feature (as if, he phrased it, she were "holding herself in") might be so considered. And he was not sure of this. When he came to the words which stuck in his throat, the sentence about Miss Smith, she smiled frankly, almost laughed.

At the end of the recital—and the colonel had not omitted a word or a look in his memory—she merely said: "Then you think Cary Mercer has kidnaped Archie, and the nice-looking Harvard boy is helping him?"

"Don't you think it looks that way, yourself?"

She answered that question by another one: "But you don't think, do you, that Janet is the Miss Smith mentioned?"

His reply came after an almost imperceptible hesitation: "No!"

Again she smiled. "That is because you know Janet; if you didn't know her you would think the chances were in favor of their meaning her? Naturally! Well, I know Cary a little. I knew his father well. I don't believe he would harm a hair of Archie's head. He isn't a cruel fellow—at least not toward women and children. I've a notion that what he calls his wrongs have upset his wits a bit, and he might turn the screws on the Wall street crowd that ruined him. That is, if he had a chance; but he is poor; he would need millions to get even a chance for a blow at them. But a child, a lad who looks like his brother—no, you may be sure he wouldn't hurt Archie! He couldn't."

"But—the name, Winter; it is not such a common name; and the words about a lady of—of—" The polite soldier hesitated.

"An old woman, do you mean?" said Aunt Rebecca, with a little curving of her still unwrinkled upper lip.

"It sounds so complete," submitted her nephew.

"Therefore distrust it," she argued, dryly. "Gaboriau's great detective and Conan Doyle's both have that same maxim—not to pick out easy answers."

Winter smiled in his own turn. "Still, sometimes the easy answers are right. Now, here is the situation: I hear this conversation at the depot. I find one of the men on the same train with me. He, presumably, if he is Cary Mercer, and I don't think I can be mistaken in his identity—"

"Unless another man is making up as Cary!"

"It may seem conceited, but I don't think I could be fooled. This man had every expression of the other's, and I was too struck by the—I may almost call it malignant—look he had, not to recognize him. No, it was Mercer; he would certainly recognize you, and he would know who I am; he would not be called upon to snub me as a possible confidence man."

"That rankles yet, Bertie?"

He made a grimace and nodded.

"But," he insisted, "isn't it so? If he is up to some mischief, any mischief—doesn't care to have his kin meet him—that is the way he would act, don't you think?"

"He might be up to mischief, yet have no designs on his kin."

"He might," said the colonel, musingly. A thought which he did not confide to the shrewd old woman had just flipped his mind. But he went on with his plea.

"He avoids you; he avoids me. He is seen going into Keatcham's drawing room; that means some sort of an acquaintance with Keatcham, enough to talk to him, anyway. How much, I can't say. Then comes the attack by the robbers; he is in another car, so there is no call for him to do anything; there is no light whatever on whether he had anything to with the robbery.

"Then we come here. Keatcham has the room next but one. Archie goes into his own room; we see him go; I am outside, directly outside; it is simply impossible for him to go out into the hall without my seeing him; besides, I found the doors outside all locked except the one to the right where we entered your suite; then we may assume that he could not go out. He could not climb out of locked windows on the third floor down a sheer descent of some 40 or 50 feet. Your last room to the right, Miss Smith's bedroom, is a corner room; besides, she was in it; that excludes every exit except that to the left. We find Mrs. Wigglesworth was absent; and there were evidences of—an—an attack of some kind carefully hidden, afterward. But there is no sign of the boy. I watch the rooms. If he is hidden somewhere in Keatcham's rooms, the chances are, after Keatcham goes, they will try to take him off. I don't think it probable that Keatcham knows anything about the kidnaping; in fact, it is wildly improbable. Well, Keatcham goes; immediately I get into the room. The valet and the young man visiting Keatcham, young Arnold, let me in without the slightest demur. Either they know nothing of the boy or somehow they have got him away, else they would not let me in so easily. Maybe they are ignorant and the boy is gone, both. We go to the rooms very soon after; there is not the smallest trace of Archie."

"How did he get out?"

The subscribers, being the commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas, of the County of Union, by order of said court, entered on the ninth day of December, 1908, to estimate and assess benefits conferred by the permanent improvement of streets under the ordinances of the City of Plainfield entitled: "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of certain streets and portions of streets of the City of Plainfield with permanent and durable Brick Pavement, and to Provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits," approved July 1, 1907, "An Ordinance to amend an Ordinance entitled 'An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of Streets of the City of Plainfield with permanent and durable Brick Pavement, and to Provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the Collection of Assessments for Benefits,' adopted by the Common Council July 1st, 1907, and approved by the Mayor July 1st, 1907," approved July 13, 1908, and "An Ordinance for the Permanent Improvement of Certain Streets and Portions of streets of the City of Plainfield, with permanent and durable Macadam Pavement, and to Provide the Necessary Funds in Advance of the collection of assessments for benefits," adopted by the Common Council May 4, 1908; re-adopted by the Common Council June 8, 1908, notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor, directing the permanent improvement of, with permanent and durable vitrified brick pavement:

Somerset street, from the northerly side line of Front street to the bridge over Green Brook;

Watchung avenue, from the southerly side line of East Front street to the southerly side line of East Fourth street, exclusive of the portion of said Watchung avenue already provided with brick pavement;

Park avenue, from the southerly side line of Front street to the southerly side line of Fourth street;

East Fourth street, from the westerly side line of Sycamore street to the easterly side line thereof;

Arlington avenue, from the northerly side line of West Seventh street to the southerly side line thereof; also from the northerly side line of West Eighth street to the southerly side line thereof;

And directing the improvement of, with durable macadam pavement:

North avenue, from the northeasterly curb line of Berckman street to the southwesterly curb line of Terrill road;

Leland avenue, from the present macadam on East Front street to the present macadam on South avenue;

Netherwood avenue, from the present macadam on East Front street to the northwesterly curb line of East Second street;

Monroe avenue, from the present macadam on West Seventh street to the present macadam on West Eighth street;

West Eighth street, from the present macadam on Monroe avenue to the city line;

West Third street, from the present macadam at Monroe avenue to the present macadam at Clinton avenue;

Clinton avenue, from the present macadam at West Third street to the city line;

which ordinances were adopted under and by virtue of the act of the Legislature entitled, "An act to authorize the improvement of streets and highways in cities of this State and to provide for the payment of the expense of the same," approved June 13, 1898, and the amendments and supplements thereto to which several ordinances reference is hereby made for greater certainty:

The subscribers, the Commissioners appointed by the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Union as aforesaid, and for the purpose of performing the duties and executing the powers conferred by said acts of the Legislature, having duly qualified as required by law, do hereby pursuant to the order of said court, give notice that on Tuesday, the fifth day of January, 1909, at 8 o'clock P. M., at the Council Chamber, No. 149 North Avenue, in the said City of Plainfield, said commissioners will proceed with the discharge of their said duties and hear any person or persons in interest who may present themselves to be heard, and at such time and place, and at such other times and places to which they may adjourn for that purpose, the said commissioners will attend and give a public hearing to those persons who may desire to be heard.

Dated Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 12, 1908.

THOMAS J. HUGHES,
HARRY B. MacDONALD,
ANDREW J. GAVETT,
Commissioners.

WESTFIELD WOODMEN TAKE FIRST PLACE

Rolling in good form the Westfield Woodmen took three games and incidentally first place from the Saengerbund team, in the fraternal league at Campbell's alleys last night.

Ortleib's 213 was high score. The scores:

| Woodmen. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Miller | 187 | 154 | 168 |
| Snyder | 118 | 177 | 143 |
| Tobin | 155 | 159 | 123 |
| Koons | 198 | 196 | 144 |
| Ortleb | 178 | 191 | 213 |
| | 836 | 877 | 797 |
| Saengerbund. | | | |
| Wirth | 152 | 176 | 138 |
| Luthman | 146 | 162 | 144 |
| Mengenbacker | 152 | 135 | 149 |
| F. Harrold | 142 | 148 | ... |
| B. Harrold | 136 | ... | 116 |
| Koller | ... | 101 | 142 |
| | 728 | 722 | 693 |

The Woodmen by taking all three games in the Fraternal League last night, are now in first place.

The Saengerbund team after losing the first game made a change in their lineup, but it failed in its purpose.

Every ship needs an anchor; so does a bowling team. Ortleb was strictly on the job last night.

Bowling for turkeys tonight at Campbell's alleys.

The next series in the Fraternal League is next Monday night, when the Elks meet the Wetumpka five.

REPORT ON JERSEY BANKS.

Trust Companies Lead in Deposits—Resources Amount to $301,302,655.76.

A statement showing the condition of New Jersey banking institutions has been issued by David O. Watkins, State Commissioner of Banking and Insurance. The report covers the close of business on November 27 and shows that all classes of banks have resources amounting to $301,302,655.76. This total is divided as follows:

Nineteen State banks, $16,943,752.70; twenty-six saving banks, $100,626,037.55, and seventy-five trust companies, $183,732,875.51.

In all of the banks the amount of money on deposit is $162,630,299.51. The trust companies lead in deposits with a total of $135,838,728.51. The State banks are second with $13,321,902.55, and the savings banks last with $3,469(568|45. The banking houses and fixtures of all three classes are valued at $17,089,300.14, divided as follows: State banks, $369,295.65; savings banks, $1,401,474.74; trust companies, $5,218,529.75. The surplus funds of the banks are: State, $1,070,000; savings banks, $7,210,128.71; trust companies, $17,102,201.88.

Mrs. Theodore Gray, of West Front street, who recently returned from the hospital, where she was under treatment for typhoid fever, is rapidly gaining in strength.

RED MEN IN CAMP EAT CORN AND VENISON

Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., initiated four candidates last night, nominated officers for the ensuing term, and then had a feast of corn and venison. There was a large attendance and heap much fun was crowded into the entertainment following the business session. Short talks were made by David C. Allen, Charles L. Holstein, John T. Green, Charles Halliwell, George Ferguson and William Lyons; Mr. Pope sang and James Halliwell and Fred Kiederling played selections on the mandolin and guitar.

These candidates for officers were selected to be voted on at the next meeting, Wednesday, December 30: Past sachem, Charles Halliwell; second, David C. Allen; senior sachem, William Lyons; junior sachem, Jerry Griffin, Joseph Cullen, Bert Hansen; chief of records, Charles L. Holstein; keeper of wampum, John T. Green; trustees, Peter Sheridan George Ferguson; representative, John W. Ludgate, Thomas Parsons, George Ferguson; alternate representative, C. L. Holstein, John T. Green.

STOKES ANSWERS FORT ON DICKINSON REPORT

The intimation by Governor Fort that former Governor Stokes had a hand in preparing the report of Secretary Samuel D. Dickinson, of the Department of State, bearing on elections and voting machines, was denied by Mr. Stokes last night. Governor Fort refused to accpet Colonel Dickinson's report, which did not coincide with his own views of primary reform legislation and the use of the voting machine. Mr. Stokes last night said:

"I did not write or prepare a line of the recent report of the Secretary of State in question. I have already discussed, in my messages as Governor, most of the questions contained therein, and if I had wanted to say anything upon the subjects I should say it in a statement of my own, or as a member of the commission appointed by Govrenor Fort to offer suggestions in connection with the primary and election laws. There is not the slightest reason for the use of my name, either officially or personally, in connection with the matter."

The charges and countercharges regarding the alleged injection of politics into the report have created quite a stir in official circles.

PERSONAL.

Winfred Crimes, of The Daily Press composing room, will spend Christmas at Providence, R. I.

Mrs. C. F. Corning, of Baltimore, is visiting her mother, Mrs. John Valiant, of Myrtle avenue, the borough.

Mrs. Fannie Stires and son, of this city, have been visiting at the home of Mrs. Lizzie Rittenhouse at Quakertown.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, has returned from a visit with friends at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Stewart, of West Seventh street, will leave Saturday for Bermuda. They will be away several months.

Mrs. William Yutzler, of Jersey City, will entertain on Christmas Day Mr. and Mrs. Horace Billington and Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard, of this city.

Rev. and Mrs. George A. Warner, of Washington avenue, are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a daughter at their home this morning.

William J. Tallamy, of Union street, has about recovered from an attack of typhoid fever, and he will be able to leave the house within a short time.

T. E. Currin, Jr., paying teller at the First National Bank, who recently received a severe injury of the foot by a piano stool falling on it, has returned to his position at the bank. He still suffers a great deal from the injury.

The Cake.

One will often spoil a good cake by heating cold butter to mix with the sugar. The heating makes the butter oily and the measurements are often wrong. Instead of melting the butter, heat the mixing crock with warm water, wipe it dry and put in the butter. Heat the sugar and pour over the butter, then mix the two with a potate masher, or, better, with the fingers.

Grace M. E. Church.

The morning and evening services at Grace M. E. church on Sunday will be marked by special musical programs under the direction of Miss Alice Carroll, organist and choirmaster. The quartet will consist of Miss Josephine Martin, soprano; Mrs. H. DeMeza, contralto; Edson C. Martin, bass; Dyckman Winckler, violin. Rev. Ora J. Shoop, pastor, will preach in the morning on the theme, "Immanuel or the Profound Significance of the Incarnation," and in the evening his topic will be "The Changed Calendar."

This will be the morning musical program:

Anthem, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," Schnecker; "Te Deum in B Minor," Buck; soprano solo, "Come Unto me," (Messiah) Handel. The evening program follows: Anthems, "Arise, Shine," Buck; "Sing Alleluia Forth," Buck; "Come Ye to Bethlehem," Danks; soprano solo and chorus, with violin obligato, "O Holy Night," Adam.

THINGS WE KNOW, BUT NEED REPEATING.

In these days when it is the thing either to use flat-topped writing tables or to keep the lid of the desk down most of the time, it behooves the careful housekeeper to answer her letters promptly. Otherwise a littered desk is unavoidable.

System in correspondence is the only way this can be managed. As soon as a letter arrives open it carefully—a torn envelope is far from sightly—and if it is of no particular importance and does not require a reply, destroy it at once.

Separate your business letters, invitations and correspondence into three piles and have a pigeonhole for each. Keep them there until answered; then if you wish to save them file them under the name of the sender in one of the alphabeted boxes that come for the purpose.

If this not not done it is senseless to keep letters, as they never can be found when wanted, and make the file in a closet in the same room as the desk, or, if there is none, stow it away in the lowest drawer, out of the road.

Letters that require an answer the same day should be put under a weight, in a conspicuous spot, where they will not slip from the memory. Safer yet is it to answer them at once, even when you think you have no time. You can usually manage it somehow, and it means much for the busy woman not to have her mind burdened with trifling duties.

Writing paper and envelopes should have their special place. On a flat-topped desk this should be one of the racks that come for the purpose in leather, burnt wood or brass. They may be bought rather reasonably and are a big factor in a neat desk.

In compartment desks have special places for the paper and others for the envelopes. On account of dust, but a small supply of each should be kept out at once if the compartments are uncovered.

Stamps, pens and pencils should have their own nooks and be kept in them.

CELEBRATE THE NATIVITY

Elaborate Music in the Protestant Churches in City and Borough Tomorrow.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL EXERCISES TOO

Augmented Choirs and Orchestral Accompaniments—Decorations Particularly Fine.

Here are some of the Christmas programs to be renered in the local churches:

Trinity Reformed Church.

Special music will be rendered at Trinity Reformed church tomorrow morning, under the direction of Arthur L. Titsworth, organist and choirmaster, by the quartet choir comprising Miss Etta S. Raybert, soprano; Miss Winifred C. Carroll, contralto; Edmund D. Young, tenor; Fred S. Cutter, bass; assisted by Mrs. Violet Truell Johnston, violin, and Elmer Wheeler, flute.

This program of music will be rendered:

Prelude, selection from "Lucia," Donizetti, violin, flute and organ; Te Deum, Harrison Millard; response, "Hear Us Lord," Henry M. Dunham; anthem, "Angels from the Realms of Glory," Harry Rowe Shelley, quartet; "Holy Night," William Luton Wood, Miss Etta S. Raybert; anthem, "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks," W. H. Neidlinger, quartet; postlude, "Serenade," A. E. Titl, violin, flute and organ. The offertory at the evening service will be a contralto solo, "The Virgins Lullaby," Dudley Buck, by Miss Winifred C. Carrol.

The evening service will be in charge of the Sunday-school, under the direction of Superintendent F. E. Smith. The school will sing carols, and there will be recitations, etc., anthems by the choir, assisted by an orchestra. The church has been elaborately decorated for the occasion. The pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, will preach an appropriate sermon in the morning and also have a few words to say to the school at night.

First Presbyterian Church.

Special music will be a feature at both services at the First Presbyterian church tomorrow. Miss Anna Lucretia Case, soprano, having fully recovered from her recent illness, will sing as usual at the services. These selections will be rendered at the morning service under the direction of Clifford S. Braider, organist and choirmaster:

Contralto solo, "Prince of Peace," from "The Infant King," Bullard; tenor solo, "Birthday of the King," Neidlinger; anthems, "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," Nevin; "Arise, Shine," Stephenson.

At the evening service the program will be as follows:

"Soprano solo, "Under the Silent Stars," Coombs; baritone solo, "Nazareth," Gounod; violin solos, "Berceuce Goddard;" "Hymne de St. Cecile," St. Saens; trio, "Cavatina," Raff, piano, organ and violin; anthems, "Arise, Shine," Reed; "Star of the Orient," Shelley; "O, Babe Divine," Dressler. The quartet choir will be assisted by Miss Clara Van Fleet ,pianist, and Anton Gloeckner, violinist.

First Baptist Church.

The service at the First Baptist church, tomorrow morning by the chorus choir, under the direction of Howard M. Case, organist, will include several anthems. The solo parts will be taken by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Miss Gertrude Hinz, contralto; William Holmes, bass, and George C. Smith, tenor. The numbers will be as follows:

Prelude, Dubois, violin and organ; anthem, "O Lovely Voices," King; "Glory to God," Noble; "Alleluia," Neidlinger; carol, "Bethlehem Land," Fitzhugh; offertory, "Christ's Incarnation," Foster. Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist, will assist at this service.

In the afternoon the Sunday-school will hold a special service at 3 o'clock, consisting of carols by the main school, primary and junior departments; also recitations by the younger members of the school and anthems by the church choir. This service will be in charge of Superintendent George H. Batchelor. There will be no evening service at the church.

Congregational Church.

Under the direction of Charles L. Lewis, a special musical program will be rendered at the Congregational church, tomorrow morning. The pastor, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, will preach a sermon on the theme, "The Sign." The musical program will be as follows:

Voluntary, violin and organ, Miss Helen Patterson and Mrs. Charles Barnes; "Nazareth," Gounod, male chorus; "The Birthday of the King," Neidlinger, C. L. Lewis and male chorus; violin solo, Miss Helen Pat-

MUSIC THE FEATURE AT GRACE CHURCH

Elaborate Christmas music was rendered at the 10:30 o'clock service at Grace church, yesterday morning, under the direction of William E. MacClymont, organist and choirmaster. There was also an appropriate sermon by the rector, Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson. The attendance of worshippers was large. The solo parts were taken by Elmer D. Cutting, tenor; Arthur Chamberlain, baritone, and Mrs. Theodore Mantz, soprano. The musical numbers follow:

Te Deum, Dudley Buck; Jubilate, Jordan; offertory, "Behold I Bring You Glad Tidings;" "Halleluia Chorus," (from the Messiah) Handel; communion service, Tours; recessional.

The Christmas music will be repeated tomorrow morning and in the afternoon the Sunday-school will take part in a special program appropriate to the occasion, including the singing of carols. The Christmas festival of the Sunday-school will be held Tuesday, in the afternoon, for the small children and in the evening for the older members.

ELABORATE SERVICES AT HOLY CROSS CHURCH

Holy Cross church was filled with worshippers at all three services yesterday morning. The first communion was held at 6 o'clock and even at that early hour the attendance was notably large. A second service was held at 8 o'clock and at 11 o'clock a special musical program was rendered, followed by a sermon from the rector, Rev. George H. Warner. Donations were generous, in keeping with the spirit of the day.

The interior was elaborately decorated. Green pine trees lined the walls and covered the upper portions of the pillars, with ropes of evergreen swinging from place to place. Holly wreaths hung from the arches and in the windows, and above the altar was a large star of holly leaves brilliantly lighted with electric bulbs.

Conspicuous, both in its beauty and its sweet music, was the huge new pipe organ which was being used for the first time. It is not yet complete in its mechanism, however, and only one division of the instrument's system of pipes was in operation.

The men and boys' choirs were in full vestments, under the leadership of H. Raymond Loder, who was also the organist. This program was rendered:

Processional, "O, Come All Ye Faithful," Novello; Venite, Clare; Te Deum, Bennett; Jubilate, Nevin; Kyrie and Gloria Tibi, Eyre; offertory anthem, "Drop Down Ye Heavens From Above," Barnaby; Sanctus, Agnus Dei, Gloria in Excelsis; recessional, Eyre; "Angels From the Realm of Glory," Mendelssohn.

Rev. Mr. Warner's sermon was brief but forceful, and to use his own term, was a "simple message of Christmas cheer." He spoke of the wise men journeying to Bethlehem, guided by a star, the manger where lay the new-born child, and called attention to the lesson of the humble birth of the Savior and his life as He grew up, taking advantage of all opportunities to perform deeds of love and kindness and lighten the burdens of those whom He found suffering. Christ had comforted the stricken, relieved others of grief and woe and written in imperishable words the great lesson of helpfulness and love.

Life was declared by the speaker to be a hollow farce and a barren mockery if one lived indifferent to his fellow man, without reaching out a helping hand to those needing consolation and cheer.

The best gift a person could possibly receive, he declared, was the taking of Christ into his life and heart, and the best gift one could give to Christ would be one's own self.

FRIENDS STATEMENT EXONERATE H. B. SUYDAM.

Friends of the late Councilman Harry Bennett Suydam, who died of wounds inflicted by John C. Lumsden, a New York inventor, have issued a statement setting forth their side of the transaction with Lumsden. They exonerate Mr. Suydam in every particular from any wrongdoing or irrigularg dealings.

Among the statements is the following: George S. Jacob, as treasurer of the Electric Vibratator Company, had told Mr. Suydam that, if, as a broker, he, the latter, could make the requisite sale of the stock, he could pay over to Mr. Lumsden any part of the proceeds thereof that would have otherwise come to Mr. Jacob, up to the amount of $650."

WEISS ARRESTS MAN NEWARK POLICE WANT

Charles Carroll, who suddenly disappeared on Wednesday from the home of John C. Cooper, near Warrenville, where he had been employed as a farm hand, and for whom the local police had been requested to look-out, was captured by Chief George Weiss, of the borough, yesterday morning. The man had just arrived in town and was walking down Watchung avenue when intercepted. A few minutes earlier he had been recognized by J. A. Herbermann, of Somerset street, who had known him in Somerville a couple of years ago.

Mrs. Cooper, who missed some articles after Carroll left the farm, was notified but wrote Chief Weiss that it would be impossible for her to come here to press the charge against the man, so that no effort will be made towards prosecuting him, but he will be held for the Newark police, who claim that he is wanted there for several similar offenses.

Carroll claimed, while working as a farm hand for Mr. Cooper, that he was a son of Captain Carroll, of the Newark police force, and to Chief Weiss he stated that he had been employed in the jail there as a stool pigeon, but had been "shown up" and was obliged to leave town to escape the ire of those whom he had informed against.

This story was communicated to Captain Carroll and was flatly denied, both as to his being a son and to having acted as stool pigeon, but requested that he be held until an officer could be sent for him.

The articles he was supposed to have taken from the Cooper farm included a gold ring, a child's bank containing $13 and a quantity of clothing, none of which was found on his person when arrested. He had been employed by Mr. Cooper about two months and was considered trustworthy.

VETERAN PRESIDENTIAL VOTER HAS PASSED AWAY

Israel P. LaRue, one of the oldest and best known residents of the West End, died at his home on Liberty street, Thursday afternoon. He had been ill about six weeks with a complication of troubles that began with a heavy cold.

Mr. LaRue was born at Mount Airy, East Amwell township, Hunterdon countty, on February 18, 1827, and he lived in that vicinity for over half a century. He was prominent in politics and was collector of taxes for East Amwell and a justice of the peace there for many years. He removed to Plainfield in 1888 and had always resided on Liberty street. He never engaged in any business locally.

Mr. LaRue was a life-long Republican and it was his boast that he had voted for sixteen presidential candidates, his first ballot being cast for Zachary Taylor. The Whig party then opposed what are now known as the Democrats and when the Republican party was organized he voted for its first nominee, John C. Fremont. His last ballot was cast in November for President-elect Taft.

Mr. LaRue is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Charles C. Randolph, of West Seventh street. He was a member of Hope chapel, which he joined when he first came to Plainfield, and the pastor, Rev. L. R. Howard, will conduct the funeral at his late home, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, will assist and burial will be in Hillside cemetery.

MUHLENBERG'S NURSES HAVE JOLLY GOOD TIME.

Christmastide was appropriately celebrated at the Nurses' Home of Muhlenberg Hospital, Thursday night, when the nurses together with a majority of the local physicians gathered at the home and enjoyed the festivities, which included a magic lantern exhibition of "famous" cartoons.

Henry L. Hall, acting as Santa Claus, distributed gifts to the nurses from the tree. A row of stockings, made of red cambric and quite large in proportion, were each filled with presents for the nurses and this feature caused no end of fun. The affair terminated with an informal musical program.

Announce Engagement.

At a Christmas dinner with covers laid for eighteen, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Berry, of Sycamore avenue, yesterday announced the engagement of their daughter, Mildred Elizabeth, to Francis Maurice Anderson, of Alabama, son of Rev. Dr. Thomas D. Anderson, of Albany, N. Y.

ZVOLANEK BADLY HURT

New Brunswick Undertaker's Auto Crashes into Wagon Injuring Florist.

NO LIGHTS ON THE CAR.

An Accident on a Lonely Road in Greenbrook Section—Autoists Aid the Victim.

While speeding along the county road between Harris lane and the mountain in the Greenbrook section, early last night, W. J. McDede, of New Brunswick, drove his car into a wagon driven by Anthon C. Zvolanek, a Greenbrook florist, with serious results. Zvolanek was hurled from his wagon by the crash and was badly hurt, his back being sprained, his head and face bruised and it is believed that he is also injured internally. The wagon was a total wreck.

At the time of the accident, McDede, in company with two State detectives, was scouring the Greenbrook section in search of George R. Holman, who murdered his wife in New Brunswick yesterday. According to the story told by Zvolanek, McDede was driving his car at the rate of forty miles an hour and without any lights.

Zvolanek says that he observed the automobile some distance behind him and turned out to the right, allowing the middle of the road to the automobilists, but that McDede drove his car into his wagon. Assistance was rendered the injured man and after he was taken to his home, McDede gave him his card, promising to return later.

The automobile number was 41197.

50,000 SOUVENIR CARDS IN THE CHRISTMAS MAIL

The business of the local postoffice during the past week was the heaviest in its history, and Postmaster E. H. Bird and his assistants were taxed to their utmost to handle all of the incoming and outgoing mail. The registry department handled over five hundred packages in two days.

The greatest business was done in the sale of one cent postage stamps for postal cards. Between Monday and Thursday night over 70,000 one cent stamps were disposed of, to say nothing of the enormous sale of stamps of other denominations, which far exceeded the expectation of Postmaster Bird. During the week more than 50,000 souvenir post cards went through the office and this morning there were fully 10,000 remaining to be delivered. The office today presented a sight almost equal to that of yesterday.

There were five extra men employed in the office to assist the clerks, while every carrier had an assistant to help in the delivery of mail, increasing the office force by twenty-five.

KRIS KRINGLE'S VISIT TO SAENGERBUND HALL

Under the auspices of the Gesang and Turn Verein a Christmas entertainment was given at Saengerbund Hall yesterday afternoon for the children of the members. A. Wolff was chairman of arrangements, comprising Frank Siedler, Henry Rummel, Mrs. A. Schlick, Mrs. Charles F. Meyer, Mrs. A. Luttman and Mrs. A. Stenzenberger.

This program was rendered:

Song, "Stille Nacht;" recitation, Edna Stenzenberger; piano solo, Gerald Linke; recitations, L. Beuman and Edward Schempp; song, "O Tennen Baum," recitation, Otto Keller; vocal solo, Dolly Larry; recitations, Edna Stenzenberger and Jack Downly. The program was concluded by all singing "My Country 'tis of Thee," after which the children marched around a Christmas tree and received suitable gifts from the committee. Refreshments were also served.

Husband Arrested Xmas Eve.

Charles Cox was arrested in the borough Thursday night on the complaint of his wife, who charges that he has not done anything to provide for his family for nearly two months. He was arrested once before on the same charge but was let off on a promise to do better, and for a time drove a hack in this city. There are two small children and Mrs. Cox has been working to provide for them. He will be given a hearing tonight before Recorder Dolliver.

500 CHILDREN MADE HAPPY BY THE ELKS

According to its annual custom, Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., entertained 500 children, Thursday afternoon, treating them to a moving picture show at the Bijou theatre and then giving each little guest candy and oranges and a ticket calling for useful articles. The number enjoying the beneficence of the Elks was larger than ever before but everyone of the children was provided for.

The youngsters began gathering at 2 o'clock and the theatre, which was generously donated by Proprietor Louis Diehl, was quickly filled to overflowing. A vacant store adjoining was put in commission to house those who were unable to gain admission to the first performance and they had a hilarious and somewhat noisy time until their turn came. At the conclusion of each show, every child was given an orange, a pound box of candy and a ticket which entitled the holder to a skating cap, a pair of mittens and a pair of stockings if presented at Levy Brothers' store before January 1.

An urgent appeal was received by the Elks from a charitably inclined woman for shoes and undergarments to be distributed during the day and the lodge men were quick to respond. Members of the committee procured an automobile and a number of homes where articles of dress were sadly needed were visited. The wants were supplied although it is not the custom of the Elks to go into this form of Christmas giving.

The members of the lodge who arranged and had charge of the affair comprised Herbert Buxton, D. J. Carney, H. C. VanEmburgh, Lawrence Marshall, J. J. Kenney and W. J. Counihan. Beside the committee there were also present Exalted Ruler Clarence Teel, John H. Cose, S. P. T. Wilbur, W. H. Raymond, Francis J. Blatz, Chief P. S. Kiely, William Dunham and others.

IMPRESSIVE MIDNIGHT MASS AT ST. JOSEPH'S

Midnight mass at St. Joseph's church Christmas eve was attended by a throng of the devout. Father Brennan acted as celebrant at the solemn high mass; Father Hillarron, of Hoboken, as deacon, and Father Miller, pastor of the church, as subdeacon.

Father Miller preached, and an elaborate musical program was rendered under the direction of Choirmaster James Bailey. The music, Cecelian and Gregorian, consisted of "The Mass of the Angels," by Biederman, in six numbers, and "Adeste Fideles," by Novello, as an offertory. There was also a duet by Alfred La Porte and James Bailey. The choir was composed of fifty men and boys, and was accompanied by an orchestra under the direction of B. A. Paroubek. Mrs. Harry De Meza acted as organist.

The church was beautifully decorated with evergreens and the altar was banked with cut flowers. Above the tabernacle was a large star composed of holly and evergreens and brilliantly illuminated with electric lights, provided by the Sisters of Mercy of St. Joseph's Home.

Other masses were celebrated on Christmas morning by Father Miller. The low mass was held at 8:30 and at 10:30 a mass, during which these special musical selections were rendered: Te Deum, "Mass of Angels," by the choir, and as an offertory, Adeste Fideles, with a duet by James Bailey and A. E. La Porte.

MISS ANNIE T. BODINE BECOMES MRS. R. C. PUGH.

Miss Annie Tomlinson Bodine and Ray Clifford Pugh were married last night at 7:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's father, William C. Bodine, on Jackson avenue. Rev. John Y. Broek, of Trinity Reformed church, performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a traveling costume of broadcloth with hat to match.

An informal reception and supper followed the nuptial rite. The decorations were of evergreens and holly with a sprinkling of red. A number of beautiful presents were received by the couple. They will leave in a few days for Seneca Falls, N. Y., where the groom is employed. He is a native of this city, being a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Pugh, of West Fourth street.

State Prison Filling Up.

Eighteen convicts were received at the State prison at Trenton during the past week and eight others were discharged. Among those received was Thomas Johnson, negro, from Union county, to serve seven years for assault. The population of the jail is now 1,454, the highest on record.

THIEVES STEAL TRUNK FILLED WITH PRESENTS

Councilman L. B. Woolston, of the borough, informed the police, yesterday, that a trunk full of Christmas presents, forwarded over the Jersey Central from Newark by his daughter, Mrs. William Woodland, of that city, had been stolen from the North avenue station some time Thursday night. It left Newark on the train due here at 6:09, and according to the receipts of the baggage master was received at that time, but when Mr. Woolston called for it, it could not be found. It was evidently picked up from the platform during the Christmas rush.

The police believe that trunk thieves were operating about the depot, as early this morning two young men, Frank Schroper and Edward Killoran, found a trunk in the middle of the road on East Second street, near Watchung avenue. It was taken to headquarters and opened, revealing a quantity of women's clothing. There was no mark of any kind to show to whom it belongs and there is a possibility that it was removed from the station platform the same as the Woolston trunk.

AMUSEMENT PLACES ARE WELL PATRONIZED

The entertainments provided at the local places of amusement yesterday attracted thousands of people and all report a big holiday business. At the New Plainfield theatre, Manager Counihan presented "Ninety and Nine," afternoon and evening, to capacity audiences. The play, which is an old favorite, was well receiver and was produced in a faultless manner by a first-class company.

There was a continuous performance at Proctor's theatre from 10 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night and standing room only was the rule. More than 4,500 attended the shows. The program of moving pictures, the Cameraphone selections and illustrated songs, together with the travelogue were the best yet presented. There will be a complete change of program today.

The holiday crowd which thronged the Bijou theatre yesterday thoroughly enjoyed the fine moving pictures, including the special feature films. Today's feature will be "Making Moving Pictures." The Bijou has been redecorated in green and red, making it more attractive than ever.

The double attraction of special films and refined musical vaudeville act offered at the Park theatre, yesterday, attracted large crowds all day. The audience showed its appreciation of the excellent pictures and the performance of Musical Beimel. The bill will be repeated today.

A JOLLY GOOD PARTY.

Among the many delightful Christmas gatherings yesterday was one at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Force, on Duer street, where they, with their daughter, Miss Lillian A. Force, entertained Mr. Force's sister, Mrs. L. K. Prescott, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hardy, of Brooklyn, and Miss Etta Raybert, of this city. The home was beautifully decorated with holly and Xmas roping, making the house most attractive. The dining room table in particular was tastefully decorated and in its centre was raised an imitation chimney with Santa himself on top. From this chimney strings were run to the respective covers, the strings being attached to cards bearing a good natured "knock." Gifts were exchanged in a novel fashion, the recepients being directed by cards bearing clues to the whereabouts of the presents in every corner of the house, the guests having real good sport in finding what Santa had brought them.

Juniors' Xmas Celebration.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., had a Christmas tree celebration Thursday night, following the business of the evening. A large tree was completely covered with gifts of every description suitable to every member, and these were distributed by David Bodine, who acted the part of Santa Claus. Another attraction was the quoit tournament with the members of Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., the latter taking three of the five games.

F. A. A. Dance.

A dance given by the Plainfield Athletic Association Thursday night in the dancing academy hall attracted a large gathering in spite of the numerous other Christmas evere celebrations, and was therefore a big success. Jack Martin and James Emery were in charge of the arrangements. Squires orchestra furnished the music.

EDWIN BROWN A SUICIDE

Youthful Restaurant Proprietor Hangs Himself at His Home on Christmas Eve.

BODY FOUND BY GRANDMOTHER

Family at a Loss to Explain Cause of the Rash Act—Was of a Nervous Temperament.

Edwin Fiske Brown, Jr., proprietor of the restaurant on North avenue formerly conducted by E. H. Cleverly, committed suicide at the home of his mother, Mrs. Mary L. Brown, of Washington avenue, some time Thursday night. The deed was accomplished by making a noose out of a clothesline and suspending it from a gas jet projecting from the wall of a room on the third floor. What impelled the young man to take his life is a mystery to his family and friends as there was nothing about his business or other affairs to occasion him any exceptional worry. He was of a decidedly nervous temperament and the theory has been advanced that he became unstrung through the trying ordeal of a Christmas rush.

The discovery of the suicide was made by Brown's grandmother, Mrs. Mary E. Armstrong, seventy six years old, who came from Brooklyn Thursday afternoon to spend the holiday with the young man and his mother. Mrs. Brown was at her restaurant all through the evening and Mrs. Armstrong had been with her but left for the house shortly before midnight. Brown had been missing since late in the afternoon and when she reached the residence she decided to see if he was about. His coat and hat were on the hall rack but a call for him failed to bring any response. She began a search from room to room and at last reached the attic floor. When she struck a light in one of the rooms, almost the first sight that greeted her eyes was the body of her grandson, half crouched on the floor but still held up by the rope.

Mrs. Armstrong almost swooned at the discovery and it was several minutes before she regained her composure sufficiently to go down stairs for assistance. She went to the home of Clifford Manning, directly next door, but could not arouse anyone and then returned to the house. She gave way to a fit of grief on the front porch and was crying and moaning by turns as L. W. Randolph, the druggist chanced on his way home. He was attracted by the woman's actions and ascended the walk to ask if he could be of assistance.

Mrs. Armstrong informed him of what had happened and Mr. Randolph hurried to the attic to see if anything could be done. He discovered the body to be cold and without waiting to cut it down called Dr. Adams and then notified the borough police. He afterward went to the restaurant to get Mrs. Brown and brought her to the house in a cab, giving a pretext for getting her to accompany him. The mother and son have been devoted and she was prostrated by the news. A picture of Mrs. Brown was beside the body when it was found and it is presumed that he had it in his hands just previous to his death.

Brown was at his place of business for the last time on Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock. He was in conversation with one of his employes, James McDonough, just before leaving and the latter made the remark that indications were favorable for clear weather on the morrow and that everyone would have a good time on the holiday.

"I don't know about that," said Brown, "because we have always had a habit of being disappointed on Christmas day at our house. We looked forward to a good time but something or other would come up and we wouldn't get it."

"Maybe this year will be an exception," McDonough suggested.

"I hope so," Brown replied, and then went out. He stopped at purchased a two-pound box of candy, and so far as known proceeded to his home. He was seen walking down Washington avenue in a dejected sort of way but brightened up and wished "a Merry Christmas" to several friends who passed him. The candy was not found at the house and it is not known what became of it.

Brown was twenty-four years old and came to Plainfield with his parents when they moved from Somerville two years ago. His father, Edwin F. Brown, Sr., is at present at Hot Springs, Ark., undergoing treatment for rheumatism and locomotor ataxia. The latter was formerly a prominent broker in New York real estate and while at Somerville was the commissioner of police. He gained considerable notoriety at one time by compelling the officers to

YOUNG HUSBAND KILLS WIFE AFTER QUARREL

George Robert Holman, 24 years old, of Garwood, shot and killed his young wife at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, at the home of his father, Robert W. Holman, of Morell street, New Brunswick, after a quarrel at a Christmas dinner. Holman, who is employed by the Aeolean Piano Company, at Garwood, had been separated from his wife for eight weeks.

She was formerly Miss Margaret Voorhees, of German Valley, and she had been living with her parents recently. Holman went after her and had induced her to go to New Brunswick to spend Christmas. At dinner yesterday noon he had suggested that she remain for a few weeks until he could get better work, and she refused. This brought on a quarrel. After dinner the couple went to an upper room in the house, where they renewed the quarrel.

Mr. Holman, the elder, heard a fall on the floor and ran up to see what was the matter. He found his son bending over his dead wife's body, and at the entrance of his father he put the revolver to his own head and pulled the trigger, but the revolver did not work. The father grabbed the weapon from the youth, who ran downstairs, took his brother's hat and disappeared. Harold Holman, the 18-year-old brother of the murderer, ran to the police station a mile away and reported the murder. The police were unable to find the man.

While Mr. Holman was explaining to Detective George Dunn the position in which he found his son, he pointed the revolver at his own head and the trigger was accidentally pulled, but the weapon did not discharge. Coroner John V. Hubbard found that the bullet had entered the wife's head near the left ear, causing instant death. Mr. Holman said that he believed that his son was out of his mind.

News of the murder of Mrs. George R. Holman was received at Hackettstown last night by William Voorhees, her father, who started at once for New Brunswick. The young couple were well known, and it was known that they had domestic difficulties. Mrs. Holman went to her father's home at German Valley about eight weeks ago. A week ago her husband went to her and induced her to return with him to New Brunswick. They left on Tuesday of this week.

HINTS FOR NEEDLEWORKERS.

Odd squares of filet picked up quite reasonably during bargain times are being made into charming centrepieces by inserting them in white linen, edging with a narrow border of lace and connecting the squares by a running design in eyelet embroidery.

Wallachian and Biedermaier embroidery, while still done both in colors and in white, are not so much in favor as a few seasons ago. The former when used on a graceful design and worked in white is a good choice for the girl who has not much time or skill.

Drawn work centrepieces are always in favor, but they take too long and can be bought too cheaply to be popular with the average maker of Christmas gifts. An effective piece can be made with an inch wide, drawn work border, heading a two-inch hem. A monogram in satin stitch, inside an openwork medallion is put in the middle of one side.

Local Man a Bankrupt.

Counsel for D. Foster Updike, the local real estate operator, filed schedules in bankruptcy for his client in the United States district court Thursday showing debts of $7,458.66 and assets of $565.75. Of his assets Mr. Updike says $500 comprises: A Prudential Insurance company policy payable to his wife, Elizabeth M. Updike; $25 in cash in the City National Bank, of Plainfield; a gold watch, $20; three suits of clothes, $25; three sets of underwear, $4.50, an overcoat, $10, and a gold ring, $5.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Two Dunellen residents were in the trolley car collision at Bound Brook Thursday, but neither were injured more than a few bumps. They were William Ayers and Edward Herlicky. The latter was also in the Somerville wreck a few weeks ago.

Services at the First Baptist church tomorrow will be commemorative of the last Sunday of the year. Rev. Gardner's subject for the night service will be "Opening of the Books, the Great Disclosure." A special musical program has been prepared.

The Presbyterian Sunday-school Xmas cantata, entitled "An Old Fashioned Santa Claus," will be presented Monday night. Other features of the program will be the exchanging of presents and also of distributing the awards for attendance.

Rev. W. W. Casselberry's sermon for tomorrow morning at the Presbyterian church will be "Hastening to Bethlehem." In the evening the Sunday-school will carry out exercises under the title, "When Wise Men Worshipped."

The choir of Holy Innocents' church will render Christmas music during the afternoon services tomorrow at 3:30. The Christmas tree and festival will be on Monday night.

Philip Smith, watchman at the Lehigh Valley railroad crossing in West Dunellen, is visiting relatives in Newark.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sweeney and daughter, Esther, went to Phoenixville, Pa., for Christmas.

Mayor Swackhamer has improved sufficiently to be able to sit up for a few hours each day.

The engagement is announced of Miss Annetta H. Baldwin and Clarence B. Carman.

The Christmas celebration at the First Baptist church was held Thursday night.

James Thornton spent Christmas with his brother, W. H. Thornton, in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Russell and son Elmer went to Philadelphia Thursday.

The Seventh-Day Baptist church will hold its Xmas celebration tonight.

Mrs. T. J. Hogan is ill with the grip.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Following the custom for a number of years past, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark, of Front street, held a family reunion at their home yesterday. The children and grandchildren all gathered about the family table at dinner. Those present beside Mr. and Mrs. Clark, were Mr. and Mrs. Cass Achison and family, of Matawan; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Smith and family, of Lincoln; Mr. and Mrs. F. K. Clark and children, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Clark and children, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clawson and daughter, Mrs. Smalley and daughter and Clinton Clark.

The choir of the Baptist church will render "The Coming of the King" at the vesper service at 4:30 tomorrow afternoon. The musical service has been arranged by the pastor, Rev. Franklin Mathiews, and is one appropriate to the Christmas season. The choir will be assisted by Mr. Augus, the well-known baritone, of New York city. Seats are free. However it is the wish of the pastor that those attending be prompt to the hour of 4:30, so as not to disturb the service.

The members of the Methodist Sunday-school and its friends enjoyed their Christmas exercises in the church Thursday night. An interesting program of recitations and carols was enjoyed after which Santa Claus paid his annual call. Santy had presents in abundance and every one was remembered with a gift.

The Township Committee meet tonight in the town rooms. Work will be started preparing the annual township report which is to be ready for distribution among the taxpayers the coming month.

Several sleighs were out yesterday but the fall of snow was too light to make sleighing good, the roads in some places being very poor.

From the contented and happy look on every one yesterday Santa Claus must have remembered all in some way.

BURNS WAS HELPLESS IN THE FOURTEENTH

Sydney, N. S. W., Dec. 26.—Jack Johnson, the American negro, won the heavyweight championship of the world here this morning in the fourteenth round. He had Tommy Burns, of Canada, the title-holder, in such a condition that the police ordered the fight stopped, and Referee Hugh B. McIntosh awarded the decision to Johnson amid a wild scene.

Johnson outclassed Burns in practically every respect. He was faster in attack and defense and delivered more accurate and powerful blows and gradually wore the white man down.

Burns was the aggressor at the outset and indulged in hard rushes, with the idea of landing a knockout blow in a rough mixup. Johnson, however, was too clever for him.

The negro was so shifty on his feet that it was with difficulty that Burns reached a vital spot, so that he soon discovered that he was up against a most puzzling proposition.

When Johnson cut loose he generally landed. His left hand was used with telling effect and Burns was repeatedly jolted and jarred with it. Johnson worked a left on the white man's head and stomach. He saved the right for a critical moment.

In generalship Johnson was the master. He was cool-headed and never lost a trick. He followed Sam Fitzpatrick's instructions to the letter, and as the battle progressed in his favor the negro's confidence increased until it was a foregone conclusion that he would win.

At times the slugging by both men was terrific. Blood was drawn by each fighter, and as the battle raged 25,000 people went mad. When the end came Burns looked as if he might be stopped at any moment. Johnson was punching him all over the ring and the police broke up the mill.

The referee had no alternative but to declare Johnson the winner, and the verdict appeared to meet with general approval.

Betting on the fight favored the former champion a few hours before the men entered the ring.

The fight was scheduled for twenty rounds under Marquis of Queensbury rules, with four-ounce gloves, in a 24-foot ring. By the terms of the articles of war signed by Johnson before Burns would agree to fight him, the latter received $30,000 of the $35,000, win, lose or draw. Burns was the favorite in the betting at the ringside, the odds being about 10 to 8.

The excitement in the Antipodes over the battle was intense, and the demand for tickets was tremendous. The advance sale of tickets was over $50,000, the prices for tickets ranging from $5 to $50. It was estimated that more than 25,000 persons were in the big stadium at Rushcutter's Bay, the scene of the fight, when the men entered the ring.

Because of rumors that the fight would not be on its merits the promoter, Mr. McIntosh, sent the following cablegram over his signature:

"The fight will be absolutely on the level. You can bet on it with confidence. Johnson would not have chased Burns for nearly 12,000 miles to get a match and then throw it, while Burns would not 'lay down' to a negro. The earning capacity of either of these men in the event of victory would be greater than by indulging in a fake. So take it from me that the mill will be decided on its merits."

Much credit is due to the negro for the persistency with which he followed Burns around the world and finally cornered him in the Antopodes. No claimant to the heavyweight championship was more derided and denounced than Burns, and there was a grudge to settle that resulted in a bitter struggle.

Despite the fact that neither man has a record that classes with the old champions, the contest was without doubt the most important held since the Jeffries-Fitzsimmons battle was staged at Coney Island, when "Ruby Robert" went down before the fierce onslaughts of the fast California giant, who has since retired and who has again declared that he is through with the fighting game.

It was rumored that in the event of Johnson winning Jeffries would come out of retirement and meet the negro. A telegram to "Jeff" on this subject brought the following answer: "I never again will fight. I may again enter the ring, but it will be as a referee and not as a boxer. I have had my share of the milling, and, I believe, am entitled to a rest-up. Let the other boys do the fighting."

Many fistic experts are of the opinion that Burns avoided a fight with Johnson until he had picked up enough money to make him independent, even if he lost to the negro. Burns is a very thrifty individual and has accumulated $200,000 since he became prominent in the prize ring. He is now comfortably fixed financially and could afford to risk a fight with Johnson.

"Sam" Fitzpatrick, one of the shrewedest men identified with the fighting game, handled Johnson, and was in the negro's corner when he faced Burns. Fitzpatrick had Peter Jackson when that negro was the most feared heavyweight in the game. Corbett is the only champion aspirant that had nerve enough to face Jackson, and even "Jim" "passed up" Peter after their famous "no contest" at San Francisco. Sullivan drew the color line on Jackson, and Fitzsimmons was frank enough to admit that he wanted none of Jackson's game. Jackson failed to take proper care of himself and was down and out when "Jim" Jeffries whipped him.

Fitzpatrick also handled George Lavigne, the "Saginaw Kid," when he was the lightweight champion.

Johnson is the most ferocious looking pugilist in the ring today. He stands over six feet tall and is built in proportion. The negro is enormously developed around the chest and shoulders. His long arms give him the greatest reach of any big man in the game. Fitzpatrick says the negro has a longer reach than Jackson. The one weak spot in the negro's armor is thought to be his stomach. The big negro likes his gin and is a heavy drinker.

Yesterday's battle was the first fight in modern ring history where a negro has figured in a fight for the heavyweight title. It was also the first fight in years that has been fought outside of America. This was made necessary because no club in the world would dare to offer the men, especially Burns, anywhere near as much money as Promoter McIntosh.

Not since the days of Peter Jackson has there been a negro heavyweight whose claim to class and calibre demanded by the heavyweight requirements has been equalled by those of Johnson, and never in the history of modern pugilism has there been a heavyweight title holder whose claims to championship laurels have been so derided and denounced as those made by Tommy Burns.

Hart Picked Johnson.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 25.—Marvin Hart, now in training at the armory here preparatory to his fight with Mike Schreck, of Cincinnati, before the Fayette Athletic Club, on New Year's night, said today that if he wins from Schreck he will challenge the winner of the Johnson-Burns fight. Hart said: "Johnson will whip Burns in short order. I hope to beat Schreck, and if I do I will challenge Johnson. I never was in better condition. I have never worked harder preparing for a match." Schreck is in training in Cincinnati.

BASEBALL.

Billy Sullivan is mentioned as the probable manager of the White Sox in case Fielder Jones really does quit baseball.

Manager Bresnahan, of the Cardinals,—we'll be accustomed to that title by next spring—has called off the spring series between the Cardinals and Browns.

Barney Dreyfuss expects to have his new ball park ready for use by July 1, 1909. Well, the New Yorks can win four straight here just as easily as they did across the river.

Mike Donlin is working every morning in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. It's easier to "keep fit by working steadily and keeping at weight than it is to get heavy and have a lot of weight to take off," he says.

Barney Reilly, who has been variously reported as the Yale freshman football captain and a famous Yale varsity baseball player, but who was neither, has signed with the Chicago White Sox. What Reilly did do at Yale was to play in the infield on the freshman nine. Since then he has played professional ball and is no longer eligible at Yale.

McGraw received a telegram from Frank Bowerman yesterday offering to trade Flaherty, pitcher; Graham, catcher; Dahlen, shortstop, and Bates, outfielder, for Seymour and Herzog. McGraw has no particular need for any of the men mentioned, and it isn't likely a trade will be made unless it be a three cornered affair whereby Dahlen would go to Brooklyn and New York get one of the Brooklyn players.

"Mendez, the Black Diamond of the Cuban Stars, who makes a trip to the United States every summer, has pitched the last five games, or forty-three innings, without allowing a run to be made off him," says Nat Strong. "This record was not made against scrub teams, he having shut out the Cincinnati National League in each of the three games he twirled against that team and twice the strong Key West team, with Hagerman, drafted by the Chicago Nationals, in the box against him for Key West. In the three games he pitched against Cincinati not a man reached third base. Mendez is the most wonderful pitcher ever produced in Cuba, the equal of any of the big stars of the American or National League teams and is the main asset of the Cuban Stars. Mendez is the best all around player in Cuba, and his color—black as coal—is the only thing that keeps him from being a star in one of the major league teams. He also holds the long distance throwing record of Cuba."

GOLF.

According to a Washington golfer the amendments suggested by J. W. McKinley of the Columbia Golf Club to be voted on at the annual meeting of the United States Golf Association on January 8 were not suggested by any member of the Western Golf Association. The one of most consequence would change the constitution to do away with a nominating committee.

The Homewood (Ill.) Country Club has replaced on a larger scale the clubhouse destroyed by fire last fall and has made application for the amateur championship of the Western Golf Association. The award will probably go to this club.

A resolution is to be offered at the annual meeting of the Western Golf Association at Chicago, January 16, it is said in the West, to change the name to the American Golf Association, with all geographical boundary lines removed. The move is an outcome of dissatisfaction over the non-selection after so many years of a Western man as president. The change will very probably be made. The W. G. A. now claims as its territory the entire country from Pittsburg to the Pacific coast inclusive and south of Mason and Dixon's line. The chief clubs in the W. G. A. are, however, members of the U. S. G. A.

FINE CHRISTMAS PROGRAM TO BE GIVEN AT HOPE CHAPEL

In addition to special Christmas music at Hope chapel, tomorrow morning and evening, the Sunday-school will hold an elaborate service in the afternoon, entitled "Prince of Nations," which will be interspersed with stereopticon pictures illustrating "The Birth of Christ." Superintendent G. Herbert Condict will be in charge, assisted by I. W. Travell and Rev. L. R. Howard. City Judge William N. Runyon will be at the piano.

The church choir will assist the school in the rendition of the following numbers:

"Prince of Nations," "Bethlehem," solo, "The Holy Night," "Good Tidings," "O Guiding Star," "Glory to God on High," "The Song of Jesus' Birth," and there will also be responsive readings. The choir will render special music morning and night. The Christmas festival will be held at the chapel Wednesday night.

THE FORUM.

TWO NOBLE LIVES.

To the Editor of The Press:

Sir—With interest and pleasure I read your appreciative lines touching the lives and work of Jean Octave de Mauriac and his wife. The wife's life has (within a few months) covered the precise period of that of my own wife's mother, who died in her ninety-second year at the end of September. Lovely and unselfish and efficient were these two lives throughout. The death of Mr. de Mauriac preceded by several years that of his companion; but he lived to a good age; and a photograph of him, which I am so fortunate as to own, is much the handsomest portrait in my collection. He was much more than your kindly article indicates, and his place in the history of Plainfield is much larger. It was my privilege to attend his academy here for five years, from 1846 to 1851. For a part of that period it stood, as you say, on the site of the Scheffilin property. Afterward, it was near the corner of Second and Church streets; and the building remains there to this day. In it were every day assembled from thirty-five to forty boys, of whom from a dozen to a dozen and a half boarded with the principal and came from New York and Newark families and elsewhere. The principal had one excellent assistant, a Mr. Mann, who hailed from Yankee-land. But the life of the school was "Mr. Mauriac," as he was commonly called. He was an elegant and accomplished gentleman, a thorough and profound scholar, and was (at thirty-five years of age) the greatest and heartiest boy in his own school. He was a great ball-player and was expert at marble-shooting. At the school-door his boyishness ceased, and in school hours the discipline was perfect. His scholars studied hard and progressed well. He taught us geography, grammar, geometry, elocution, physics, French, Spanish, Latin and Greek. In all these he was a great master and instructor. Blessed be the memory of himself and his wife!

The young man and his mother bought the restaurant business last summer and the venture has been quite successful. There was nothing about it to cause him exceptional worriment and at no time did he mention to anyone that he brooded about anything in particular. He was an expert basketball player and his principal diversion was the enjoyment of the game at the Y. M. C. A. He belonged to the Mono club and other social organizations.

Christian Optimism

A series of Sermons by

Rev. Dr. Chas E. Herring

The Christ Child

There is but one religion in the world, which keeps a certain time of the year as a festival to child-life. It is our own Christian faith, and the festival of Christmas is held in honor of the coming of the Christ child. Our Lord said, as He placed a little child in the midst of the disciples, "Whoso received one such little child, received Me." The child-like heart, then, discloses something of the character of Christ.

It was when the disciples were disputing among themselves as to whom should be the greatest in the kingdom of Heaven, that our Lord set a little child in the midst of them as a type of the Kingdom of Heaven. The child is unpretentious; enjoys simple things; is without the feeling of caste, or of social superiority. Jesus taught that the simplicity of childhood should be the motive-spirit of His followers. The child does not make the social distinctions of his parents, and in this, he is a type of Christ. In the manhood of Christ, there dwelt the spirit of the little child, and in all true manhood there must be this child-like element. Our Lord never divided men into the upper, middle and lower classes, and in-so-far as we make that division, we are apart from the spirit of Christ. Our Lord, however, did make these two distinctions between men; those at his right hand who were ruled by His spirit, and those at His left,—the men who possessed no Christian character.

But faith, as well as simplicity, is another marked feature of child nature. The child is not a skeptic, but a believer. The child's world is a world of the imagination, and faith. Wordsworth said, "Heaven lies around us in our infancy."

Why? Because the child opens his heart to that world; the range of vision is destroyed as the child grows to manhood. Man leaves behind him the fables of childhood as he makes intellectual advance. Yes, he has made advance along one line, but it is possible, too, that with that intellectual advance, he has lost the intuitions of childhood. The child believes,—the man reasons. Renan, the French literary critic, once said, "that while, in the nineteenth century, the knowledge of facts has considerably increased, men need more than this intellectual knowledge in order that they may live as they should. Candidly speaking, I fail to see how, without the ancient dreams, the foundations of a noble and happy life are to be laid." What dreams? The dreams of childhood's religion. God speaks to the childlike faith where he cannot speak to a man's intellect.

You say the child dreams—let him dream, for the time will come when he will know the stern realities of life. Do you know all the realities of life? You know something about material things,—but God's universe is bigger than the universe that you see and know. This world will be a less weary place if we will but believe in the unseen realities,—that God and His spiritual forces are about you. You don't believe in fairies; you believe that these are but the beautiful fancies of childhood, but do you believe that unseen forces are about you, and are ministering to your highest good? If you do not, the child is nearer the truth than you are.

We love the pleasures of the intellectual life, but these do not satisfy the deepest needs of the human soul. We need the simplicity and the trustfulness of the little child, if we will be contented and happy. We are living in a self-assertive world, where men are ambitious to get ahead of others,—a world of social rivalries and jealousies. This worldly spirit is salien to the spontaneity, sincerity, and simplicity of childhood, and therefore alien to the spirit of the Gospel. Is my whole ambition realized in getting up to or beyond the social position of other people? We would not decry ambition, but some ambitions are paltry, and positively devoid of the true Christian spirit. This is the season when the lesson of the simplicity or childhood should be the theme of our Christian meditation.

We need, too, the trustful spirit of the little child, for childhood never worries about the future. Then why should God's children? We shall worry if our lives are spent in social competitions, for there are all sorts of levels in social life, and we shall never be quite satisfied with the level we have reached, for in the game of outdoing others, we may be outdone. A child grows up to manhood. That manhood is a higher stage than childhood, and yet, in another sense, this development may mean the "narrowing of his range of vision, and the deadening of his fined sensibilities." With all the development of men's faculties, they must take with them into manhood the intuitions of childhood. If you lose our simple faith in God and His companionship, you will find nothing in your intelectual life to perfectly take its place. Our Lord carried His childhood over into His manhood, and the childhood never died in Him. Throughout His ministry, there was always evident the simplicity, humility and perfect trustfulness of a true child. Is not this the lesson of Christmas?

terson; "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," Schnecker, Mrs. Jonathan Rawson, Jr.; "O Holy Night," Adam, male chorus.

Mt. Zion A. M. E. Church.

The following program will be rendered at Mount Zion A. M. E. church tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock by the vested choir: Prelude, violin and organ, "Meditation;" processional, "Hither Ye Faithful," to music arranged from Tedesco's mass in G; anthem, "Glory Be to God;" anthem, "Sing O Daughter of Zion;" carol, "Shepherds in the Field Abiding;" recessional, selected.

Driver Killed On Ferry Bridge.

Henry Pago, driver of a coal truck, while leaving the ferryboat St. Louis at Jersey City at low tide yesterday was jostled from his wagon by the wheels striking hard against the edge of the bridge. He fell in the roadway under the wheels of a wagon driven by Mayer Pognak, of No. 136 Livingston street, Newark. His skull was crushed and he died instantly. Pognak, when arrested, said that he urged his hose to a run to make the grade up the bridge and did not see the man lying in his path. Pago was thirty-five years old, and his home was at Grand and Grove streets, Jersey City.

Big Realty Deal Near May's Landing.

Bray & Macgeorge, of Vineland, have just sold ten thousand acres of land to the Cobden Realty Company, of New York, for colonization purposes. The tract lies between May's Landing and Richland, extending northward from the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad. It is inferred that the land will be cut into small farms for Italian grape and sweet-potato growers.

WHAT A WOMAN DOES IN LIFE.

Not long ago I was told of a woman who was engaged in a unique line of work. I had considerable difficulty in finding her, for I assure you some of these apartment houses have rooms and rooms, and one roomer never knows the other. I went in a door, up a long flight of wooden steps and won again; then in another door and up two or three flights of steps and down again. By this time I was almost discouraged, but I took to another flight of winding stairs. Then I went to the fourth floor, up thirty steps (I counted them) along a dark narrow hall, down another to the left, then the right and—found her name upon the door. I knocked, rather severely, I believe, and I was asked to come in. I went in and at one glance saw that my hostess was unable to go to the door, but that smile, that cordial hand-greeting, I shall never forget.

A smile in that gloomy place was like a streak of sunshine in a dungeon. There the prisoner sits day in and dap out, stitching upon little novelties that sell for so little, and all the time she smiles and smiles, forgetting of the fact that to her frail little body is attached a wooden limb with heavy iron or steel bandages. She is seemingly happy, desuite her environment. I wondered if some of my readers could see her, just as I did, if they would not be more contented with their position in life and more grateful for their blessings. I do not think this woman wants my sympathy, or that of an ywoman, because she has learned the lesson that makes her an example of sweet content to others. We have but to leave our own comfortable homes, in the best of health and spirits, and meet this type of angels of endurance to more fully appreciate our own true blessings. If women could see these things in life, they would not be so surly or cross over tfivials that are like feather pillows as compared with the granite pillars against which some of their sisters are so rudely thrown. —Woman's National Daily.

SAVED FROM DEATH ON RAILROAD TRACKS.

John Hattrick, who lives at No. 43 West Eighth street, Bayonne, was snatched from the tracks of the Central Railroad at Elizabeth yesterday just in time to escape being killed by a fast freight train bound for New York. He was found lying on the tracks unconscious with a fractured skull, and had evidently fallen from a train. He had been visiting his mother at Elizabeth.

Hattrick's rescuer was John Shannon, who recently saved half a dozen inmates at Hart's Hotel at Elizabeth from suffocation by gas, and a few days later discovered a fire in the home of Samuel Schuster, in Spring street, Elizabeth, and warned the occupants in time for them to escape.

Fire Horses Kill a Dog.

While No. 2 hose wagon was following Chief Doane's rig down West Fifth street in answer to a still alarm last night, the horses stepped upon a large shepherd dog that jumped toward them for a playful run. The animal was instantl killed. It seemed like a thoroughbred but the owner is not known. The alarm was for a chimney blaze at the home of Miss Kelley, 510 West Fifth street.

Seven Horses Burned to Death.

Seven horses perished in the fire that destroyed the stabe of E. J. Sullivan at No. 136 Provost street, Jersey City, yesterday morning. The flames communicated with the adjoining stable of A. J. Bogart. It contained twenty-seven horses, but they were rescued by Patrolmen Kelly, Tuite, England and Brennan. The loss is estimated at $3,000.

Deaf Mute Found Injured In Street.

James Carroll, a deaf mute, of No. 665 Grove street, Jersey City, was found at 6 o'clock yesterday morning lying near the electric car tracks at Ninth and Brunswick streets, that city, with his leg crushed. He wrote that he had been pushed from a car by a passenger. He was taken to the City Hospital.

Christmas Reveller Burns to Death.

Henry Garriel left some friends in a saloon at Red Bank Thursday night saying that he was going to Hutchinson's wheelwright shop, where he was employed, and sleep there. Yesterday morning the shop was found to be afire, and his charred body was found in the ruins. He was fifty-five years old and not married.

Fire Burns Morristown Stable.

Fire yesterday morning destroyed the Lauenstein livery stable at Morristown. It is believed the insulation of an electric light wire had rotted off and short circuited with the wood. Fifty horses were rescued. Several firemen were overcome by smoke. The loss is estimated at $10,000.

Mrs. J. J. Henderson.

Closely following the death of Joseph J. Henderson, formerly of North Plainfield, which occurred on Sunday last at his home in Brooklyn, his wife died Wednesday, having contracted typhoid-pneumonia. She was buried at Trenton today.

Xmas Family Reunion.

Among the enjoyable Christmas gatherings yesterday was one at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, of Duer street. During the day an elaborate dinner was served and the exchange of gifts made it a happy occasion for all.

John S. Huling.

John S. Huling, aged seventy-five years, died Thursday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. P. Gibson, of Putnam avenue. The funeral will be held at the residence this afternoon and burial will be at Ballston Spa, N. Y.

Dangerous.

"If I exposed my throat and lungs the way you do," complained the father of the beautiful maiden, "I'd be a dead man inside of three days."

"Of course, you would," she sweetly replied; "although, really, I don't believe lynching ought ever to be resorted to for anything."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Her Last New Dress.

"You were married in 1903, weren't you, dear?"

"Yes, but how did you know?"

"The dress you have on was 1903 style."—Houston Post.

Down on the Farm.

Grandma Lettie (to the grandson from the city)—Hev ye seen your gran'pa 'round, Charlie?

Charlie—Yes'm. He's 'round back putting the cows into their garage. —Judge.

A Great Stomach Surgeon.

"You never seem to get tired of admiring your wife's soft, white hands."

"I do it on purpose, so that she won't think of doing the cooking." —Meggendorfer Blaetter.

At the Amateur Dress Rehearsal.

"But do you think you are all keen enough to make the show a success?"

"Should say so. Every fellow in the play has to make love to another fellow's wife."—Bystander.

Lightning Sorrow and Joy.

"What! Your husband is dead?"

"Yes, a year ago, and last week I married again."

"My sincerest condolences and heartiest congratulations."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Large Advance Sale.

The advance sale of seats for "The Traveling Salesman," to be presented at the New Plainfield theatre, this afternoon and tonight, indicates that it will be witnessed by large audiences. The play is by James Forbes, author of "The Chorus Lady" and has had a long run in New York. Manager Henry B. Harris has given the production an elaborate scenic mounting.

Scrappers Arrested.

Mrs. Bertram Sherman, better known as "Gertie" Coddington, and Dominick Muldowney, engaged in an argument at Front and Somerset street, this afternoon, and words soon led to a red-hot scrap. The two were placed under arrest by Patrolman Flynn and locked up at headquarters.

Why Not?

"Do you suppose she can see a joke?"

"I guess so. She married one." —Birmingham Age-Herald.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

In the second act of James Forbes' comedy success, "The Traveling Salesman," which comes to the New Plainfield theatre this afternoon and tonight, a sample-room in a hotel is displayed. Here are shown a full line of samples of the latest styles of coats and suits, which were purchased by Henry B. Harris, to add interest to the feminine contingent of theatre-goers. Inasmuch as these gowns and suits represent the advanced fashions for the coming spring season, it will no doubt attract many ladies to the theatre.

Miss Kathlyn Brower, the beautiful and talented leading woman in "The Light of Tomorrow," by Malcolm Douglas, which comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night, was formerly with Henry Miller in "The Great Divide," during its long run in New York, Miss Brower having replaced Margarite Anglin. In "The Light of Tomorrow," Miss Brower is seen as "Nan," the vaudeville actress who has never known a parent's love and who has grown up in the world ignorant of who her father and mother really are. However, she finds her mother who has but a few moments to live, having remarried a wealthy man. Life has been far more pleasant for her and the trials and tribulations of a woman of the stage leads to laughter and tears. "The Light of Tomorrow" is described as the most beautiful play ever written.

"Take a trip around the world and be back home by bed-time," is the inviting proposition offered by Fred Niblo at the New Plainfield theatre, Wednesday evening, December 30, when he will give "Africa," the first of his delightful series of four pictorial "Talks of Travel in Distant Lands." These celebrated Zig-Zag Journeys Around the World are all graphically illustrated with hundreds of superbly colored views and moving pictures, as well as panoramic photographs. Mr. Niblo will present a different Travel-Talk each succeeding Wednesday night in the following order: "Egypt," January 6; "London," January 20; "Russia," January 27.

Scott Welch, as the slangy exprize fighter, "Kid Burns," in Cohan & Harris' musical play, "Forty-Five

Fred Niblo, in "Talks of Travel," at New Plainfield Theatre, next Wednesday night.

Minutes From Broadway," to be presented at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night, has opportunity for his ability as a versatile comedian and has won laurels all over the United States in the part. The cast, the original cast, includes Scott Welch, Frances Gordon, Mary E. Cunard, Elizabeth Drew, Susan Chisnell, Eugene MacGregor, James Christine Norman, Florence Brent in George Broadhurst's latest success, "An International Marriage," at New Plainfield Theatre, Jan. 1.

A. Davett, James H. Manning, Harry Gwynette and twenty others. There is a chorus of beautiful girls and rehearsals under the person direction of the author-manager-composer, and stage director, George M. Cohan, have just been finished.

HANDICAPPED.

This Is the Case With Many Plainfield People.

Too many Plainfield citizenss are handicapped with a bad back. The unceasing pain causes constant misery, making work a burden and stooping or lifhting an impossibility. The back aches at night, preventing refreshing rest and in the morning is stiff and lame. Plasters and liniments may give relief but cannot reach the cause. To eliminate the pains and aches you must cure the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Can you doubt Plainfield evidence?

Mrs. Margaret Reville, 732 West Third street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "For a long time I was troubled with a weak and lame back and was unable to find anything that would give me relief. My back pained me so badly at times that I dreaded to stoop. When I caught cold or overeerted myself, my suffering was doubled. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Randolph's Pharmacy, helped me at once and I continued taking them until cured. I have had no need of a kidney remedy in the past two years, but value Doan's Kidney Pills today as highly as ever."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

"They must have outwitted me, somehow," the colonel sighed, "and it looks as if he went voluntarily; there was no possible carrying away by force. And there was no odor of chloroform about; that is very penetrating; it would get into the halls. They must have persuaded him to go, —but how?"

"If they have kidnaped him," said Mrs. Winter, "they will send me some word, and if they have persuaded him to run away, plainly he must be able to walk, and that—mess in Mrs. Wigglesworth's room doesn't mean anything bad."

"Of course not," said the colonel, firmly.

Then, in as casual a tone as he could command: "By the way, where is Miss Smith? She is back, isn't she?"

"Oh, a long time ago," said Mrs. Winter. "I sent her to bed."

"I've been frank with you. You will reciprocate and tell me why, for what, you sent her out?"

Mrs. Winter made not the least evasion. She answered frankly: "I sent her with a carefully worded advertisement—but you needn't tell Millicent, who has also gone to bed, thank heaven—I sent her with a carefully worded advertisement to all the papers. This is the advertisement. It will reach the kidnapers, and it will not reach any one else. See." She handed him a slip of paper from her card-case. He read:

To the holders of Archie W.: Communicate with R. S. W., same address as before, and you will hear of something to your advantage. Perfectly safe.

The colonel read it thoughtfully, a little puzzled. Before he had time to speak, his quick ears caught the sharp ring of his room telephone bell. He excused himself to answer it. His room was the last of the suite, but he shut the door on his way to the telephone.

He expected Haley; nor was he disappointed. Haley reported—in Spanish—that he had traced the automobile; it was the property of young Mr. Arnold, son of the rich Mr. Arnold. Young Arnold had been at Harvard last year, and he took out a Massachusetts license; he had a California one, too. Should he (Haley) look up young Arnold? And should he come to report that night?

The colonel thought he could wait till morning, and, a little comforted, hung up the receiver. Barely was it out of his hand when the bell shrilled again, sharply, vehemently. Winter put the tube to his ear.

"Does any one want Col. Winter, Palace hotel?" he asked.

A sweet, eager, boyish voice called back: "Uncle Bertie! Uncle Bertie, don't you worry; I'm all right!"

"Archie!" cried the colonel. "Where are you?"

But there was no answer. He called again, and a second time; he told the lad that they were dreadfully anxious about him. He got no response from the boy; but another voice, a woman's voice, said, with cold distinctness, as if to some one in the room; "No, don't let him; it is impossible!" Then a dead wall of silence and central's impassive ignorance. He could get nothing.

Rupert Winter stood a moment, frowning and thinking deeply. Directly, with a shrug of the shoulders, he walked out of his own outside door, locking it, and went straight to Miss Smith's.

He knocked, at first very gently, then more vigorously. But there was no answer. He went away from the door, but he did not re-enter his room. He did not bear to his aunt the news which, with all its meagerness and irritating incompleteness, had been an enormous relief to him. He simply waited in the corridor. Five minutes, ten minutes passed; then he heard the elevator whir and, standing with his hand on the knob of his open door, he saw his aunt's companion, dressed for the street, step out and speed down the corridor to her own door.

The other voice—the woman's voice—had been Janet Smith's.

CHAPTER VII.

The Haunted House.

A mud-splashed automobile runabout containing two men was turning off Van Ness avenue down a narrower and shadier side street in the afternoon of the Sunday following the disappearance of Archie Winter. One of the occupants seemed to be an invalid whom the brilliant March sunshine had not tempted out of his heavy wrappings and cap; the other was a short, thick-set, corduroy-jacketed chauffeur. One marked the runabout at a glance as a hardly used livery motor car; but a moment's inspection might have shown that it was running with admirable smoothness and quiet. The chauffeur wore goggles, hence his eyes were shielded, but he turned a broad smile upon the pallid cheeks and sharpened profile beside him.

"Colonel, as a health-seeker who can't keep warm enough, you're great!" he cried. "Lord, but you look the part!"

"If I can't shed some of these confounded mufflers soon," growled the pale sufferer addressed, "I'll get so red with heat it will come through my beautiful powder. I hope those fellows won't see us, for they will be on to us, all right."

"Our own mothers wouldn't be on to us in these rigs," the chauffeur replied, cheerily; he seemed to be in a hopeful mood; "and let us once get into the house, and surprise 'em, and there'll be something drop. But I haven't really had a chance to tell you the latest—having to pick you up at a drug store this way. Now, let's sum things up! You think the boy got out through Keatcham's apartment? Or Mrs. Wigglesworth's?"

"How else?" said the colonel; "he can't fly, and if he could, he couldn't fly out and then lock the windows from the inside."

"I see"—the chauffeur appeared thoughtful—"and the Wigglesworth door was locked. You think that Keatcham is in it, someway?"

"Not Keatcham," said the colonel. "There was another man in the car—Atkins they called him, though he has disappeared. But Mercer remains. His secretary and that valet of his; I think the secretary is Cary Mercer. The boy might have slipped out in those few moments we were hunting for him inside. Afterward, either Mrs. Melville Winter or I was on guard until your man came. He might go to the Fireless Stove man, slip out of his rooms, and round the corner to the elevator in a couple of seconds. Then, of course, I might see their rooms—"

"Provided, that is, the Fireless Stove drummer is in the plot, too."

"The Fireless Stove drummer who smokes Villar y Villar cigars? He is in it, I think, Birdsall."

"Well, I'll assume that. Next thing: You get the telephone call. And you say the voice sounded chipper; didn't look like he was being hurt or bothered anyway, did it?"

"Not at all. Besides, you know the letter Miss Smith got this morning?"

"I think I'd like another peek at that; will you drive her a minute, while I look at the letter again?" The instant his hands were free Birdsall pulled out the envelope from his leather-rimmed pocket.

It was rectangular in shape and smaller than the ordinary business envelope. The paper was linen of a common diamond pattern, having no engraved heading. The detective ran his eyes down the few lines written in an unformed boyish hand. There was neither date nor place; only these words:

Dear Miss Janet: Don't you or auntie be woried about me because I am well and safe and having a good time. I had the nose bleed that is why I spoted the carpet. Tell Auntie to please pay for it out of my next week's allowance. Be sure and don't wory.

Your aff. friend,
ARCHIBALD PAGE WINTER.

"You're sure this is the boy's writing?" was the detective's comment.

"Sure. And his spelling, too."

"Now," said Birdsall, watching the colonel's keen, aquiline profile as he spoke, "now you notice there's no heading or mark on the paper; and the water-mark is only O. K. E., Mass., 1904. And that amounts to nothing; those folks sell all over the country. But you notice that it is not the ordinary business paper; it looks rather lady-like than commercial, doesn't it?"

The colonel admitted that it did look so.

"Now, assuming that this letter was sent with the connivance of the kidnapers, it looks as if our young gentleman wasn't in any particular danger of having a hard time. To me, it looks pretty certain he must have skipped himself; tolled along someway, maybe, but not making any resistance. Now, is there anybody that you know who has enough influence over him for that? How about the lady's maid?"

"Randall has been a faithful servant for 20 years, a middle-aged, serious-minded, decent woman. Out of the question."

"This Miss Smith, your aunt's companion, who is she? Do you know?"

"A South Carolinian; good family; she has lived with my aunt as secretary and companion for a year; my aunt is very fond of her."

"That all you know? Well, I have found out a little more; she used to live with a Mrs. Jones S. Hastings, a rich Washington woman. The lady's only son fell in love with her; somehow the marriage was broken off."

"What was his name?"

"Lawrence. They called him Larry. He went to Manila. Maybe you've met him there."

"Yes, I knew him; I don't believe he ever was accepted by her."

"I don't know. I have only had two days on her biography. Later, she went to Johns Hopkins hospital. One of the doctors was very attentive to her—but it did not come to anything. She didn't graduate. Don't know why. Then she went to live with Miss Angela Nelson, who died and left her money, away from her own family. There was talk of breaking the will; but it wasn't done. Then she came to Mrs. Winter."

The colonel was silent; there was nothing discreditable in those details. He had known before that Janet Smith was poor; that she had been thrown on the world early; that she must earn her own livelihood; yet, somehow, as Birdsall marshaled the facts, there was an insidious, malarious hint of the adventuress, bandied from place to place, hawking her attractions about wheedling, charming for hire, entraping imbecile young cubs—Larry Hastings wasn't more than 22—somehow he felt a revolt against the picture and against the man submitting it—and, confound Millicent!

The detective changed the manner of his questions a little. "I suppose your aunt is pretty advanced in years, though she is as well preserved an old lady as I have ever met, and as shrewd. Say, wouldn't she be likely to leave the boy a lot of money?"

"I dare say." The colonel was conscious of an intemperate impulse to kick Birdsall, who had been such a useful fellow in the Philippines.

"If anything was to happen to him, who would get the money?"

"Well, Mrs. Melville and I are next of kin," returned the colonel, dryly. "Do you suspect us?"

"I did look up Mrs. Melville," answered the unabashed detective, "but I guess she's straight goods all right. But say, how about Miss Smith?"

The colonel stared, then he laughed. "Birdsall," said he, "there's somewhat too much mention of ladies' names to suit my Virginian taste. But if you mean to imply that Miss Smith is going to kill Archie to get my aunt's money, I can tell you you are 'way off! Your imagination is too active for your profession. You ought to hire out to the yellow journals."

His employer's satire did not even flick the dust off Birdsall's complacency; he grinned cheerfully. "Oh, I'm not so bad as that; I don't suppose she did kill the boy; I think he's alive, all right. But say, colonel, I'll give it to you straight; I do think the senora coaxed the boy off. You admit, don't you, he went off. Well, then he was coaxed, somehow. Now, who's got influence enough to coax him? You cross out the maid; so do I. You cross out Mrs. Melville Winter; so do I. I guess we both cross out the old lady. Well, there's you and the senora left. I don't suspect you, general."

"Really? I don't see why. I stand to make more than anybody else, if you are digging up motives. And how about the chambermaid?"

Birdsall flashed a glance of reproach on his companion. "Now, colonel, do you think I ain't looked her up? First thing. Nothing in it. Decent Vermont girl, three years in the hotel. Came for her lungs. She ain't in it. But let's get back to Miss Smith. Did you know she is Cary Mercer's sister-in-law?"

He delivered his shot in a casual way, and the colonel took it stonily; nevertheless, it went to the mark. Birdsall continued: "Now, question is, was Mercer the secretary? You didn't see the man in the elevator, except his back. Had he two moles?"

"I couldn't see. He had different clothes; but still there was something like Mercer about the shoulders."

"Burney didn't get a chance to take a snapshot, but he did snap the stove man. Here it is. Pull that book out of my pocket."

Obeying, the colonel lifted a couple of small prints which he scrutinized intently, at the end admitting: "Yes, it is he all right. Now, do you know what I think?"

Birdsall couldn't form an idea.

"I think the Keatcham party is in it; and I think they are after bigger game than Archie. Maybe the train robbers were a part of the scheme—although I'm not so sure of that."

"Oh, the robbers were in it all right. But now come to Miss Smith; where does she come in? Or are you as sure of her as Mercer was in Chicago?"

If he had expected to get a spark out of the Winter tinder by this scraping stroke, he was mistaken; the soldier did not even move his brooding gaze fixed on the hills beyond the house roofs; and he answered in a level tone: "Did you get that story from my aunt, or was it Mrs. Melville? I'm pretty certain you got your biography from that quarter. My aunt might have told her."

"That would be betraying a lady's confidence. I'm only a detective, whose business is to pry, but I never go back on the ladies. And I think, same's you, that the lady in question is a real nice, high-toned lady; but I can't disregard the evidence. I never give out my system, but I've got one, all the same. Look here, see this paper?"—he had replaced the envelope in his pocket; he pulled it out again; or, rather, so the colonel fancied, until Birdsall turned the envelope over, revealing it to be blank. "There's a sheet of paper inside; take it out. Look at the water-mark, look at the pattern; then compare it with this letter"—handing the colonel the original envelope. "Same exactly, ain't they?"

The colonel, who had studied the two sheets of paper silently, nodded as silently; and he had a premonition of Birdsall's next sentence before it came. "Well, Mrs. Melville Winter, this morning, took me to Miss Smith's desk, where we found this and a lot more like it."

"You seem to be right in thinking the paper widely distributed," observed the colonel.

"And you don't think that suspicious?"

"I should think it more suspicious if the paper were not out on her desk. If she is such a deep one as you seem to think, she would hide such an incriminating bit of evidence."

"She didn't know we suspected her. Of course, you haven't shadowed her a little bit?"

"There is a limit to detective duty in the case of a gentleman," returned the colonel, haughtily. "I have not."

Little Birdsall sighed; then in a propitiatory tone: "Well, of course, we both think there are other people in the job; I don't know exactly what you mean by bigger game, but I can make a stagger at it. Now, say, did you get any answer when you wrote to Keatcham himself?"

"Yes," said the colonel, grimly, "I heard. You know the sort of letter I wrote; telling him of our dreadful anxiety and about the lad's being an orphan; don't you think it was the sort of letter a decent man would answer, no matter how busy he might be?"

"Sure. Didn't you get an answer?"

"I did." The colonel extricated himself from his wrappings enough to find a pale blue envelope, which he handed to Birdsall, at the same time taking the motor handle. "You see; typewritten, very polite, chilly sort of letter, kind to make a man hot under the collar and swear at Keatcham's heartlessness. Mr. Keatcham unable to answer, having been ill since he left San Francisco. Did not see anything of any boy. Probably ran away. Has no information of any kind to afford. And the writer is very sincerely mine. The minute I read it I was sure Mercer wrote it; and he wrote it to make me so disgusted with Keatcham I wouldn't pursue the subject with him. Just the same way he snubbed my aunt; and, for that matter, just the way he tried to snub me on the train. But he missed his mark; I wired every hotel in Santa Barbara and every one in Los Angeles; and Keatcham isn't there and hasn't been there. He has a big bunch of mail at Santa Barbara waiting for him, forwarded from Los Angeles, but he hasn't shown himself."

The Detective Had Interposed a Stalwart Leg.

Birdsall shot a glance of cordial admiration at the colonel. "You're all there, general," he cried, with unquenchable familiarity. "I've been trying to call up the Keatcham outfit, and I couldn't get a line, either. They haven't used the tickets they bought—their reservations went empty to Los Angeles. Now, what do you make out of that?"

"I make out that Archie is only part of their game," replied the soldier. "Now see, Birdsall, you are not going to get a couple of rich young college fellows to do just plain kidnaping and scaring women out of their money—"

"Lord, general," interrupted Birdsall, "those college guys don't turn a hair at kidnaping; they regularly steal the president of the freshman class, and the things they do at their hazing bees and initiations would make an Apache Indian sit up and take notice. I tell you, general, they're the limit for deviltry."

"Some kinds. Not that kind; it's too dirty. Arnold was one of the cleanest football players at Harvard. And I don't know anything about human nature if that other youngster isn't decent. But Mercer—es un loco; you can look out for anything from him. Now, see the combination. Arnold was at Harvard! I have traced the motor car they used to him; and then, if you add that his father is away safe in Europe and he has an empty house, off to one side, with a quantity of space around it and the reputation of being haunted, why—"

"It looks good to me. And I understand my men have got around it on the quiet all right. How's your man Haley got on, hiring out to the Jap in charge?"

"Well enough; the Jap took him on to mow, but either Mr. Caretaker doesn't know anything or he won't tell. He's bubbling over with conversation about the flowers and the country and the Philippines, where he used to be; but he only knows that the honorable family are all away and he is to shun the house. Aren't we almost there?"

"Just around the corner. I guess when you see it you'll think it's just the patio a spook of taste would freeze to."

SILENCE WASN'T GOLDEN.

Salabuski Got Soaked $15 For Keeping Still In City Court.

Joseph Salabuski, a resident of Evona avenue, was arrested by Patrolman Sweeney at Front street and Park avenue, Saturday night, for drunkenness and insulting women. When he was arrigned in the city court, this morning, and asked what he had to say about the charge he maintained a dignified silence.

"Better speak up," said Judge Runyon; "we want to know if you are guilty of what this officer claims."

Salabuski simply stared and never a word came from his tightly pressed lips. He evidently recalled the statement that "silence is golden" and resolved to have some of the yellow metal come his way.

"Come, can't you tell me something about this matter?" the magistrate asked impatiently.

Still no answer from Salabuski.

"Fifteen dollars or twenty days, then; maybe that will make you talk," said the judge with a bang on the docket, but he was mistaken in his surmise. Salabuski permitted himself to be led away without so much as "yes" or "no" and he was about as communicative as the Sphinx when the cops asked him if he wanted to pay up or go to Elizabeth.

Burial in Panama.

The remains of James L. Hummer, who was killed in a premature dynamite explosion while working on the Panama Canal, December 12, have been interred in the U. S. possession contrary to the expectations of his family in Dunellen, who had made arrangements for the body to be brought home. H. G. Hummer, uncle of the victim, has been notified that there is a Federal regulation in force in the canal zone which forbids the sending of bodies out of the country in such cases, within eighteen months after death, but that, if the relatives so request, the body will be exhumed and sent at the expiration of that time.

In the City Court.

George Suydam, a small boy, was a defendant in the city court, this morning, charged by Harry Dencklau, of Forster avenue, with collecting money from his milk customers. The boy admitted getting $2 but said he collected the money because he formerly worked for Dencklau and ahd been "bounced" without getting his pay. There were several accusations and denials about Dencklau instructing the boy to steal things and in the end Judge Runyon held the latter at fault. He was instructed to pay back the money he had collected and also to appear in court next week for further examination.

Mrs. Benjamin F. Moore, of North avenue, was called to Brooklyn, yesterday, on account of the death of her mother, Mrs. J. E. O'Neill.

DR. VANCE DECIDES TO STAY IN NEWARK

At the morning service in the North Reformed church at Newark yesterday the Rev. Dr. James I. Vance announced that he would remain in Newark and that coincidently his decision was being read in the Central Presbyterian church of Atlanta, Ga., from which he had received an urgent call two weeks ago. The announcement was greeted with a storm of applause and after the service many in the congregation went forward and extended their cordial congratulations.

Dr. Vance's decision came as a complete Christmas surprise. The congregation had assembled with the understanding that he had made up his mind and that he would declare himself from the platform. He did not do so until the service was almost over and then he said:

"When I came to Newark eight years ago from Nashville I came because it seemed to me to be a call from God. Since then from time to time churches in the South have invited me back, but I did not experience the feeling of a divine call until this one from Atlanta. This call has been pressed so persuasively and so earnestly that sometimes I wished that I were two men so that I could be in Atlanta and in Newark.

"During this Christmas season I have felt that there is much work to be done here and I have decided to remain with you."

As Dr. Vance concluded the congregation clapped its appreciation and the hymn that followed was sung with an enthusiasm that this announcement evidently had engendered.

The service and the music were especially appropriate. On the platform with Dr. Vance were the Rev. Stuart N. Hutchinson, of the First Reformed church, of Newark; the Rev. William W. Connor, of Belleville; the Rev. George Davis, of East Orange; the Rev. T. K. Hegman, assistant pastor of the North Reformed church, Newark; the Rev. A. T. Broek, of the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, Newark, and his brother, the Rev. John Y. Broek, of this city.

MASQUERADE DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB.

The annual Christmas dance which will be held at the Park Club, Monday night, will be a masquerade affair, and plans are underway to make it the most elaborate in the history of the club. Music for the occasion will be furnished by Muller, of Brooklyn.

The entertainment committee has arranged for a general dancing at the club on New Year's Eve, where they will be "open-house" with bridge and refreshments. New Year's afternoon there will be the annual reception from 4 to 6 o'clock during which Miss Louise Curtis and Effingham Pinto will present a sketch, "An Episode," and the latter will also give the first scene from the second act of "The Harlequin," assisted by several young women.

Pythian Lodge Election.

The following officers were elected by Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last night: Chancellor commander, Charles A. Peterson; vice-chancellor, R. H. B. Dalley; master at arms, Joseph Baker; prelate, Fred Douglas; master of the work, B. J. Schreiner; inner guard, Frazee Putnam; outer guard, Peter Stram; master of exechequer, Thomas Osment; master of finance, Edward Bowman; keeper of records and seals, Clarence Rittenhouse; representative to the grand lodge, Thos. Caleen; alternate, Morgan Turton; trustees, B. J. Schreiner. The installation will take place on Friday night, January 8.

Church of the Heavenly Rest.

The Christmas Day services at the Church of the Heavenly Rest yesterday morning included holy communion at 8 and 8 o'clock and a full choral celebration and sermon by the rector, Rev. Charles Townsend, at 10:30 o'clock. The musical program follows:

Introit hymn, "O Come All Ye Faithful," Nicene creed, Steane; hymn before sermon, "Angels from the Realms of Glory;" anthem, "There Were Shepherds;" Gloria in Excelsis, Steane. The Christmas festival will be held Monday night at 7 o'clock, after which the children will give a play in the parish house.

Xmas at Mt. Zion Church.

The annual Christmas entertainment was held at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, last night, when Rev. J. T. Diggs, pastor, gave an illustrated lecture on "The Birth of Christ," which was followed with exercises by the Sunday-school, under the direction of the superintendent, Rev. E. B. Maynard. The children presented a fine program of recitations, dialogues, songs, and then ice cream and cake were served. Omer Thompson played the part of Santa Claus and he delighted the hearts of old and young with appropriate gifts. Mrs. E. B. Maynard assisted in making the affair a success.

The Trial of Jesus.

W. M. Chandler, of the New York bar, will deliver his lecture on "The Trial of Jesus from a Lawyer's Standpoint," at the men's meeting in Y. M. C. A. hall tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, will preach at the morning service, tomorrow, his theme being "The Mother of My Lord."

The Christmas exercises will be held in Warren chapel tomorrow afternoon at 2:45 o'clock. A varied and interesting program will be rendered.

The Plainfield Sunday-school Teachers' Union will meet at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night at 8 o'clock, when Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie will teach the lesson and Charles W. McCutchen will give a talk on "Sunday-school Music."

PERSONAL.

M. F. Elderton, of East Front street, spent Christmas day in New York.

Miss Julja Braunsten, of Bayonne, spent Christmas at the home of her brother, Phillip Braunsten, of Monroe avenue.

Mrs. Sarah Randolph and her sister, Mrs. Louise Miller, who have been at Clinton, Iowa, for the past month, have returned to their home at 103 Duer street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Kissam, of Great Neck, L. I., were guests yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. Milton C. Barkalew, of Duer street. Mr. Kissam and Mrs. Barkalew are brother and sister.

Rev. W. P. Squires, pastor of the Christian church, yesterday received by express from his daughter in Bellingham, Wash., a fine Puget Sound silver salmon, weighing eight pounds and twenty-nine inches in length.

Harry Schuchholz, of Weatherly, Pa., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hunter, of West Fourth street. He was a private in the Hospital Corps at Fort William McKinley, Philippine Islands and is spending a few months at home with relatives before re-enlisting for the third time in Uncle Sam's army.

Carried a Revolver.

Michael Evans, colored, was arrested by Patrolman Sweeney at Park avenue and Front street, this morning, for carrying a revolver. He explained to Judge Runyon in the city court that he worked for a man named Welch in Fanwood and that he carried the weapon as protection because he had been to a party and had a lonegly walk home. The revolver was confiscated and he was told to be in court with his employer Monday morning in order to have his story verified.

Will Resume January 4.

The Y. W. C. A. gymnasium classes will not meet again until January 4, but on Monday afternoon the junior class will gather there for its festivities and on Tuesday afternoon the gym will be used by the gymnasium classes from the North Plainfield High School.

Dryden in P. S. C. Again.

XMAS IN THE CHURCHES

In Protestant Edifices Anniversary of Christ's Nativity is Celebrated.

ELABORATE MUSIC RENDERED.

Special Sermons on the Feast—Sunday School Pupils Hold Exercises.

In many of the Protestant churches yesterday, Christmas was elaborately observed.

First M. E. Church.

Large congregations attended the Christmas services at the First M. E. church yesterday morning and evening, when elaborate musical programs were rendered by the vested choir, under the direction of J. Edmund Skiff, organist and choirmaster. The church was attractively decorated with greens and flowers appropriate to the occasion. Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, pastor, preached two strong sermons, the chief thoughts bearing on the Nativity.

The musical selections at the morning service were as follows:

Prelude, "March of the Magi Kings," Harker; processional, carol, Harker; anthems, "Break Forth Into Joy," Spence; "Song of the Angels," Dressler; Gloria Patri; anthem, "Sing O Heavens," Frey; offertory solo, "The Heavenly Message," Coombs, Miss Bertha vanNuis Willis; with violin obligato, Arthur Misher; recessional hymn, "Morning Star," Harding; postlude, "March Solenelle," Mailly.

The Sunday-school held special exercises in Vincent chapel in the afternoon, in charge of Superintendent James R. Joy. There were recitations by several members of the older classes and the primary and beginners' departments also presented programs. The address to the school was by Rev. Charles S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church.

The primary department gave this program under the direction of Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, superintendent: Recitations, "Merry Christmas," Carol Dunavan; "Our Guide," Elizabeth Hicks; "Christmas Message," Loren Pope; "Christmas Light," Maud Edell, Amy Lorton and Elsie Townley; "Room," John Bolsterli; "Our Prayers," Charlotte Carpenter; "Just Me," Carrie Creager, Leonard Dennick; solo, "Away in a Manger," Frank Rowley, Jr.; song, primary class.

Mrs. Arthur E. Crone was in charge of the program given as follows by the beginners' department: Recitations, Roswell Ewart, Miriam Carpenter, Kenneth Sheppard, Gertrude Joy, Howard Fisher, Lois Beekman, Arthur McVoy and Janet Marchant; songs, "Merry Christmas," and "Sleep, Sleep Baby of Mine," Janet Marchant, Roswell Ewart, Lois Beekman, Marion Covely, Margaret Evans, Bowen Henry, Gertrude Joy and Howard Fisher. The musical part of the service was made of especial interest through the assistance of a stringed orchestra.

The musical selections at the evening service were as follows:

Prelude, Pastorale; processional hymn, "Portugese Hymn;" anthem, "Angels from the Realms of Glory," Shelley; anthem, "The New Born King," Marzo; carol anthem, "O Faithful Shepherds," Macy; offertory solo, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," Schnecker, Bertram Tallamy; hymn, Mendelssohn, Mendelsshon-Bartholdi; recessional hymn, "Regent Square," Smart; postlude, "Christmas March," Merkel.

Grace M. E. Church.

Large gatherings were noted at the Christmas services at Grace M. E. church yesterday. Special music was rendered both morning and evening, and the Sunday-school held Christmas exercises in the afternoon. Rev. O. J. Shoop, the pastor, preached in the morning on the subject, "Immanuel or the Profound Significance of the Incarnation."

Miss Alice Carroll had charge of the musical program and presided at the organ. The choir comprised Miss Josephine Martin, sprano; Mrs. Harry De Meza, contralto; Edson C. Martin, bass; Dyckman Winckler, violin. The program included an anthem, "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," by Schnecker; anthem, Te Deum in B minor, Buck; soprano solo, "Come Unto Me," from the Messiah, by Handel.

At the evening service Rev. Mr. Shoop's theme was "The Changed Calendar." These musical selections were rendered by the choir: Anthem, "Arise, Shine," Buck; "Sing Alleluia Forth," Buck; "Come Ye to Bethlehem," Danks; soprano solo and chorus, with violin obligato, "O Holy Night," by Adam.

The afternoon exercises as carried out by the pupils of the Sunday-school, were: Welcome by Marie Jennings; motion song, "Our Christ-

SIMPLE FUNERAL SERVICE FOR EDWIN F. BROWN, JR.

The funeral of Edwin F. Brown, Jr., who ended his life Christmas eve, was held at his late home on Washington avenue yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross and was extremely simple. Two of the young man's favorite hymns were rendered during the service.

The floral triubites included a set piece from the employes of Mr. Brown's restaurant on North avenue and there were numerous other offerings from friends and neighbors. Burial was made today in Cypress Hills cemetery, Brooklyn.

The attendants at the funeral included the young man's father, E. F. Brown, who has been at Hot Springs, Ark., undergoing treatment for rheumatism and other troubles. He started for Plainfield immediately after receiving word of his son's death and reached here just in time for the service. The father has been unable to throw any light on the cause of the young man's act and it remains as much of a mystery as ever.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PUPILS REMEMBERED TEACHER.

James V. Jenny entertained the members of his Sunday-school class of Hope chapel at his home on Grant avenue, Saturday night. It was a farewell party, as Mr. Penny will be unable to teach the class during the coming year. The boys appreciating his splendid qualities as a teacher and regretting his inability to remain with them, presented him with a diamond scarf pin with the best wishes of the class. The evening was passed in playing games and enjoying phonograph selections. Refreshments were served.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. James V. Penny, Melvine Roseberry, David Hendry, Charles Nicholson, John Porter, Robert Haskard, John Strandburg, Thomas Herron, Walter Penny and Ruth Penny.

Nearly Lost His Thumb.

William Waldron, superintendent of Holly Wood Farm at South Plainfield, which is owned by Fred Endress, narrowly escaped losing the thumb of his left hand Saturday morning. He had just started up the gas engine preparatory to sawing a quantity of wood, when his foot slipped and he fell against the saw. In an effort to save himself he put out his left hand, the thumb coming in contact with the teeth of the saw. The member was badly lacerated and the bone broken. He was hurried to Muhlenberg Hospital, where prompt treatment saved the thumb. The bone was set and several stitches were required to close up the lacerations. Waldron returned home yesterday.

Smothers Fire With Sand.

A bucket of sand extinguished a blaze which started in a house at Hand's brick yard this morning. The Italian family which occupies the place was thrown into a panic when some grease on the stove took fire and boiled over onto the floor, carrying the flames with it. The North Plainfield fire department was called, but before it arrived an employee in the yards had smothered the blaze with sand.

Freedom Castle to Celebrate.

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, is planning for a big time at the regular meeting tomorrow night, when an entertainment and supper will be provided, the occasion marking the retirement of the present officers. In addition the third degree will be conferred on one candidate. A large attendance of members is requested.

Only a Few Chased the Hounds.

The Watchung Hunt Club did not have a regular hunt on Saturday, owing to the condition of the ground, but a half-dozen members went out for a short chase after the hounds. Until the ground gets in better condition the scheduled hunts will be off.

Miss Baxter Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Baxter, formerly of this city, but now of Trenton, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katherine Crissey Baxter, to William F. Groves, of Elizabeth. Mr. Baxter is the State Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Remembered Its Employes.

The Woodhull & Martin Company remembered all of its employes at Christmas time by presenting each one with a pound of Ritz candy.

Y. W. C. A. Gym Open.

The Young Women's Christian Association gymnasium will be open for practice today and tomorrow.

Junior Class Party.

The junior class of the Y. W. C. A., will have a party in the association rooms Thursday night.

THE THEATRE'S OFFERINGS

What Manager Counihan Has Prepared for His Patrons the Present Week.

SEVERAL BIG PRODUCTIONS.

Two Well Known Stars and a Cohan Success Included in the Dramatic Menu.

New Year's week at the New Plainfield theatre will be marked by a series of the best attractions that have yet appeared at the house and which will serve as a criterion for the remainder of the season. Manager Counihan has succeeded in booking for the new year inauguration a star of the first magnitude, Digby Bell, while another in the galaxy of footlight favorites, May Robson, will occupy the boards the succeeding night. The other attractions for the week are none the less meritorious.

Tonight's offering is a new comedy drama by Malcom Douglas, entitled "The Light of Tomorrow." It has met with emphatic success in other cities and comes to Plainfield with a specially selected cast and complete scenic equipment. Miss Kathryn Brower, who was recently seen in Henry Miller's production of "The Great Divide," will have the leading role, while Milton Nobles, well known to vaudeville patrons, will be seen in an important character part.

On Wednesday night, local theatregoers will have their first opportunity to see and hear the celebrated humorist-traveler, Fred Niblo, in his pictorial "Talks of Travel in Distant Lands." Mr. Niblo has been on the stage for many years as a monloguist but secured the material for his talks through journeys made especially for the purpose. The title of his talk this week will be "Africa, from the Cape to Cairo," and for the four succeeding Wednesday nights he will be at the theatre to tell of journeys in "Egypt," "Italy," "London" and "Russia." Each lecture is illustrated with motion pictures and superb colored views. The series will be of great educational value as well as entertaining.

Thursday night will mark the return of George M. Cohan's New Amsterdam success, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," which was seen here previously with Fay Templeton and Victor Moore. The cast is now headed by Mary Gordon, a singing comedienne of more than passing merit, and Scott Welsh, well known to local audiences. The latter will be seen in the laughable role of "Kid Burns." It is needless to say the entire production will be of the usual Cohan & Harris standard and as an added drawing power, the net receipts from the performance will be donated by Manager Counihan to Mayor Fisk's New Year's eve charity fund.

New Year's day will mark the appearance of Digby Bell, who delighted Plainfielders last year in "The Education of Mr. Pipp," in a new play by George Broadhurst, author of "The Man of the Hour," and numerous other successes. It is entitled "An International Marriage" and, as may be surmised, deals with the recent wedding of rich American girls to foreigners with more or less questionable titles. Mr. Bell will be supported by a brilliant company and the production will be marked by elaborate stage settings. The play opens at Weber's theatre, New York, next Monday night, for a long run. The probabilities are that both matinee and night performances on New Year's day will be witnessed by capacity audiences.

The dramatic menu for the week will be completed on Saturday by the presentation of May Robson in the Liberty theatre success, "The Rejuvenation of "Aunt Mary," a comedy that has delighted many thousands of theatre patrons. Miss Robson has just returned from a long tour through the West where every critic accorded her flattering notices. According to the play, "Aunt Mary" has become apparently commolescent, owing to prolonged residence in the country. She goes to the city to visit relatives and various influences combine to make her sprighlier and younger. She rejuvenates a few degrees in each act, so that in the last one she has become as renovated, joyous and as apt to everything as the iridescent May Robson herself. L. S. Sire, under whose management Miss Robson is starring, has surrounded her with a strong supporting company and the stage setting and scenic effects are most elaborate.

Judge Newcorn to Speak.

Judge William Newcorn, of this city, will make the principal address at a meeting of Tonaluka Tribe, No. 241, I. O. R. M., at Cranford, tomorrow night, when a musical will be given. Mr. Newcorn is a past grand sachem of the order and he will talk about the development of it during the past year.

COX MUST GIVE BONDS TO PAY WIFE $5 WEEKLY.

Charles Cox was ordered to pay his wife $5 per week towards the support of his family and to furnish $300 bonds, at his hearing before Recorder Dolliver this morning in the borough police court. He was arrested Christmas Eve on complaint of his wife, who charged that he had not made any attempt to provide for them for two months.

Cox told the Recorder that he had been unable to find work, but it was shown that when he did work a day or two he would spend the money for whiskey. His wife is obliged to work out as a seamstress to support herself and two little children. This is the second time Cox has been arrested on the same charge. Up to noon he had been unable to procure a bondsman and may have to go to the county jail.

MISS ADA BELL NASH THE BRIDE OF NATHAN S. CARR

Announcement is made of the mmrriage of Miss Ada Bell Nash, of Watch Hill, R. I., and Nathan S. Carr, formerly of Hopkinton, R. I., but now of this city, which was celebrated at the parsonage of the Pawcatuck Seventh-Day Baptist church on Christmas Day. The pastor, Rev. Clayton A. Burdick, officiated. The couple were attended by their immediate families and relatives.

Mrs. Carr is the daughter of Everett H. Nash, of Watch Hill. The groom is employed as a shipping clerk in the Spicer Universal Joint Factory, on Madison avenue. The couple will reside in this city.

BONDSMAN SURRENDERED MRS. EMMA BORRALLO.

Mrs. Emma Borrallo who, together with her husband, Dominico Borrallo, was indicted by the Union County Grand Jury on a charge of assault and battery, was surrendered to the county authorities this morning by Nicola LaCorto, her bondsman. This action was taken following the "jumping" of bail of the woman's husband. Michael De Rosa, of Elizabeth, furnished $1,000 bail for Borrallo, but when he was wanted it was learned that he had escaped.

The Borrallos formerly lived at Scotch Plains. The woman was locked up in the county jail today.

Fire Causes $100 Damage.

An alarm of fire was turned in from box 49 at 7 o'clock Saturday night for a slight blaze in the building on South Second street, just below Clinton avenue, owned by Lawrence Kerwin, who conducts a grocery on the first floor. The flames originated in a clothes closet of the apartments occupied by William Barber and ascended upward. They were extinguished by the chemical engine. The damage to the building is estimated at $75 with an insurance of $1,800, while Barber's loss is placed at $25, having insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown but probably resulted in some way from matches being in the pockets of some of the clothing.

Miss Grace Stephenson a Bride.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Grace Stephenson, daughter of William Stephenson, formerly of this city, but now of Monroe, N. Y., and William Edwin Merwin, of New York city. The couple was married on Wednesday afternoon, December 16, at 2 o'clock, by Rev. Dr. Richard M. Travers, of New York city. The bride is well-known here, where she has many friends. Following a wedding trip to Washington, the couple took up their residence in Borough Park, Brooklyn.

Musk Rats Break Dam.

What may result in a serious loss to Debele & Stahl, confectioners and ice cream makers, of the borough, was the breaking of the dam at their pond on Maple avenue, Saturday, allowing the water to run out. The dam has been built up again but unless the water runs in sufficiently there will be no ice crop, which would mean a loss estimated at not less than $1,000. Muskrats burrowing into the earthworks forming the dam is responsible for its giving way.

Weapon Carrier Let Go.

In the city court, this morning, sentence was suspended on Michael Evans, colored, who was arrested Friday night for carrying a revolver. He brought a letter from his employer, stating that a lonely walk home was responsible for his having the gun. Judge Runyon told him that weapon carrying was dangerous and would not be tolerated but that he would allow him to go on this occasion.

New York Couple Wedded.

Miss Celia Goldstien and Charles H. Cramer, New York residents, who are well known in Plainfield, were married last night in Volk's lyceum, New York. The guests from this city included Miss Rose Rothberg and Miss Esther Wolf. The groom is a brother of Mrs. Hyman Mintz and Mrs. J. Wolf, both of Plainfield.

THIS HUBBY STRENUOUS

Enforces Wife's Obedience by Knocking Her Down on a Busy Thoroughfare.

HE BLAMES ANOTHER WOMAN.

Muldowney Objected to Spouse Going With Mrs. Gertrude Sherman Who He Alleges Broke Up His Home.

Mrs. Bertram Sherman and Mr. and Mrs. Cormack Muldowney, who were arrested Saturday afternoon as the result of a brawl at Front and Somerset streets, were given a hearing before Judge Runyon several hours later. At the request of counsel for Mrs. Sherman, the case was adjourned until a week from today, the defendants being released in their own recognizance.

According to the stories told the magistrate, the disturbance grew out of Muldowney objecting to his wife accompanying Mrs. Sherman to the theatre. Mrs. Muldowney has been living in Newark, apart from her husband, and came here Saturday for a visit. She chanced to meet Mrs. Sherman and after having dinner at her home, the two started for Proctor's. They encountered Muldowney at Front and Somerset streets where the latter called his wife to one side to speak to her while Mrs. Sherman continued on for a short distance. When the husband learned where the two women were going he told her he wouldn't stand for it. They exchanged words for a moment or so when Muldowney struck his wife in the face, knocking her down.

The assault was witnessed by Mrs. Sherman, who ran back and objected strongly to any such treatment of her friend but it only served to make Muldowney all the more angry.

"You —— —— ——," he exclaimed, "you're the cause of it all; if it wasn't for you my home wouldn't have been broken up."

Mrs. Sherman took exception to the oath and also to the allegation that she was at the bottom of the Muldowney domestic troubles. She started at the young man for the purpose of scratching her monogram on his face but was struck the same as the wife had been. The two were engaged in a catch-as-catch-can when Patrolman Flynn arrived on the scene and placed both under arrest. Mrs. Sherman refused at first to accompany the officer to headquarters on the ground that it would degrade her but a little persuasion of the usual bluecoat variety made her see things in a different light.

Mrs. Muldowney disappeared when the policeman arrived, but as it was essential that she should be on hand at the hearing she was arrested a little later. A deep black-and-blue mark beneath one of her eyes showed where her husband had struck her. She was accompanied to court by her father, Philip Happney, but the latter di dnot attempt to say anything in her behalf.

Mrs. Sherman is better known by her maiden name, Gertrude Coddington. Witnesses declare that she took no part in the affair until Muldowney had assaulted his wife and objected as anyone would under the circumstances.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH AT BAYONNE WITHOUT DEBT.

Announcement was made at the last mass in St. Mary's church, Bayonne, yesterday, by the pastor, Rev. Andrew M. Egan, a former rector of St. Mary's church, this city, that with the Christmas collection, which amounted to $4,000, the debt of the church would be entirely liquidated. This means that not only will the mortgage debt be paid, but all the floating debt as well. During the past year $19,000 of the debt has been paid. The debt at the beginning of Father Egan's pastorate, which began when he left Plainfield three years ago, was $65,000.

Father Egan will begin immediately to prepare for the consecration of the church in the early spring.

Red Cross Stamps.

Red Cross stamps are most appropriate for New Year's greetings. They may be had in any quantity at The Daily Press office. The entire receipts will be used in the work being done by the Plainfield Tuberculosis Society. Nine of these beautiful stamps sell for ten cents, while twenty-four go for a quarter. They may be had also at Randolph's and at Miller's drug stores, and at Laing's and at Estil's stationery stores.

Drunk Gets Off Easy.

Thomas Harvey was arrested in the borough Saturday night by special officer Sohl for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He was given a suspended sentence this morning by Recorder Dolliver.

SENTENCE SUSPENDED ON RAIDED POKER PLAYERS

Inside information on the rules, proper conduct and dangers of draw poker were revealed in the city court, this morning, when the five colored men, arrested a week ago Saturday night for indulging in the game, were given a hearing before Judge Runyon. A big delegation of interested friends was on hand to view the proceedings and the details of the play before Detective-Sergeant Flynn made a raid were received with great gusto.

The defendants lined up were Lee Wells, at whose house the "sports" assembled; Leander Brown, Ben Potts, Zeb Freeman and Harrison Randolph. They were clean on everything that took place on the night in question with the exception of whether or not the pot was being "cut" for a "kitty." The judge spent ten minutes in trying to refresh their memories on this point as the establishment of the fact would show that Wells was conducting the game for his own benefit, legally proclaiming him the keeper of a gambling house.

Zeb Freeman declared that he was allowed in with the understanding that he was to keep watch but got interested in the proceedings he became derelict in his duty. Wells also maintained that he was only an onlooker while the others admitted risking their money on the pasteboards. Leander Brown said that the pot had been opened and the draw was just about to be made when the cops dropped in. Flynn made a scoop for the money that decorated the mahogany and grabbed something like $2 but it was conceded in court that all but thirty cents belonged to Ben Potts, the other being his working capital. His Honor got all the information he wanted about everything else that took place during the three hours the cards were doled but nary a line on the "kitty" proposition.

At the conclusion of the hearing, the Judge brought smiles to the faces of each of the five men by announcing they had been technically guilty of gambling but that in view of their good records and the Christmas season he would suspend sentence. He asked, however, that they apply their time and money to other pursuits and received assurance that they would.

"No more for mine," was the way Wells put it after the rest had thanked His Honor and withdrew; "I'm thirty-six years old and I'll guarantee I'll be 136 before the cops ketch me playin' poker again."

COURT PLAINFIELD, I. O. F., HOLDS INTERESTING SESSION.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order Foresters, had a large attendance of members at its meeting Saturday night when three applications for membership were received, one was accepted and three were initiated. Past High Chief Ranger Lewis T. Titsworth conferred the initiatory degree and exemplified the work in an able manner on the candidates. Afterward he gave an interesting talk on his recent trip to Toronto as a delegate to the supreme court meeting; also on the growth of the order generally and he predicted a prosperous year for the Foresters during 1909.

At the next meeting of Court Plainfield, January 8, District Deputy Chief Ranger Charles J. McCarthey and staff will install the officers elect after which the good and welfare committee will provide a musical program and smoker.

The Exceptional Child Problem.

The Baptist World, under date of December 24, contains an article of interest to those who are in touch with the work Dr. M. P. E. Groszmann is doing at his school for a typical children on "Watchung Crest." This work is being conducted under the direction of the National Association for the Study and Education of the Exceptional Child, and Dr. Groszmann stands at the head of this movement.

Hope Chapel.

The Sunday-school of Hope chapel observed Christmas with a special program, yesterday afternoon, that was enjoyed by a large attendance. A feature of the program was a stereopticon lecture on "Memories of Jerusalem," given by Rev. L. R. Howard. The rooms were prettily decorated with evergreens.

The exercises were in charge of the superintendent, G. Herbert Condict, assisted by Ira W. Travell. The main school rendered carols and the primary department members gave recitations and songs. Judge William N. Runyon rendered a solo, "The Holy Night." The church choir assisted in the singing.

Mrs. Jane A. Apgar, wife of iWlliam A. Apgar, who died at her home in Sterling last week, left these children residing in this city: Mrs. A. T. Ten Eyck, Mrs. Elizabeth Peck, Edward Apgar and Louis L. Apgar.

HOLDS TOUGHS AT BAY

Capt. C. B. Humphreys, With Negro's Help, Pummels Gang of "Bruisers."

ARMY OFFICER IS DISABLED.

Both of His Hands Broken in Encounter With Fifty Roughs on a Western Train.

Fighting side by side with Nathan Williams, a negro, Capt. C. B. Humphreys of Company L, Twenty-first Infantry, stationed at Fort Logan, near Denver, Colo., knocked out four prizefighters, a trainer and rubber and succeeded in holding at bay more than fifty men who had boarded a suburban Rio Grande train at Petersburg after a prizefight at the Wayside Inn and started a row in the presence of a number of United States Army officers and their wives and guests Saturday afternoon.

Captain Humphreys is well known in this city which he frequently visits. Several years ago he was married here to Miss Florence Waring, a daughter of O. T. Waring, of Park avenue. Only a few weeks ago he spent a furlough at his father-in-law's home.

The Denver conductor stopped the train during the melee and telephoned to police headquarters at Denver, but when the officers met the train they found that the captain's assailants had jumped off.

As a result of the fracas Captain Humphreys is badly disfigured and disabled. He is under the care of the post surgeon at Fort Logan. Both of his hands were broken during the terriffic hand to hand encounter with the prizefight principals and attendants, and it will be two weeks before he recovers.

Williams, the negro, was taken to the police headquarters where after hearing his story he was highly praised by Chief Armstrong and sent home.

Captain Humphreys, when a lieutenant, employed the "short arm jab" effectively at West Point in 1902, when he was instructor in the department of drawing. As Lieut. Humphreys was on his way to the guard house on the main road he was held up by three men, the leader of whom demanded his money. The big lieutenant let drive his good right fist, caught the leader under the jaw and bowled him to the other side of the road, where he lay groaning. The other two were knocked down quickly.

The lieutenant piled them in a heap and, calling on one of the mounted patrol who passed the place in a few minutes, marched them to the guard house. Next morning Humphreys, who is said to be one of the best natured men alive, had the highwaymen's cuts and bruises dressed. They were marched off the reservation.

Between the time of his graduation and his appointment as instructor in 1901, Capt. Humphreys served in the Philippines. There he had several hand-to-hand encounters with the natives, and found opportunity to use a "West Point jab" of one kind or another. Capt. Humphreys was sent to Venezuela in 1904 and passed several months gathering military information there. He studied the coast and interior lines of defense and made a careful estimate of the forces Venezuela could put in the field to co-operate wit hthe United States should it be necessary to defend the Monroe doctrine. From Venezuela Capt. Humphreys went to the Isthmus of Panama to learn how best "the West Point jab" can be delivered on that territory.

Capt. Humphreys is thirty-six years old, was born in Kansas, and appointed to the Military Academy from that State.

NEW YEAR'S RECEPTION AT SENATOR KEAN'S HOME.

Ursino, the home of United States Senator John Kean, will be the mecca for Republican politicians on New Year's Day. The senior United States Senator keeps open house on that day, and about three hundred is the average number of Republicans who pay their respects to him. Union county's Republican politicians gather in great numbers at Kean's home on this occasion, Plainfield invariably being represented by a score or two of its prominent political workers.

The South Jerseymen arrive in the morning and those from the northern end of the state in the afternoon. Congressman Charles N. Fowler also keeps open house on New Year's Day.

"Automobile Thieves."

"Automobile Thieves" will be the feature film at the Bijou theatre, today. It is said to be exceptionally fine from start to finish.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The Salem County Rod and Gun Club has elected Harry G. Hart president.

The seven pound baby boy born at the home of Otto Wolfer, in Millville, on Christmas, died yesterday morning.

The Farmers' Banking Company has been organized at Vineland, with a capital stock of $25,000. The officers are: President, Charles Landis; vice-president, Charles Landis; secretary, Charles Landis; treasurer, Charles Landis.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bryant, of Millville, on Christmas, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. The couple were married at Vineland, and have been residents of Millville for 50 years.

Mrs. Mary Wolfe, of Millville, was found unconscious in her home on Christmas morning. It is believed she had fainted while preparing breakfast. She was taken to the Cooper Hospital, where it was found that she had sustained a lacerated scalp.

Frederick Ward and Herbert Billard were arrested in Millville and were committed to the county jail in default of $500 bail each by Recorder Stackhouse. The charge against them is assault and battery.

Found unconscious at the boarding house of Martin Kenney, Camden, yesterday, Joseph Pryer, aged eight years, died shortly after from disease before he could be taken to a hospital.

Through his father, Francis Dilcher, of Central avenue, West Hoboken, has settled a damage claim with the Public Service Railway Company for $1,000. The boy's leg was severed by a trolley car last May.

Fellow-workers of Joseph Engle, Jr., of Mt. Holly, provided twenty-eight men and teams with which to haul from Camden the lumber needed to build barns to replace those recently destroyed by fire.

The Methodist choir at Mantua, headed by Pastor William Gunn, sang carols about town at 1 o'clock yesterday morning, and returned at 4 o'clock. Christmas morning services were held in the schools.

The Misses Myrtle Keeler and Grace Glassow, of Millville, were taken home from Vineland on Thursday, where they had been visiting friends. The announcement of their marriage at Vineland, on Christmas, was made by the couple while about to start on their wedding journey to Washington, D. C.

Many a French Canadian dinner was "shy of the staff of life," and many a Christmas turkey lacked savory "stuffing" merely because the master bakers of that city neglected in their baking to make allowance for the extra demand and because the journeymen would not work a few hours longer.

Interest is attached to the election of the term of County Collector Joseph Powell, of Burlington county, who has held the office nearly years, with the announcement that Abel Horner, director of the Board of Freeholders, is a candidate for the position. The selection will be made at the meeting of the board on January 1.

An event of unusual interest occurred at the Christmas exercises in the First Presbyterian Sunday school, Gloucester City, last night, when illuminated, engrossed [illegible] were presented to William H. Brown and H. Augustus Brown, brothers, sons of Mr. and Mrs. High Brown, for attendance every [illegible] twenty years.

Charles Mauder, attached to the Methodist church, Camden, left his home at 116 Van Buren street, Camden, last night, and the men at Sebrons found him unconscious on their lawn. He was taken to Cooper Hospital, where it was learned he had been beaten. He said that his father had jumped on him with both feet. The latter was locked up for further examination.

On his way home early yesterday morning Joseph Mancello, of North Front street, Camden, was badly beaten by two men during a fight and was taken to Cooper Hospital, where it was found that he had sustained a lacerated scalp. Frederick Ward and Herbert Billard were arrested in Millville and were committed to the county jail in default of $500 bail each by Recorder Stackhouse. The charge against them is assault and battery.

GOLF.

One hear[illegible] not to bet on golf, but I rather think that with the spreading of the royal and ancient game [illegible] something of a decline in the sporting propensities [illegible] rate as to the making of high wagers. It is seldom [illegible] is fixed up between two professionals on the old style of one green backing their professional against [illegible] fessional of another.

In the days when golf was confined to a comparatively limited area in Scotland there were frequently between the [illegible] Jews and those of Ellie, of Musselburgh and of North Berwick, and often later when Hoylake and Westward Ho! became strongholds of the game in England, the old players of the Royal Liverpool and Royal North Devon were not backward in expressing their opinion and their direct in visiting relatives at Rome, N. Y. local judgment against the representatives of other links. I have pretty vivid recollections of a little bet at Hoylake between Mr. [illegible] and John [illegible] was [illegible] of the old spirit while playing on the Leven links recently. My attention was caught by a rabble of small boys, toddlers of about [illegible] faced lads of 12. My caddie informed me that there was a professional match on [illegible] of the kiddies—for threepence a side. The two contestants were playing with grimly set faces, and they had each a caddie carrying a bag—I doubt not of borrowed or commandeered clubs.

A story on similar lines I might mention in connection with a caddie at Gullane. He was acting in a match in which two friends were playing. As the players were going to the last tee the match was even, notwithstanding his employer, his driver, the caddie besought him to do his very best at this hole as he had a bet on the match. The player did his best, but he lost the hole; and feeling rather uneasy about his failure causing any financial trouble to his loyal supporter he turned to the caddie and said, "Now, John, here, what about that bet? Let me square it up." To his surprise when told that the amount of the bet was a halfpenny.—Westminster Gazette.

BASEBALL

A feature of the big league baseball [illegible] season will be the numerous new managers who will be here and there. The Boston Nationals will have one in Frank Bowerman, the catcher, who succeeds Kelley. The Boston Americans will have Fred Lake, a manager who will be exactly new next season, but who took hold late last season and therefore is more or less of a quantity. In New York the New York Americans will have a new superintendent in George Stallings, successor to Clark Griffith and Norman Elberfield.

The Brooklyns are still managerless, but there will be a change from Donovan is no longer the boss of the Ebbets outfit. Comiskey's Chicago Americans are also without a manager if Fielder Jones is in earnest when he says he won't be in the game next year. Smith is the new range boss for the Cincinnati herd, this being his first managerial berth in the National league. He has been a manager in the American league ever since that organization started, but his National experience was confined to playing.

Roger Bresnahan, for several seasons McGraw's star catcher, is to manage the St. Louis Nationals, his maiden essay in that capacity. Stallings and Griffith are veteran managers who [illegible] new fields while it [illegible] time for Bowerman and Bresnahan.

Exhibition and Sale of Real Irish Lace Made by Real Irish Girls

"Cead Mille Failte"

In the language of the Celts we extend "hundred thousand welcomes" we want all our friends and patrons, whether Irish, of Irish descent or not, to come and see the very interesting exhibition of lace making, and to thoroughly familiarize themselves with the products of Ireland's industries. It will be an education worth while for both old and young, and, of course, particularly interesting to sons and daughters of Erin.

Convent Girls from the School of Industries of Loughlynn, County Roscommon, Ireland, will be present at this demonstration, and will give an exhibition of their cleverness in the art of lace making. The exhibit is in charge of Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, who is on behalf of the United States in aid of the industrial revival of Ireland. Father O'Flanagan's efforts to promote the industries of Ireland are laudable indeed and will be approved by all lovers of the Emerald Isle in this section of Jersey.

The merit of Irish Laces is known the world wide, but of late a great deal of the imitation Irish laces have flooded the market, and this exhibit will serve to illustrate the difference between the sham and the real. Many magnificent pieces of Irish lace, neckpieces, [illegible] will be on display.

The exhibition will be on the Third Floor in the Oriental Rug room, and will begin tomorrow and continue thruout the week.

In connection with this exhibit we will have a show and sale of our own Irish Hand Made Lace—an extensive line of various widths and an immense variety of patterns at Prices that will please you.

New 1909 Laces and Embroideries

Both the Plainfield and the North Plainfield Boards of Education should post a notice good and early next December forbidding the inexcusable practice of pupils giving their teachers Christmas presents. This abuse has been abolished in other places and there is no reason whatever for its existence here.

Trinity Reformed Church.

Services at Trinity Reformed church yesterday were devoted to the observance of Christmas. Besides a special musical program in the morning, there was an appropriate sermon by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, his theme being "The World at Bethlehem."

Red and green decorations overhead brightened the interior of the church. Broad streamers of crepe paper in the two colors hung between the chandliers, and red Xmas bells were suspended from each by strings of tiny red loops. An abundance of flowers and plants were arranged on the altar, while above them was a network of red and green streamers hanging from a motto in large white letters, "Peace on Earth.

In opening his sermon Rev. Mr. Broek stated that he brought personal greetings from Rev. Dr. Schenck, pastor-emeritus, to the congregation, illness preventing his being present.

Taking his text from Matthew 2-2, Rev. Mr. Broek said that the attention of the world was at this period of the year directed towards Bethlehem and the manger, where lay the holy child; that it was that Christ child which now commands the reverence of the universe. Christmas was declared to be the one holiday anniversary that can never be overlooked or its observance discontinued, because of its being linked with the memories of our happy childhood.

Without Christ, what a hopeless world this would be, he exclaimed, for Christmas is the birthday of hope. A Christmas without the cheerful greetings was pictured. There would be no charity for the poor, no kind word for the afflicted, no kindly salutations on the street. With Christ taken from the libraries whole shelves would be left bare; many pages would be torn from the books of the poets; life would be dismal and dreary.

Attention was called to Herod, the King, who lived in a palace amid luxury and splendor. On the other hand Christ was born in poverty and lived in want and humility, and, it was asked, which of the two had done the most good; which would be preferable; a life of ease and self-indulgence, but loss of soul; or a life of self sacrifice, humility and helping others, with a reward in heaven.

"The giving of our hearts is the greatest gift we can bestow upon Christ," the pastor said. "He can increase our joy a thousand fold."

This musical program was rendered by the quartet choir comprising Miss S. Etta Raybert, soprano; Miss Winifred C. Carroll, contralto; Edmund D. Young, tenor; Fred S. Cutter, bass; assisted by Mrs. Violet Truell-Johnston, violin, and Elmer Wheeler, flute, under the direction of Arthur L. Titsworth, organist and choirmaster:

Prelude, selection from "Lucia," Donizetti, violin, flute and organ; Te Deum, Harrison Millard; response, "Hear Us Lord," Henry M. Dunham; anthem, "Angels from the Realms of Glory," Harry Rowe Shelley, quartet; "Holy Night," William Luton Wood, Miss S. Etta Raybert; anthem, "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks," W. H. Neidlinger, quartet; postlude, "Serenade," A. E. Titl, violin, flute and organ.

The evening service was given over to the Sunday-school and many were unable to gain admission to the church. The pupils took part in Christmas exercises under the direction of superintendent F. E. Smith. This program was given:

Contralto solo, "The Virgin's Lullaby," by Miss Winifred Carroll; selections by the orchestra, accompanied by the organ.

Recitation, Carmen Trembath; "The Christmas Message," Alma Alligar, Florence James, Hazel Crevelling, Donald Willett, Alfred Baker, Ellis Enander; "Greeting," Marion Woolley; recitation, "A Problem," Laura Smith; song, "Wide Awake Boys and Girls," Alfred Willett, Russel Sears, John Wirth; recitation, Helen Thompson, Ella Van Arsdale, Harriet Higgins; "The Baby King," Margaret Smith; exercise, "Three Modern Wise Men," Seymore Day, Malcolm Sheppard, Reginald Applegate; recitation, "Bethlehem," Louise Seader; recitation, "If You Were a Little Boy," Howard Willett; song, "Beautiful Story," Adele Freeman; recitation, "His Star," John Dunn; song, "Sleep, Bay Sleep," Marion Blair, Beatrice Bodine, Lillie Schleif, Ruth Enander, Beatrice Tier, Adele Freeman, Marguerite Barkalew. Recitations by the juniors: "The First Christmas," by Helen McGrady; "Bethlehem Stars," by Grace Vail; "The Christmas Babe," by Jennie Sears.

The orchestra, which generously contributed its services, consisted of Arthur S. Mosher, G. W. V. Moy, R. W. Barnes, Charles P. Wheeler and Herbert Smith, violins; Dr. J. F. Berg, 'cello; Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, base viol; Elmer P. Wheeler, flute; Whitney Frazee, cornet; Garret T. Dunham, trombone; Miss Lillian A. Force, piano, and Arthur L. Titsworth, organist.

Rev. Mr. Broek made a brief talk, which he said was for the boys and girls, in which he called attention to the example of Christ's childhood as an obedient and studious boy, doing kind deeds wherever he found an opportunity.

Warren Chapel.

Warren chapel befittingly observed Christmas yesterday with special musical programs at morning and evening services and the Sunday school pupils took part in exercises in the afternoon.

At the morning service, the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, preached, and this music was rendered by the choir, assisted by an orchestra:

Carol, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," Mendelsohn, choir; organ prelude, "Shepherd's Pastorale," Leybach, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey; response to the Commandments, Sir George Elveyfh anthem, "While Shepherds Watched Their Flock," T. Edwin Solly, choir; offertory anthem, "The Birth of Christ," J. Wesley Hughes, choir; organ postlude, "O Joyous Morn," Anon.

James E. Church, superintendent of the Sunday-school, addressed the pupils in the afternoon. James Sanley, of the Crescent Avenue Presbytenian church, sang two solos; recitations were given by Lewis Chandler, Elton Lance, Marie Van Winkle and Seaman Higgins; six little girls sang the cradle song of Martin Luther, and the entire school sang carols, accompanied by an orchestra composed of Martin A. Korff and Robert Stewart, violins; Elmer Wheeler, flute; William Dunn, organist; and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, pianist.

Rev. Mr. McKelvey preached at the night service and this musical program was rendered:

Organ prelude, "He Shall Feed His Flock," (from the "Messiah"), Handel, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey; anthem, "The Heavenly Stranger," Charles Gabriel, choir; offertory solo, "Nazaret," Gounod, Miss Nora B. Schenck; postlude, "Praeludium," C. G. Stanger, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey.

First Presbyterian Church.

An attractive program of Christmas music was rendered at the First Presbyterian church, yesterday morning, under the direction of Clifford A Braider, organist and choir master, by the quartet choir, assisted by Miss Clara VanFleet, pianist and Anton Gloeckner, violinist. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, pastor, delivered two Christmas sermons, which were enjoyed by large congregations.

These selections were given by the choir at the morning service:

Contralto solo, "Prince of Peace," (The Infant King) Bullard, Miss Jassamine Burd; tenor solo, "Birthday of the King," Neidlinger; anthems, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," Nevin; "Arise, Shine," Stephenson. This was the program for the evening service:

Soprano solo, "Under the Silent Stars," Coombs, Miss Lucretia Case; baritone solo, "Nazareth," Gounod, R. W. Byard; violin solos, "Berceuse," Goddard; "Hyme de St. Cecile," St. Saens; trio, "Cavatina," Raff; anthems, "Arise, Shine," Reed; "Star of the Orient," Shelley; "O Babe Divine," Dressler.

First Baptist Church.

The Christmas music at the First Baptist church, yesterday morning was, as usual, of a high order, including several anthems by the chorus choir, under the direction of Howard M. Case, organist. The solo parts were taken by Miss Luella C. Harris, soprano; Miss Gertrude Hinz, contralto; William Holmes, bass, and George C. Smith, tenor. Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist, assisted at the morning service; also at the Sunday-school exercises in the afternoon.

The church was attractively decorated with a large star of evergreens, studded with electric lights, in the centre of which hung a large red bell, also illuminated.

Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor, preached a strong sermon, the theme being "The Mother of Our Lord." He paid a high and deserving tribute to woman, comparing her standing today with that of the Bible days, when she was considered not much above the animal. He declared that Eve, the first woman, had been replaced by the Virgin Mary, who was pure and holy.

The musical selections at this service were as follows:

Prelude, "Andante Religieuse," Dubois, violin and organ; anthems, "O Lovely Voices of the Sky," King; "Glory to God," Noble; "Allelulia," Neidlinger; carol, "Bethlehem Land," Fitzhugh; "Christ's Incarnation," Foster; postlude, Dubois.

The afternoon service under the auspices of the Sunday-school was devoted almost entirely to exercises by the children, a change from the usual custom. Superintendent G. H. Batchelor was in charge. The program:

Prelude, "Adagio," Fesca, organ, violin and piano; carol, "See Amid the Winter's Flaky Snow," school; "The Christmas Story," junior department; carol, "To You, O, Children Dear," junior department; recitation, "The Day of Days," Preston Smith; anthem, "Bethlehem Land," Fitzhugh, choir; recitation, "Our Gifts," Elmer French; solo and chorus, "Just a Little Baby," Elsie Moore, Emily Pilger, Anna Sherwin, Edna White and Grace Hunt; recitation, Gertrude Miller; carol, "One Midnight, O, So Long Ago," school; recitation, "The Shepherds," Helena Francisco; song, Everett Case; recitation, "Bible Gifts," John Endress, Kenneth Spratt, Randolph Douglass, Irving Scarborough, Everett Case, John Cose, Walter Sutphen, Louis Deal and Jane Hoffman; recitation, "Christmas Gifts," Rachel Smith; offertory, "The Brook," Boisdeffre, violin and piano, Christmas offering for Day Nursery; song "The Children's King," junior department; recitation, "Merry Christmas," Hazel Coddington, Edna White, Wilhelmina Endress, Ethel Gerhold, Dorothey Krewson, Anna Sherwin, Anna Blume, Grace Hunt, Emily Pilger, Elsie Moore, Dorothy Lee, Erma G. Dobbins, May Heidloff and Marion Chandler; carol, "Tell It Once Again," school; benediction and postlude.

When the children began practicing Christmas carols, Charles W. McCutchen announced that he would present hockey skates to the boys and fur scarfs to the girls to those selected from the several departments of the school who sang the best and during the services yesterday he announced the names of those who were entitled to the gifts as follows: Miss Lillian Fountain, Miss Mabel VanCamp, Robert Butler, Harold Marsh, Grace Hunt, Emma Pilger, Sherman Chandler and Russell Leek, the last four being from the junior department. There was no evening service at the church, but on Sunday night the Christmas music will be repeated by the choir.

Monore Avenue Church.

What was designated as a last of the year sermon was preached by Rev. C. S. Kemble at the Monroe Avenue church yesterday morning. His subject was, "Taking Account of Stock." It was time, he said, to take a spiritual inventory to find what was good and what bad in our lives, just as a commercial house sums up at the end of the year. The business man takes note of his profitable and unprofitable transactions.

FIRST WOMAN RHODES SCHOLAR TAKKES COURSE.

The first woman Rhodes scholar has arrived in Lindon in connection with the scheme for founding scholarships for women on the lines of the scholarships for men founded by Cecil Rhodes. The scheme was formulated in 1905 by Mme. Thayer, then chairman of the education committee of the Society of American Women in London, who is devoting her life to carrying out its development.

Miss Clara Howard, the scholar in question, who entered for a year of post-graduate study at Girton, is from Columbia University, and her scholarship was raised by the Society of American Women in London, the nucleus being subscribed by the education committee during Mme. Thayer's chairmanship. Miss Howard arrives among us with a brilliant record. The woman Rhodes scholars will in future be chosen by competitive examinations. There was hardly time for this, however, in this case, and thus Miss Howard was chosen on the recommendation of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, the wife of the American Ambassador in London, and of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University.—Ladies' Pictorial.

OLD JEWELS ARE SOUGHT.

Grandmother's jewel casket bids fair to be depleted soon, unless popular fancy wavers.

So much that is old has become new that our grandmothers' possessions are being held up as the latest thing in fashion. This is not only true of clothes, scarfs, hair ornaments, high-heeled slippers, but of jewelry.

With the craze for Byzantine jewelry has come the revival of three kinds of ornaments worn by another generation.

These are corals, seed pearls and cameos. All three are in the height of style.

Necklaces of seed pearls are almost as valued as diamond ones these days. Brooches of them are sought after and worn with great pride.

Cameos, if good, are now worn on the most elaborate evening gowns as well as for street. Large ones set in filagree gold or seed pearls are used for the shoulder clasp or the front of the bodice or a belt buckle; the smaller ones are quite fashionable to catch turnover collars together to fasten a jabot, or to pin a bow of ribbon.

PRETTY COLLARS EASILY MADE

Something new for the neck, intended to give a smart finish to the street toilette, is a black velvet collar that costs several dollars in the shops, but can readily be made at home.

It consists of a stiffened and lined band of black velvet ribbon, about two inches in depth. This is topped by a two-inch double pleating of melon-pink chiffon, each frill narrowly bordered with black. The pleating must be chosen to match some part of the costume, or perhaps the hat trimmings. Large, black velvet buttons are placed at the back and front of the collar, and long, upright loops and ends of the velvet ribbon finish the back, where it fastens.

Many of the new lace stocks, by the way, are finished with a bow at the back—a reversion to a style of years ago, except that these bows are all long and narrow.

He wants to know whether he is in a bad business, or if in a good business, but doing poorly; or if in a good business doing well. If he is in a bad business, he wants to know the thing to do, to get into better. In this way the pastor called attention to the application of business methods to spiritual life in taking stock of ones own good and bad qualities.

The church was decorated for the Christmas season, with arches of evergreen overhead and a large star above the altar.

At the evening service Rev. Kemble delivered a sermon entitled "A Good Lesson from a Bad Man." The congregation joined in singing Christmas carols. Special Christmas exercises by the Sunday-school will be held in the church tomorrow night.

Faith Chapel.

The Sunday-school of Faith chapel held interesting Christmas exercises yesterday afternoon, L. W. Randolph the superintendent in charge, assisted by the pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson, as well as the assistant superintendent, Frank Stewart. The chapel was decorated with evergreens and flowers.

The program opend with a Christmas carol by the school, followed with Scripture reading by Superintendent Randolph and prayer by Mr. Stewart. Then these numbers were given by members of the school:

Recitations, "Christmas Wish," Fred Berg; "Gifts," Mildred Dower; "God Bless Us All," David Meyer; "My Gift," Alice Simons; "Little Candles Bright," Cora Cornelus; Harry Winn, Lettie Askhan, William Cartright, William Guttman, Clarence Hook; song, "Hurry Little Snowflake," primary department; recitations, "The Sweetest Story," Amelia Wurgler; "Away in a Manger," Lillian Ryno; "Christmas Joys," Florence Newman; "A Star Shone," Emma Askhan; remarks by Rev. J. W. Musson.

William Conger, as secretary of the school, presented the annual report, showing the total membership to be 235 a gain of forty-seven over last year. The averaged attendance has been remarkably good, several classes having ninety-nine and one hundred percent. The exercises closed with a carol and the benediction by the pastor, Mr. Musson. The Christmas entertainment will be held tomorrow night.

A feature of yesterday's observance of Christmas was the part taken by the members of the Chinese Bible Class. There was a good attendance and the teachers were remembered with suitable gifts.

Scotch Plains Baptist Church.

"The Coming of the King," a musical service of sacred song and Scripture story, arranged by the pastor, Rev. Franklin K. Matthiews, was rendered by the choir of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, at the vesper service held in the church at 4:30 o'clock, yesterday afternoon. The choir was assisted by Albert Edmond Angus, baritone of New York, whose singing was so much enjoyed at the first of the special musical service held several weeks ago.

Miss L. Conger, soprano soloist of the choir, was in fine voice and her solo, "O, Jerusalem, Look About Thee," was well rendered. "The Virgin's Lullaby," a contralto solo by Mrs. Charles R. Vincent, was greatly enjoyed. The service was the second of the special ones to be held at the church during the winter. Miss Hannah Hayes is the organist and the choir is comprised of the following: Sopranos and altos, Miss F. Allen, Miss L. Conger, Mrs. Frank Conger, Mrs. Edward Hand, Mrs. J. Lindahl, Mrs. C. R. Vincent; tenor, Frank Conger; basso, R. W. French.

FOR AFTERNOON WEAR.

All the fashions are not for the young this winter. There never were prettier costumes for elderly ladies. The lines are just suited for figures that have lost something of their definiteness.

All the shades of gray as well as all black build these costumes. The woman who wants a good-looking suit for dressy aftternoon affairs chooses a long, straight high-waisted black liberty skirt, which has three small shaped capes over the shoulders.

There is a high turnover collar faced with velvet, embroidered with gold threads. The wide cuffs match the collar. There is a tiny waistcoat of gold embroidered black satin and a full jabot of fine old lace.

With this suit is worn a wide turban of black satin laid in folds with a white osprey at the side.

So Masculine.

"What a masculine creature she is!"

"I hadn't notice dit. What has she done?"

"I saw her give the soda clerk a nickel when she had five pennies in her purse.—Cleveland Leader.

Nothing From Papa.

Father—Well, sir, what can I do for you?

SWEATERS AND GLOVES FOR THE COLD DAYS.

One of the most comfortable garments that should be included in every school girl's outfit is a coat sweater. These are more convenient than the old-fashioned kind, like boys' wear, that had to be slipped over the head and drawn down.

The coat sweater comes in colors as well as white. It has good-looking lines, and is knit into a coarse heavy mesh that has a good deal of style.

Some of them have turn-over collar and cuffs of silk or velveteen, but these are not quite desirable, as they are hard to clean.

The fastening is down the front, of strong bone buttons the color of the wool. There are pockets on each side, sizable ones that wil lhold many small articles as well as cold hands.

Hanging on the peg with the sweater should be a pair of loose woolen gloves, the kind that can be washed without shrinking.

Every youngster wants a pair of these for outdoor wear in bitter weather. They are not only warmer than kid ones, but can be kept clean at home, and they have no button at the wrist to impede circulation.

Bronze an Evening Color.

One of the combinations coming into first style for indoor gonws is bronze satin. It is used for an empire skirt that reaches to the bust, and above this is a bodice of bronze sequins mixed with gold thread, run on brown net.

The bodice is made in the usual way out of bands going around the figure and over the arms. The only touch of any other color is a bit of white tulle at the neck and sleeves.

This combination is adapted for elaborate low-necked frocks worn for special occasions. As a rule brown is not considered among the evening colors, but this copperly bronze tone shows off the heavy bullion trimming in an effective manner, and lights up well under the electrics.

Show girls in "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," at the New Plainfield.

LOCAL ENTERTAINMENTS

"The Light of Temptation," by Malcolm Douglas, a beautiful comedy-drama in four acts with an all star cast, produced under the personal direction of Mr. Holbrook Blinn now playing with Mrs. Fiske at the New Plainfield theatre in advance of its appearance here.

"Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight. The play has been one of the biggest hits on Broadway for two years and is admirably cast and staged. Seats are selling at the theatre for the performance.

Come early while the best seats are left.

Dustin Farnum in "The Virginian" at the New Plainfield theatre on Friday, January 1.

Dustin Farnum, who will be seen here next Friday in "The Virginian" at the New Plainfield theatre, is a young man who has risen rapidly in his profession. He is a native of Massachusetts and is a nephew of the late Joseph Jefferson. He made his first appearance on the stage in his uncle's company in 1897 and was with him for three years playing such parts as Dick Dudgeon in "The Devil's Disciple," Caleb Plummer in "The Cricket on the Hearth" and Asa Trenchard in "Rip Van Winkle." He then went with Nat C. Goodwin and was with him for two years playing such parts as Sir Harry Hotspur in "Sir Richard Calmady," Lord Dorchester in "The Cardinal" and Sir Walter Raleigh in "Will Shakespeare." He then went with Mrs. Fiske and was with her for two years playing such parts as Frank Hallam in "Becky Sharp," Rudolph Rasendyl in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and Dick Varden in "Mme. Sans Gene." He then went with Miss Julia Marlowe and was with her for two years playing such parts as Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet," Orlando in "As You Like It" and Cyrano de Bergerac in "The Sunshine of Love." He then went with Miss Ethel Barrymore and was with her for two years playing such parts as Geoffrey Tempest in "Alice of Old Vincennes," Jack Point in "The Fortune Teller" and Dick Dudgeon in "The Devil's Disciple." He then went with Miss Marie Cahill and was with her for two years playing such parts as Lord Dolly in "Marrying Mary" and Tom Boyle in "Nancy Brown." He then went with Miss Elsie Janis and was with her for two years playing such parts as Jack Wilton in "The Fortune Hunter" and Jack Ashton in "The Slim Princess

"Why is it haunted? I ask on to Mrs. Arnold died off in Europe, so 'tain't her; and [illegible] Some folks say the land [illegible] before [illegible] buscar after it. There's the house, general."

[illegible] Street limned a ghastly chill, and on its crest a large house, in mission [illegible] size of the grounds [illegible] mansion as effect of space. Of almost [illegible] though it was, the kindly climate had so fostered the growth of the pine, [illegible] oaks, the eucalyptus and the orange [illegible] the creeping ivies and Bougainvilleas [illegible] arches of the porte cochere, and so sumptuous [illegible] beds in the garden [illegible] yet on the other, [illegible] stones from California and [illegible] statues and [illegible] or faint green moss, that the beholder might fancy the house to be the [illegible] home of some [illegible] haunded [illegible] a hereditary curse [illegible] race. One was tempted to such a flutter of fancy because of the impression given by the mansion. A sullen reticence hung about the place. The [illegible] heavily shuttered. Not a pane of glass [illegible] tiful terraces and the lovely sweep of hillsides where the wonderful shadows swayed and [illegible]

The bent figure of a man raking [illegible] motions of the motor car, nor did he answer a [illegible] Then he [illegible] was in the [illegible] the gate. The man, whose Japanese features were quite [illegible] bowed; he explained that the honorable owners were [illegible] at home; his insignificant [illegible] of the grounds. He spoke sufficiently [illegible] of a deprecatory, amiable smile. Birdsall, in [illegible] companion, was a very great [illegible] man from the east who belonged to a [illegible] vestigating spectral appearances, and [illegible] that he had come thousands of miles to see the ghost.

The Japanese extended both hands, while the appeal of his smile deepened [illegible] "Do you believe in the ghost?" asked Col. Winter.

"No, me Clistian boy; no [illegible] not'ings."

"All the same," said the colonel, [illegible] laboriously swinging himself from his vantage-ground of the motor seat [illegible] ling to the green sward below, "allee same, [illegible] go in house hunt ghost." He crackled [illegible] the slim brown hand, smiling and [illegible] brusque [illegible] Birdsall, [illegible] had safely shut off his engine, [illegible] he placed him [illegible] with an agility hardly to be expected of his [illegible]

Whether [illegible] cause he perceived him [illegible] of suspicion [illegible] he accepted the money [illegible] the garden [illegible] he stepped into the role of cicerone with no atom of resistance; he was voluble; he was [illegible] he was artlessly [illegible] his senors. In spite of this [illegible] of stability, however, there [illegible] no possibility of [illegible] them to the house.

Assured of this, the two men [illegible] the [illegible] house, beautiful gardens; but we [illegible] to see the [illegible] me young [illegible] see him—or write, and [illegible] back."

The gardener [illegible] honorable [illegible] soiled [illegible] name [illegible] of the gentleman in charge of [illegible] property. Birdsall, peeping over [illegible] hand's breadth behind the runner.

They [illegible] two places, but they easily extinguished the [illegible] flames. In both cases the bomb turned out to be no more dangerous than a common kind of fire [illegible] yielding [illegible] closure, but doing no special damage on [illegible] ground, like a hearth. They were quickly extinguished. In their search they passed from one luxurious room to another, the Jap leading, until he finally halted [illegible] ly tempting a book-lover. But the colonel [illegible] not its body; the richest and clearest [illegible] ing had left him cold; moreover, every fiber in him was strung by his quest; and Haley, naturally, was immune; strangely enough, it was the cheerful, [illegible] glance, rapid but full of admiration, at the shelves and pile of missals on the table, incongruously jostled by magazines [illegible]

Winter faced the Jap, who was sheathed again in his bland and impassive politeness. "Where is Mr. Mercer?" said he.

The Jap waved his hands in an eloquent oriental gesture. He assured the honorable questioner that he did not know any Mr. Mercer. There was no one in the house.

The colonel [illegible] stamped leather; he [illegible] looked [illegible] invalid. [illegible] he commanded. Birdsall [illegible] the latter silently flung back the lapel of his coat.

"I thought to tell you," [illegible] Rupert Winter, "that the game is up. [illegible] do no good for you [illegible] me or into anything; we have only to [illegible] the second ball they had as many as twenty chances for a goal inside of two minutes and failed every time. The church boys were accurate in their [illegible] count. The score at the end of the first half was 14 to 7 in favor of the [illegible] scored twenty-five points to their final score 39 to 25. The line-up:

Hunter, F. Rimmer, center. Mar[illegible] and Clyde Doane. Holy Cross Club —Forwards, Bristol and R. Vail; center, [illegible] Hunter; guards, J. Mortimer and [illegible] Miller 6, Mortimer 5, Doane 3, Miller 1. Referee, William [illegible] Kenny; umpire, William [illegible] timekeepers, H. Fitzbrook and [illegible] Vail; scorer, John Storah.

RECORD BIG SCORE. 12s

"I am not often mistaken in people," [illegible] the colonel's rather oblique answer. "I think you [illegible] a gentleman who [illegible] had a chance, but would not break his word to me. If you will promise to play fair with us, do no harm to [illegible] take this letter and bring me an answer—if you find [illegible] on your word of honor as a Japanese soldier and gentleman, you may go; we will not signal the police. Is it a bargain?"

The Jap gravely assented, still in the language of the east, "saving his face" by the declaration of the absence of his principals. And he went [illegible] between them.

"Wonder he try some skin game on us," the detective [illegible] Winter only inclined toward [illegible] "Listen at it," he said, "you can tell if the wires are cut; [illegible] hiding, somewhere; he doesn't know how [illegible] advantage of [illegible] they [illegible] into their secret. We can have a whole gang. We haven't many [illegible] they may think we have."

Birdsall, who had lifted the receiver to [illegible] by a search in every nook and cranny of the apartment. But [illegible] peared important enough to justify the production of his note-book and his fountain-pen. He had paused in [illegible] nel sat up sudd[illegible] his keener [illegible] sound which [illegible] windows in succession. He called [illegible] guard the door) and dispatched him across the [illegible] explained, "but Haley will be too late; we are on the wrong side of the [illegible] for the protection [illegible] As he spoke the buzz of an electric bell [illegible] coming in the front door," hazarded Birdsall.

Evidently, returned the colonel, [illegible] "How can our [illegible] in otherwise—at least how can they let us understand they have come [illegible] I think we are going to have the pleasure of an interview with the elusive Mr. Mercer [illegible]

The [illegible] The colonel [illegible] Birdsall [illegible] breathing [illegible] He [illegible] uttered [illegible] reads the [illegible] "Here are [illegible] papers; yes, Examiner and Chronicle, unfolded and smoked over [illegible] for here [illegible] a stamp—decidedly our cherry-blossom friends are getting civilized!"

On [illegible] Mercer was not in the least flurried; he looked at the two men [illegible] the [illegible] suspicion [illegible] with the melancholy courtesy of his [illegible] before.

"This, I think, is Col. Winter," he said, returning the bow, but not extending his hand. [illegible] down, and empty, at his side. [illegible] recognized [illegible] time Mr. Mercer.

"I am sorry that I did not recognize you before," [illegible] Mercer. "Will gentlemen be seated? I am not the owner of the [illegible] I am not even a friend, only a casual [illegible] but I [illegible] I offer you some Scotch and Shasta—Mr.—ah—

Mr. Horatio Birdsall [illegible] Winter. Birdsall bowed. Mercer bowed. "Excuse me if I decline [illegible] both; our time is limited—no, thank you, not a cigar, either. Now, Mr. Mercer, to come to the point, I want my [illegible] I understand he is in his [illegible]

"You [illegible] taken," Mercer [illegible] with [illegible] calm. He [illegible]

"I [illegible] back to the Plains [illegible] find him there [illegible] and shoot us up again!" His [illegible] strayed for a second to the blackened, rocking mass on the great stone hearth.

"Do you sent him home? Is that what you mean [illegible]

BROOKLYN'S SPEEDY FIVE LOSE HARD FIGHT TO LOCALS

The fastest and most exciting basketball game of the local season was that between the major Y. M. C. A. team and the association five from Brooklyn, Saturday night, resulting in a victory for the home team, 36 to 31. It was a close score, and was a struggle for the lead during every minute of play. There was scarcely a let-up in the applause from the packed spectators' gallery, the fast playing and sensational shooting keeping the onlookers in a high tension from the beginning.

Brooklyn sent its best team and it is the fastest by far that has confronted the local team, which also was in the best of condition.

Physical Director Listman of the local association, recognized in the boys from Brooklyn a part of what was then the junior team under his direction while located at that place several years ago.

The line-up:

| PLAINFIELD. | BROOKLYN. |
|---|---|
| Loizeaux | Howard |
| Denton | F. Kappes, Werner |
| forwards. | |
| Cahoone | O. Kappes |
| centre. | |
| Miner | Krause |
| Joseph, Gilmore | Meyre |
| guards. | |

Field goals: Loizeaux 5, Denton 7, Cahoone 1, Gilmore 3, Howard 6, F. Kappes 2, Werner 2, Krause 3, Meyer 1; foul goals: Cahoone 4, O. Kappes 3.

Referee, C. B. Morse; umpire, T. Kiendal, of Columbia University; timer, George C. M. Smith; scorer, Walter Sampson.

LOCAL LEAGUE TEAMS PLAY CLOSE GAME.

The Business Men five lost to the Second Y. M. C. A. team Saturday night by a narrow margin, 22 to 18. Doane shot 10 foul goals out of 12.

The line-up:

| BUSINESS MEN. | SECONDS. |
|---|---|
| Doane | Templin |
| Webster | Mackey |
| forwards. | |
| Dunning | Hoagland |

HOPE'S FIVE WALLOPS HOLY CROSS CLUB TEAM

The Hope chapel Young Men's Club basketball team defeated the Holy Cross Club five at Hope gymn. Saturday night, by a score of 39 to 25. The game was witnessed by a large number of people, who were rather partial to the victors, but the Holy Cross rooters made up in enthusiasm what they lacked in numbers.

The chapel boys displayed fine team work, the passing being unusually rapid. The weak point was in shooting goals. At one point in the second half they had as many as twenty chances for a goal inside of two minutes and failed every time. The church boys were accurate in throwing goals, making every chance count. The score at the end of the first half was 14 to 7 in favor of the Y. M. C., and during the second half they scored twenty-five points to eighteen for the visitors, making the final score 39 to 25. The line-up:

Hope Y. M. C.—Forwards, M. Hunter, F. Rimmer; centre, Muir and Mortimer;* guards, H. Kenny and Clyde Doane. Holy Cross Club—Forwards, Bristol and R. Vail; centre, A. Miller; guards, J. Lindsay and A. Blazier. *Mortimer played in second half.

Goals from the field—Hunter 6, Millar 6, Mortimer 5, Doane 3, R. Vail 3, H. Kenny 2, J. Lindsay 2, Muir 1, Rimmer 1, Bristol 1. Goals from foul—Doane 3, Miller 1. Referee, J. Kenny; umpire, William Little; timekeepers, H. Firstbrook and Ira Vail; scorer, John Slorah. Twenty minute halves.

RECORD BIG SCORE, 128 TO OPPONENT'S ONLY 10.

The most remarkable score made in a basketball game this year is the 128 to 10 result of a contest at the Y. M. C. A. gym Saturday morning, when the association boys team piled up the figures against the second boys five.

The line-up:

| BOYS. | SECOND BOYS. |
|---|---|
| A. Manley | Love, Walker |
| Neylor | Cummings |
| forwards. | |
| Ulmer | F. Hochberger, Lewis |
| centre. | |
| Vail | S. Hochberger |
| R. Manley | Dunning |
| guards. | |

Goals: Manley 19, Neylor 12, Ulmer 18, Vail 10, Manley 1, Walker 3, Love 1, F. Hochberger 1.

WESTFIELD WOODMEN LEAD IN THE TOURNEY.

The Woodmen, of Westfield, are showing the way in the Fraternal League bowling tourney now in progress at Campbell's alleys with seven games won and two lost.

The Elks and Miantonomo Tribe of Red Men are tied for second and third position with the representatives of the Saengerbund in fourth place.

Standing of the teams:

| | Won. | Lost. |
|---|---|---|
| Woodmen | 7 | 2 |
| Elks | 4 | 2 |
| Miantonomo | 4 | 2 |
| Saengerbund | 5 | 4 |
| Bicycle Club | 3 | 3 |
| Knights of Pythias | 1 | 5 |
| Wetumpka | 0 | 6 |

The schedule for this week is as follows: Tonight, Elks vs. Wetumpka; Wednesday night, Bicycle Club vs. Knights of Pythias.

Basketball Games Tonight.

Two local league basketball games are scheduled for tonight at Y. M. C. A. gym. The Business Men meet the Comets and the Aurors play the Meteors.

TO AID THE COOK.

A dish of baked potatoes can be made more attractive if over the top is placed a rim of mashed potatoes run through the ricer, and inside a handful of grated cheese. Hard boiled eggs run through the ricer look attractive as a meat or calad garnish.

An individual salad is made by placing in the heart of a bleached lettuce head a tablespoonful of creamed salmon, one teaspoonful of French peas and one teaspoonful celery, covering all with mayonnaise. Afterwards garnish with little ornaments cut from sliced beets and add two or three olives.

The best cake icing is made of brown suger cooked with butter, after which milk is added and the mixture boiled to a soft taffy and whipped to a cream. Among the necessary flavorings needed this winter will be lemon, cloves, orange, rose powder, extract of onion, pistachio, peppermint, sweet and bitter almond. Rose water gives white cake a delicate flavor.

OOZE LEATHER NOVELTIES.

The girl who delights in making pretty things can construct many novelties that her less thoughtful sister will wonder about.

One of the latest fads is the making of articles of ooze or velvet leather. The woman of ideas and originality can make many beautiful articles from one skin. One novelty is made by puncturing cushions and lacing them together with handsome gold cords. A style that is well liked is found in applique. One can stitch satin designs to give a border effect, and cretonne flowers stitched and outlined with floss are decorative Baby slippers or bootees can be made of ooze leather. They are very easily constructed, and patterns for these diminutive shoes are always obtainable. The ooze leather tie and belt is another new idea, the former a four-in-hand, with the monogram burned upon the tie end. Book backs, needle books, etc., are bits of work for the beginner.

To Clean Gloves.

White kid gloves for evening wear may be rubbed with cream of tartar, and if very slikhtly soiled it will make them look like new. A piece of flannel dipped in benzine, and allowed to nearly dry before it is applied, is more efficacious for really soiled gloves. After applying the benzine they should be rubbed again with bread crumbs until all stains and dirt are removed, changing the crumbs as soon as they become soiled. Fuller's earth is excellent for cleaning suede gloves. The gloves must be drawn on the hands, and the earth rubbed in well with a small soft brush. An old nail or tooth brush answers the purpose admirably. Some people use a mixture of fuller's earth and powdered alum in equal quantities.

Patients Were Remembered.

The Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital generously remembered the inmates of the institution at Christmas time. Attractively decorated Christmas trees were sent to each ward, and in addition large baskets of fruit and sweet chocolate from Plainfield merchants were distributed among the patients, making the occasion one of great pleasure to them. The patients were also remembered by their friends and relatives.

Asking Impossibilities.

Teacher—Johnny, where is the North Pole?

Johnny—Dunno.

Teacher—You don't know, after all my teaching?

Johnny—Nope. If Peary can't find it there's no use of my trying.—Brooklyn Life.

Sanity In a Father.

"Whatever do you want to elope for? Your parents have nothing against your engagement."

gestion came from papa. He thought it would be cheaper."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Mrs. Clive N. Elliott and sons, Russell M. and Edwin D., of Nutley, Essex county, spent Sunday at the home of Street Commissioner John Y. Barrett, of Regent street, the borough. Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Barrett are cousins.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

Rev. A. E. Finn will deliver his fifth anniversary sermon at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning.

A business meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Hope chapel will be held at the chapel tomorrow night.

A Christmas cantata will be given at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow night under the auspices of the Sunday-school.

There will be a joint meeting of the church and the Christian Endeavor Society at the Park Avenue Baptist church Wednesday night.

The annual Christmas entertainment of the Friends School will be held at the Friends Meeting-house on Watchung avenue tonight.

The regular communion service will be held at the Seventh-Day Baptist church Sabbath morning. The covenant meeting will be held at the church Friday night.

The First Baptist church Sunday-school will hold its Christmas entertainment tomorrow night. The junior department will have their entertainment Wednesday afternoon.

An entertainment will be given in the parish house of the Church of the Heavenly Rest on Clinton avenue tonight at 8 o'clock, entitled "Mother Goose." The children from the Sunday-school will take part and all friends are invited.

The primary department of Hope chapel Sunday-school will hold its Christmas entertainment in the chapel Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, instead of joining with the main school which will hold its entertainment in the evening at 8 o'clock.

CITY FATHERS' ROUTINE

Big Batch of Minor Business is Transacted at Adjourned Session.

LIQUOR LICENSE TRANSFERRED

Monthly Reports Filed—Trolley Schedule Up—Sewage Commission Progress.

It being decided that another meeting should be held tomorrow night, the Common Council at its adjourned session last night, did not transact as much business as expected. The fact that the bills were passed at the meeting a week ago left still less to be done last night. Upon application of W. J. Poulson, who recently disposed of his business at the Hotel Kensington to John Burns, his liquor license was transferred to the latter on motion of Councilman Gloak, a member of the license committee.

Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh presented the report of the order of the Court of Common Pleas in appointing commissioners to assess benefits on account of street macadamizing and the brick pavement and the same was filed. The commissioners, T. J. Hughes, H. B. MacDonald and A. J. Gavett, completed their work some time ago.

The Plainfield-Union Water Company notified the Council that it had located one two-way hydrant on West Eighth street and another at Ravine and Denmark roads, as directed by a previous resolution. The Public Service Corporation informed the Council that it had placed four new street lights as directed.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that during the past month twenty-two permits were granted, and City Engineer A. J. Gavett reported that he had granted forty sewer permits. Horace G. Adams, clerk of the District court, reported receipts for the month of $101.39, and a balance of $70 turned over to the city treasurer.

The special sewage commission, through Chairman F. E. Mygatt, reported that Hering & Fuller, the engineers, had completed the field work and are now engaged in compiling estimates. It was hoped to have the complete report ready for presentation about the middle of January.

As chairman of the finance committee, to whom several matters were referred, Mr. Buxton returned the petitions, accompanied by opinions from Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh. One was in reference to the petition of Mrs. Mary C. Moore regarding an assessment for macadamizing on her West End property. She complained that twenty feet of her property had been utilized for a wing wall to the county line bridge and she protested against the assessment of $178.48. Mr. Marsh informed the Council that Mrs. Moore's remedy was in an action against the county and the city has nothing to do with her complaint.

Regarding the petition of Sidney T. Perrin, who protested against a sewer assessment of $30 on property at John and West Seventh streets, Mr. Marsh told the Council that there were no facts in the petition which would warrant action on its part. As to the petition of Herman A. Weber in which he objected to paying an assessment for macadamizing in front of his property on West Second street, Mr. Marsh advised that the matter be carefully investigated. Mr. Weber claims that he had that portion of the street macadamized at his own expense and does not want to pay another assessment. Mr. Marsh instructed the Council to refer the petition to the 1909 body and then to an appropriate committee for investigation.

Upon the recommendation of Mr. Marsh the petition of the New Jersey Central for an apportionment of taxes on its property on Park avenue and North avenue, was allowed, resolutions covering the requests being adopted.

A resolution offered by Mr. Gloak and adopted, provided for the laying of sidewalks in front of certain properties and placing a lien thereon for the cost of the work.

Mr. Mygatt, as chairman of the public affairs committee to which was referred the matter of improved trolley service, presented a lengthy report, in which it recited in detail what had been done in this direction and the result, which is the present new schedule of operating trolley cars in the city and which the committee believes will help to solve the difficult problem. Mr. Mygatt also presented on behalf of his committee and the light committee, the petition received from the Plainfield Merchants' Association pertaining to arc lights in the business section with the request that it be referred to the 1909 body and that the association be asked to submit detailed

CHRISTMAS DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB

The Christmas dance at the Park Club last night was one of the most elaborate in recent years, it being a masquerade and the costumes were especially fine. The affair was held under the auspices of the entertainment committee, while Mrs. Henry McGee, Mrs. Robert H. McCuthcheon and Mrs. Josephus H. Howell were the patronesses.

There was an unusually large crowd numbering about two hundred and it included many college students who are home for the holiday season as well as several private parties, as guests of the members. Among these parties was one arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. McCutcheon, including Gilbert Brown and Curtis Brown, of Cambridge, Mass.; George Grandey, Lewis Williams and Girth Williams, of this city.

Among some of the most noticeable costumes were these:

Mrs. A. M. Abbott, Salvation Army lassie; A. M. Abbott, Chinaman; Miss Virginia Hegeman and Mrs. Donald McGee, white Hussars; Miss Rae Hooley, Priscella; Miss Katherine McCutcheon, hunting costume; Miss Julia Mackenzie, hunting costume; Harry White, colored woman; D. J. Randall, straw man; Kenneth Mackenzie, Mackenzie clan costume.

The music for the dance was furnished by Muller, of Brooklyn. The dancers remained masked until 12 o'clock, when they disclosed their identity. There was an hour's intermission, during which refreshments were served. Then the dancing was continued until an early hour this morning.

PROTEST MADE AGAINST THIS BUILDING PERMIT

A lengthy petition signed by nearly all of the property-owners on Washington avenue, city and borborough, and others, was presented to the Common Council, at its adjourned meeting last night, by Miss Mary Brown, protesting against the erection of a barn next to her residence property on the avenue. It was characterized as not only a nuisance, but a disgrace and an extra hazardous fire risk. The petitioners asked to have the permit for the building revoked. Among those who signed the petition were Charles W. McCutchen, John P. Emmons, Dr. F. E. DuBois, T. S. Armstrong, Charles H. Lyman. The petition was referred to the fire and building committee.

Former Judge W. A. Coddington, of the firm of Reed & Coddington, was present as the counsel for Miss Brown, while Judge William Newcorn attended in the interest of Max Goldstein, who is erecting the barn. Later in the evening it was decided to allow a public hearing. This will be arranged for by the counsel in the matter. Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh will probably be requested to give an opinion.

CITY JUDGE SUBMITS HIS ANNUAL REPORT

The annual report of City Judge William N. Runyon, submitted to the Common Council last night, shows that 821 cases had been disposed of by him during the past year. Of this number fines were imposed on 112, while 123 were sent to the county jail and sentence was suspended in 522 cases; twenty-two were dismissed, three were held for the juvenile court, twenty-nine were held for the Grand Jury, one put on probation and nine cases are still pending. Judge Runyon also reported the receipts of the year to be $770 and the disbursements $235.15.

In connection with the report, Judge Runyon took occasion to commend the police department for its efficient service and co-operation and congratulated the Common Council that for the first time in forty years the city was about to have a police headquarters worthy the name.

Will Entertain Bridal Party.

Miss Jeannette G. Addis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Addis, of Orange place, will entertain her bridal party this evening at her home, following a final rehearsal at Grace church, where she will be married Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock.

FREEDOM FOR CONVICTS

Governor Fort Increases the Parole System Because Prison is too Small.

BOARD CONSIDERS 240 CASES.

Paroles Granted on Eighty Petitions—1,402 Convicts in the State Prison at Present Time.

Governor Fort's plan to relieve the congestion at the New Jersey State prison by enlarging the parole system will be put to a practical test as a result of yesterday's session at Trenton of the Court of Pardons, when paroles were granted to eighty convicts. This is nearly three times the number usually released at one term of court, and constitutes about 6 per cent of the prison population.

Governor Fort has for many years been a strong advocate of the parole system, which was indorsed by the last national prison congress, and has also received the approval of the State prison authorities, including George O. Osborne, head keeper, and the prison inspectors. The total number of prisoners now under parole in this State is about 150, so that the action of the court yesterday will mean an increase of about fifty per cent. This will be further increased at an adjourned meeting of the Court of Pardons, at which fifty-five additional applications for paroles are to be considered.

Before yesterday's session a special committee of the court, consisting of judges of the Court of Errors and Appeals, had spent several weeks visiting the prisons, with a view of weeding out the meritorious applications for paroles from the others. The result of their labors was in the main ratified by the Court of Pardons. An analysis of the paroles shows that thirty-nine convicts, or about fifty per cent of those paoled, were serving terms for larceny, burglary, robbery and kindred offences.

Seventeen were sentenced for various degrees of assault and seven for homicide. In proportion to the number of prisoners incarcerated for specific offences, those convicted for crimes against nature were generally not released, there being only eight of the entire number from this class. Two bigamists, three forgers and two convicted of obtaining money under false pretence were paroled, the offences of the others being scattering and generally including not more than one of a class.

Among those paroled was Dr. Reuben P. Thompson, of Monmouth county, who was serving an eighteen-year term for homicide. Dr. Thompson was implicated eight years ago in the killing of an infant, whose body was thrown into a lake, and at the time his case attracted much attention. The court considered and dismissed applications for parole made by three of the Paterson quartet convicted of murder in the second degree in causing the death of Jennie Bosschieter They were Andrew J. Campbell, William A. Death and Walter C. McAllister. An application of Geo. J. Kerr, the fourth member, was laid over for consideration at an adjourned meeting.

The plan of increasing the number of paroles was suggested by Governor Fort when the prison inspectors urged him the necessity of increasing the capacity of the institution because of the overcrowding, which has been made a subject of criticism in several State reports The prison inspectors prepared a list of all the prisoners to whom they thought paroles might properly be granted, and this was submitted for consideration to the Court of Pardons. In all 240 cases were taken up.

There are 1,402 convicts in the State prison, according to the report of the inspectors to Governor Fort. Essex, with a total of 223, has the largest number of any county, and Hudson comes next with 177. The number of prisoners from the other counties follows: Atlantic, 80; Bergen, 67; Burlington, 53; Camden, 138; Cape May, 10; Cumberland, 40; Gloucester, 16; Hunterdon, 21; Mercer, 78; Middlesex, 73; Monmouth, 65; Morris, 36; Ocean, 7; Passaic, 126; Salem, 32; Somerset, 19; Sussex, 19; Union, 52, and Warren, 24.

Proctor's Conveniences.

The women's parlor at Proctor's popular theatre is always open and at the service of the women. Writing desks, periodicals and toilet requisites are free. There is also a new program every day.

New Year's Day Reception.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Zelie will receive their friends at the parsonage, 813 Park avenue, on New Year's day afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock, according to the usual custom.

TALKS ON AMERICAN ART

Charles H. Caffin, of New York, Delivered a Lecture Before Monday Afternoon Club.

HIS DISCUSSION INSTRUCTIVE.

Describes Work of Early American Painters—Refers to Progress in Sculpture.

A very delightful lecture on "American Art" was given yesterday at the Hartridge School auditorium before the Monday Afternoon Club by Charles H. Caffin, of New York, a writer as well as a lecturer on art subjects. Mr. Caffin gave the Centennial at Philadelphia in 1876 as the dividing line between the old and modern ideas of art in this country. In a most interesting manner he described the works of early American painters from the date of 1722, among them being Copley, Peale, Gilbert, Stuart and Washington Allston, with slight mention of Benjamin West, who settled in Europe in 1760. Portraits of Washington are among the works of these famous men, whose art is characterized as "counterfeit presentment."

The Hudson River School was the name given the painters described by Mr. Caffin who studied nature and depicted it in their love of it. Contemperaneous with this movement in America was the development of the Barbizon School in Fontainbleu, France, which called forth the enthusiastic admiration of the speaker. The works of Doughty, Kensett, Durand, Thomas Cole, F. E. Church, Thomas Moran and Alfred Bierstadt received both praise and criticism from the lecturer, who claimed that Niagara Falls and the Rocky Mountains were too vast subjects to be put upon canvas.

The atmosphere, the relation and harmony of the parts and realism contrasted with impressionism were all touched upon by Mr. Caffin, who gave high praise to John Sargent, the latter day painter of fame.

In sculpture, Mr. Caffin referred to John Frazee, of Rahway, N. J; Hiram Powers, Harriet Hasmer and Crawford, much of whose work was influenced by the tone caught in Rome from the past. He said that Saint Gaudens at the time of the Centennial, infused a new spirit in harmony with the awakneing of the country in the sculpture of that day.

Mr. Caffin termed Paris the clearing house of artists and spoke in unqualified praise of the advantages artists from every country can gain from a sojourn in that art centre of the world.

"PLAINFIELD" RAMS PIER; 20 ARE SLIGHTLY HURT

About twenty passengers were slightly injured and several women fainted when the New Jersey Central Railroad ferryboat Plainfield crashed into its slip at full speed at the Communipay terminal yesterday morning at 7:25 o'clock. The slip and bridge were smashed, windows were ripped out of the boat, and other damage was done, while the fifty passengers were tossed about.

Those who were injured got bandages from railroad porters and proceeded on their journeys. The Plainfield was continued in service. The ship and bridge will not be used for several days.

The cause of the accident was the failure of the reversing engine to respond. The boat was going at a top speed and a heavy running tide made it go faster. When the pilot signalled to reverse the engine the engineer threw over the levers, but the engine would not work.

The women who fainted were carried into the station after the boat was made fast by persons who stood in the ferry shed waiting to go to New York.

HOLIDAY DANCE HELD AT THE DEBELE HALL.

A holiday dance was held by a group of North Plainfield young people in Debele's hall last night. About fifteen couple were present. By way of a divergence from the modern round dances, some of the old-fashioned pastimes were tried out, such as "Virginia Reel," "Miller Boy" and "Heel and Toe, and Away We Go." In those, the young folks were obliged to call on older heads for instructions and in Mrs. William G. Debele they had an excellent tutor, and one who knows all about the good old games.

Those who had charge of the arrangements were: Misses Maud and Myra Emmons, Leslie Powlison and Clarence Steiner.

STATE TEACHERS' CONFAB

Plainfield is Represented at the Association's Meeting at Atlantic City.

TEACHERS' FUND DISCUSSION.

Campaign to Increase the Retirement Fund—Membership is Discontinued at Today's Meeting.

The annual convention of the State Teachers' Association is being held at Atlantic City today and many matters of importance are being taken up for consideration. The committee of the association having in hand the recent campaign to increase the membership in the Teachers' Retirement Fund will be discontinued at the session today, in view of the fact that its work has been accomplished.

The committee had obtained remarkable results during the past few months, the membership being nearly doubled.

Dr. H. C. Krebs, superintendent of the North Plainfield schools, and Ira W. Travell, principal of the Plainfield High School, will attend the sessions tomorrow.

In view of the fact that school teachers who do not secure membership in the State Retirement Fund on or before January 1 will be barred from full participation in its benefits, an announcement has been made directing the attention of the instructors to the necessity for immediate action. Nearly all the local teachers have been enrolled and they are convinced that the movement is an excellent one. Among the younger teachers there are some in every city who hold to the opinion that the fund is not needed, but the developments of the past few years prove to the satisfaction of the promoters that the project is of vital importance to the teachers.

The business standing of the fund is no longer questioned; it has been made a feature of the public school system of the State and scores of teachers have had occasion to testify to its efficiency. It is an insurance for the instructors who are incapacitated for duty by age or injury, and the reasonable terms on which the members are taken in bring the benefits within the reach of all. The State collects dues from the teachers' salaries, acts as custodian of the funds and pays all annuities.

Several appeals have been made to the teachers throughout the State during the last few months in order that the enrollment may be increased as much as possible for the new year. It is argued that in addition to any other source of insurance every teacher should be in a position to draw on the fund and the results achieved in the past year prove that these contentions are not without grounds.

Under the law of 1907, in the retirement fund, an annual salary of $500 means about $10 a year dues, and a total payment into the fund of $300 at time of disability, which gives an annuity of $300 a year for remainder of life, and is an income on $6,000 which the State of New Jersey invests for the teacher. A salary of $900 means $18 in annual dues and a total of $540 into the fund at time of retiring. This yields an annuity of $540 a year for remainder of life, and is an income on a five per cent. mortgage of more than $10,000. The annuitant does not need to worry about commissions to agents for this, because the State cares for these funds. However, he or she may have other personal savings invested as opportunity offers.

NEWARK DETECTIVE HERE TO ARREST WIFE BEATER.

A Newark detective slipped into the borough this morning and arrested James Pangborn, wanted by the police of that city on a charge of wife beating and desertion. The prisoner is thirty-five years of age, and a harness maker by trade. He is said to have gone to his home in Newark Saturday night in an intoxicated condition, and to have attacked his wife with his fists, leaving her in an alarming condition. The three small children were badly frightened, their screams attracting the attention of the neighbors, who rushed to the woman's rescue. Pangborn immediately left the city and this morning Chief George Weiss, of the borough police, received an inquiry from the Newark police department as to whether he had come this way, where he has relatives.

Chief Weiss located the man and caused him to be kept under surveilance until the Newark officer arrived. When arrested Pangborn was in his father's home on Linden avenue, taken entirely unawares.

Patrolman John Payne, of New street, is still detained from duty by a severe attack of rheumatism.

OGDEN M. HETFIELD DIES AT DUNELLEN

Ogden Meeker Hetfield, one of the oldest and best known residents of Dunellen, died at his home on North avenue early this morning. He had been in failing health since last August practically because of his advanced age.

Mr. Hetfield was ninety years old and had lived in this vicinity the greater part of his life. He was at one time a resident of Plainfield and before the present North Avenue station of the Central was built, he conducted a restaurant business in the frame building that previously served as a depot. He sold it out to go West for a time and on returning opened a meat market on Park avenue under the firm name of Hetfield & Campbell. Later he moved to Dunellen and continued the same business in a three story brick building he erected on North avenue. He retired some years ago and was succeeded by his son.

Mr. Hetfield was a member of the Baptist church, of New Market, and was a man who enjoyed the respect of the entire community. He never held public office, either in Plainfield or Dunellen, though he was frequently urged to accept nomination. He is survived by one son, Winfield Hetfield, of Dunellen, and the following daughters: The Misses Mary and Annie L. Hetfield, the latter a teacher in the Newark schools but living at home; Mrs. Walter Mellick, of Alton, and Mrs. Theodore Miller, of near Orange Lake, N. Y.

The funeral will be held at his late home, Saturday afternoon, and will be private.

NEW POLICE BUILDING GETS ITS FIRST PRISONER

Through formal possession of the new police station will not be taken until Friday or Saturday, the cell room was duly initiated yesterday by the introduction of its first guest. The prisoner was Mary Jones, a colored woman weighing nearly 200 pounds, who was before Judge Runyon yesterday morning for drunkenness and was let go on suspended sentence. She must have started out immediately on another tear because Chief Kiely found her at the North Avenue station early yesterday afternoon, pretty well filled up with gin and acting in a disorderly manner.

Mrs. Jones had nothing to say this morning beyond the fact that she had gone to the station to get a train as she wanted to return to her old home in Virginia. She had been working in Plainfield, she said, but had gotten tired of Plainfield. The judge made it $5 or twenty days and she took the latter.

The cells in the old police station have been added to those in the new building and from now on all prisoners will be locked up in the latter place. The court sessions will continue in the old place until the councilmen accept the new headquarters.

CONSOLIDATION PROBERS ASK $500 APPROPRIATION

Believing that it has reached that point when nothing further can be done without an appropriation of $500, the Bi-municipal Consolidation Commission, of which Alexander Gilbert is chairman, presented a report at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council, last night, asking that the Plainfield members be discharged from further duty.

The communication briefly recited what had been accomplished this year, adding that inasmuch as $500 would be required to carry the matter on through the drafting of suitable bills to be presented to the Legislature, it had been decided to refer the proposition back to the respective municipalities for the purpose of allowing each one take it up as it may deem best. The communication was referred to the public affairs committee, and later, Mr. Mygatt, the chairman, moved that it be referred to the Common Council of 1909, which was done.

Entertained Her Class.

Miss Todd, a teacher in the primary department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, entertained her class yesterday afternoon at her home in Dunellen. There were nine members of the class prsent and they had a jolly time playing games, etc. Refreshments were served afterward.

"Julius Ceasar."

The feature film at the Bijou theatre today will be "Julius Caesar," and it is said to be an unusually good one.

SCOTTY IS 'DEAD BROKE'

Former Plainfielder, a Spendthrift, to Enlist in the United States Army.

MYSTERIOUS MINE PLAYS OUT.

Death Valley's "Hero" Wants to Lead the Quiet Life Having Set "Long Pace" Too Long.

Walter Scott, otherwise known as "Death Valley Scotty" and "Scotty the Spender," formerly of this city, entered the United States recruiting office yesterday at Chicago and declared his intention of enlisting in the marine service.

"I have set the pace long enough," said Scotty, "and the life does not agree with me. I am tired of it and want to lead a quieter life."

Just where "Scotty" got his money no man has been able to say with definiteness. That, during the years 1904-06 he had plenty of money, and that he spent it with fierce recklessness is as certain as there is a Death Valley, where his supposed gold mine was.

Long before Scotty made his spectacular dash across the continent in a special train, he had the gold. During the summer of 1904 he reported to the Philadelphia police that some low-down mean skunk had robbed him of $12,000 worth of nuggets between Pittsburg and Harrisburg. No person, not even the railroad detectives, believed him. And this regardless of the fact that he had a roll of several thousand dollars in his pockets.

He was so disgusted that he went back to Los Angeles. In July, 1905, he hired the train on the Southern Pacific and swept up the dust across the southwest in his hurry to get to New York, where there was a gallon of whiskey waiting him.

This trip was so well advertised that skeptics declared Scotty was in the employ of the railroad press agent. In New York the Death Valley man burned up several thousand dollars, but as for building any huge bonfire he simply didn't make good. Whereat many were disappointed and called him a four-flusher. So, nicely "soused," but still retaining some money, Scotty left New York, making bad sounds against the place.

In the summer of '06 Scotty arrived in Philadelphia with another but somewhat smaller roll, and tried to break speed records in handling glassware. He registered at the Bellevue-Stratford, but did not linger long, the hotel people objecting to his friends and his habits. He had, some time prior to this, acquired a wife, who traveled with him for a brief season in the hope of restraining him—an impossible job.

For a while he loafed among the camps in Nevada and each year saw him just a little poorer. His gold mine had obviously run out.

This mine, according to Scotty, was somewhere in Death Valley. He was the only man who knew its location. He declared it was amazingly rich and would last a man his lifetime. It's true that in the early days he did carry around a lot of loose gold. It is also a fact that he got $5,000 from a New York bank to back him in developing the mine. But the bankers who put up that money never could catch up with Scotty when it came to finding the mine for them.

It is true also that Scotty made frequent trips from Los Angeles into the desert but, although he was trailed, no person followed him to a mine.

Scotty, in his early days, was a broncho buster with the Buffalo Bill show and this public career gave him a keen insight into the fine art of advertising. He made the most of whatever money he had when it came to getting into public notice.

Plainfield Council Elects.

Plainfield Council, No. 293, Jr. O. U. A. M., elected these officers at a regular meeting held last night. Councilor, William R. Sweeney; vice-councilor, Arthur J. Spicer; warden, Harvey VanPelt; conductor, William Steininger; outside sentinel, Harry F. Hartley; inside sentinel, James Fleming; junior past councilor, Alfred H. Peck. Fred Sebring as recording secretary; Joel Pennington as financial secretary and Julius Williams as treasurer hold over. The installation of the officers-elect will take place Monday night.

Don't Forget Day Nursery.

Those attending the Christmas entertainment at the First Baptist church, tonight, are requested to bring a donation of dry groceries for the Day Nursery, such as rice, prunes, flour, cereals, crackers, etc. All such donations will be gratefully received and appreciated.

CONVICT FOILS ANOTHER WHO PLANNED ESCAPE.

Drops a Note Telling Keeper Where Prisoner Has Tools Hidden.

A little piece of white paper dropped from the hands of a convict at the feet of a keeper as the line was marching into dinner Saturday night foiled the escape from the State prison at Trenton of James Roberts, of Essex county, who has just started in on a nine years' sentence for burglary.

The man had a knife and a piece of rope hidden just beneath his workbench and it was his plan to get those implements while the guards were counting the convicts and, slipping out in the yard, to scale the wall before the alarm could be given. Roberts had told his friends that if he had a chance he would be back in Essex county again long before the sentence had expired. He broke down and confessed when shown his tools, and now goes around with a ball and chain to prevent his escape.

Give $1,000 to Hospital.

The officials of the Babcock & Wilcox Boiler Company, of Bayonne, have sent a check for $1,000 to the Bayonne Hospital as their contribution to the fund to pay for a hospital now being erected. This makes $20,800 contributed. The building will cost about $30,000.

The wife of Joseph Mowers, who was burfed at Woodstown Saturday, was the heaviest woman in that section, weighing more than 300 pounds. She was sixty-nine years old.

All of the Millville glass factories, the cotton mills and bleach and dye works, which closed for two days' vacation last week, were started again full blast yesterday morning, with good indications for a steady run.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Rev. Dr. George H. Hemmingway, of Bloomsburg, has accepted the call to the First Presbyterian church, Camden, and expects to occupy the pulpit January 17.

The drug store of D. A. Marino, at 301 Newark avenue, Jersey City, was broken into early Sunday morning and a cash register containing $9 stolen. The empty register, wrapped in a blanket, was found a few blocks away.

Joseph Dobos, of North Clayton, had twenty chickens fattened to kill, but thinking the price might be better, decided to keep them until New Year's. Yesterday morning, when he went to feed them, he found twenty heads, a thief having walked off with the entire lot.

Henry Rendt, of 525 Henderson street, Jersey City, was held up by five men and robbed of a gold watch and $24 early Sunday morning under the Pennsylvania Railroad bridge that spans Henderson street, between Fifth and Sixth streets. The men made their escape. Rendt was on his way home.

Louis Conk, who was released from the New Jersey State prison last April, after having served three years of a seven years' sentence, on a charge of atrocious assault and battery, was returned to the institution on Saturday. Conk violated his parole by getting into trouble in his home county of Monmouth.

The corner-stone of the new People's Baptist church in Bayonne was laid Saturday afternoon by Hudson County Prosecutor Pierre Garven. Rev. M. T. Shelford, the pastor; Rev. D. E. Wolfe and Rev. John Troy were the speakers. The congregation has sold its old edifice for a moving picture theatre.

Mrs. May Peffell, of 26 Twenty-second avenue, Paterson, while making a desperate effort to reach her baby, who was falling from a high chair in the kitchen of the Peffell home Saturday evening, leaped toward the child and struck her kneecap on the edge of a chair. Mrs. Peffell fell to the floor. Her family physician found that the right kneecap was broken, and had the woman taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

The Paterson police were notified on Saturday that some one stole a heavy glass case from in front of the store of Rumler brothers, at 3 and 5 Park avenue, that city. The case contained a collection of 109 penknives, each valued at fifty cents. Sunday morning the glass box was found in the side hallway of Walter Scott's saloon, a few doors up the street. It had been broken open and the contents removed.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will not meet on Friday night.

Following the preaching service the regular communion will be held at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning.

The regular communion service will be held at the First M. E. church Sunday morning, with reception of members.

The famous Till family Rock Band players will furnish the Christmas entertainment at the First M. E. church tonight.

The week of prayer will be observed at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church in the week following Sunday, January 3.

The chorus choir of the First Baptist church will repeat its Christmas music Sunday evening, assisted by Miss Florence Wohlfert, violinist.

Preparatory services will be held at the Seventh-Day Baptist church Friday night and the Lord's Supper will be observed Sabbath morning.

"Retrospect and Prospect," will be the subject of the prayer-meeting at the First Baptist church tomorrow night. The pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, will be in charge.

"Santa's Mixup" will be the title of the Christmas cantata to be given at the Park Avenue Baptist church, tonight. There will be sixty members of the school in the entertainment.

By the dismissal last week of 106 members from the First Baptist church to form an independent church at Faith chapel the church roll on December 27 comprises 792 names.

The Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church announces the postponement of the lecture by Egerton R. Young until Saturday night, January 9. It was to have been given January 2.

The Christmas entertainment at the First Baptist church tonight will be furnished by the Hawaiian Band. The affair will be held in the main auditorium and the friends of the Sunday-school are invited. The primary department will have its entertainment this afternoon, while the Juniors will have a party tomorrow afternoon.

John Harsell, of West Fifth street, is slowly recovering from typhoid fever at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he has been under treatment for several weeks.

Mrs. James E. Martine, of Kensington avenue, and Miss Katherine Duncan, of Newark, left today for Atlantic City, where they will register at the Marlborough-Blenheim.

Plainfield, N. J., December 29, 1908.

King Edward has sent Andrew Carnegie his photograph in recognition of the ironmaster's philanthropic works in his native land. The incident furnishes an instance of a contrast between the two men; the one born great and the other achieving greatness; the one a ruler by birth the other by intellect.

It wouldn't be amiss for North Plainfield to go on record as to how much it would pay into the city treasury should an union be effected before there is any further discussion of consolidation. A merger of the two municipalities without any indemnity to Plainfield, would be most expensive to the city, whose taxpayers would have to bear the brunt in providing the suggested new territory with the improvements it lacks.

BACHELORS' BALL AT CASINO NEW YEAR'S EVE.

Those who are planning to attend the "Bachelors' Ball" at the Hartridge School auditorium, New Year's Eve, are reminded that their subscription should be sent in early as the accommodations will be limited. The committee in charge has completed details for the affair which will be one of the most elaborate yet given by the bachelors. Fine music will be provided by Brooks & Denton's orchestra, and an elaborate supper will be served. All subscriptions should be sent to C. Ames Brooks. The profits from the affair will be divided among the charities of Plainfield.

The same rule will obtain in regard to the performance of "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," to be given at the New Plainfield theatre on "Charity Day and Night," and at Proctor's, the Bijou and Park theatres, where exceptionally fine programs will be given for the occasion. Don't forget that by patronizing these amusement places you will not only have a good time, but contribute to Plainfield charities.

EDUCATIONAL BILLS, $13,000 APPROVED BY BOROUGH BOARD

Bills amounting to $13,000 were approved by the North Plainfield Board of Education at its regular meeting last night. This included the teachers' salary warrants for December and $8,000 in notes.

The resignation of Miss Mary Dalley, a teacher in the Somerset school, was accepted. She had withdrawn from the work on account of illness. The teachers committee was authorized to appoint a successor. There were present at the meeting all of the members of the board except Messrs. Miller and Cooley.

Miss E. M. Applegate a Bride.

CHRISTMAS' FESTIVITIES

Sunday School Celebrations of Many Congregations' Pupils Held Last Night.

XMAS TREES THE FEATURE.

Carols, Recitations, Distribution of Gifts and Addresses Mark the Most Happy. Exercises.

Christmas festivals were held in these churches last night:

At Holy Cross.

Simplicity marked the Christmas exercises of the Sunday-school of the Holy Cross church in the church last evening. With the exception of the singing of five Christmas carols by the school and the presentation of gifts to members of the school nothing special marked the occasion.

The church was attractively decorated with roped cedar, draped from the ceiling, with five small trees along each side of the church, together with wreaths in the windows and with a large Christmas tree in front of the chancel, which was gayly lighted with a myriad of small colored electric globes and with the usual Christmas tree trappings. At the base of the tree neatly wrapped up packages of all sizes were piled up. These at once became the object of the attentions of the little ones who were seated in the pews according to classes. These were the presents. To the right were the boxes of candy, enough to give every member of the school a box, and some two boxes, according to the degree of behavior throughout the year.

After all had been comfortably seated, despite the fact that parents and friends who came to witness the exercises numbered almost 300, the program opened with the singing of "Christmas." This carol was followed by "There Dwelt in Old Judea," "In a Manger Bed," and "We Three Kings of the Orient Are," after which the Rev. George A. Warner, who was in charge of the exercises, told a simple Christmas story to the infant class.

The choir boys then distributed the gifts to the anxious youngsters with the help of the teachers. A small box of Huylers accompanied each gift. When this was over the tree was stripped of all its candy canes and these too were distributed among the smaller boys.

The singing of "Christmas Bells" by the school concluded the exercises and the children departed for home with their interest in Sunday-school work considerably stimulated. The exercises were in charge of the Rev. George A. Warner, who was assisted by the teachers of the school.

St. Stephen's.

The Christmas festival of the Sunday-school of St. Stephen's church was held at the church, last night, following the service at 7:30 o'clock, which was in charge of the rector, Rev. Morgan Ashley. During the children's service, which comprised the singing of the carols, Mr. Ashley made a twenty minute address in which he brought good cheer to all. Miss Terressa Kahrman, organist of the Sunday-school, was in charge of the musical program.

There was the usual distribution of gifts to the children by the rector, who was assisted by Louis Willis and Hanford Miller. They included books, toys, candy and oranges, while the teachers made special gifts to their classes and they in return received presents from the children. The rector was also generously remembered by all the guilds of the church and the choir.

A feature of the affair was a Christmas tree, illuminated with tiny incandescent lights through the kindness of Robert H. MacCready. It was announced that a midnight service would be held at the church Thursday night and at that hour there will be communion. This will be the first time in the history of the parish that a service of this kind has been held there and a large congregation is expected.

Heavenly Rest.

The Christmas festival was held at the Church of the Heavenly Rest, last night, beginning with a service at the church at 7:30 o'clock, and followed by a play, "Mother Goose and Her Children," presented in the parish house by members of the Sunday-school. The entertainment was in charge of Miss Elizabeth Forster, Mrs. E. E. Brown, assisted by the teachers of the school. Rev. Charles Townsend, rector, was in charge of the early service.

At the festival in the parish house there were two Christmas trees, while the stage was arranged to represent a large fire-place. Miss Marion Harris took the part of "Mother Goose," and the others included Alice Brentnall, Ethel Brentnall, Alice Connors, Ida Brooks, Adelaide Hull, Florence Harris, Jessie Stillwell and Jack Hull, Neilson Sutton, Lawrence Sutton, Juan Babcock, Jr., William Peterson, Grecian Peterson and Richard Borden.

After the entertainment there was a distribution of gifts to all the members of the school. The rector and W. W. Moore, superintendent of the school, each received a present of a set of candle sticks. The rector announced at the close that the children would hold a service at the church Epiphany night, January 6, at 7:30.

Friends' School.

The Christmas exercises of the First-day school were held at the Friends Meeting house, last night, and were of unusual interest, the children taking part in a program of recitations and readings under the direction of Superintendent W. W. Williams. Those who presented the program and acquitted themselves with credit being Arthur Compton, Mildred Poole, Helen Thompson, Amy Lorton, Carlton Vail and Albert Hutchinson.

The infant class also gave a recitation in concert and several older children gave a recitation entitled "The Norway Children," at the same time giving an exhibition of one of the ancient customs of that country, followed by a display of a large Christmas stocking in red, white and blue colors. "Christmas Light," illustrated by a star, a candle and the Bible, was a recitation by members of the primary department.

After the entertainment ice cream and cake were served to the members of the school and the large number of friends and then the children received presents of books, toys and dolls, followed by a social hour.

Mt. Olive Baptist.

Christmas exercises were held at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, last night, under the auspices of the Sunday-school. The church was decorated with evergreens, palms, and flowers and the usual Christmas tree laden with gifts for the children. Horatio Randolph was in charge of the music. During the evening T. J. Banks, superintendent, delivered an address and the children gave recitations and sang carols.

Bible Class Party.

The members of class No. 2, of Trinity Reformed Sunday-school, last night gave their teacher, Philip Vroom, a pleasant surprise at his home on Stone street. Games were played and refreshments were served. They presented Mr. Vroom with a handsome silver mounted umbrella, and he responded with a few well chosen words of appreciation. Mr. Vroom is teacher of one of the women's Bible classes.

Engagement Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Toense, of Merchantville, formerly of this city, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Hilda Clare Toense, to George Melville Sauerwein, of Newport News, Va. Mr. Sauerwein was until recently connected with the local office of the Public Service Corporation but is now employed by the Newport News Shipbuilding company. No date has been set for the wedding.

In speaking of the recent action of the Common Council in placing electric lights on Dixie lane and Ravine road and Denmark and Ravine roads, Mr. Montgomery, chairman of the light committee, stated that it had been found that two additional lighs were needed in that neighborhood. Upon his recommendation they were granted.

Mr. Buxton moved that when Council adjourned it be to meet tomorrow night. This motion was carried, and then, it being suggested that the members visit and inspect the new police headquarters before that meeting, a motion that they meet at headquarters tomorrow at 7 o'clock for that purpose, was also carried. It is epected that at the Council meeting to be held afterward the new structure will be accepted.

Dalrymple Succeeds Marshall.

Alferd N. Dalrymple, of Newark, who in public life is chairman of the Essex County Republican Committee, was last night elected Potentate of Salaam Temple Ancient Arabic Order of Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. The annual meeting of the temple was held in Krueger Auditorium, Newark, with a big attendance. Mr. Dalrymple succeeds Harry C. Marshall, of this city, as potentate is a charter member of Salaam and for six years has held office.

Not Thomas Harvey.

Thomas Harvey, of West Fourth street, and another of the same name residing in East Front street, each registered a protest to a story given out by the North Plainfield police yesterday that he had been arrested for intoxication. The "Thomas Harvey," in question, was a fictitious name and this correction is made in justice to innocent parties.

Peter F. Daly Will Speak.

Peter Francis Daly, of Hudson county, has accepted the invitation to speak at the banquet of the Plainfield Merchants' Association on Thursday night, January 19. He will select his own subject. Mr. Daly was persuaded to accept the invitation by James E. Martine, a close friend.

Rector's Reception.

The Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, will be at home to his friends and the members of his congregation at 809 College place, on New Year's day from 3 to 7 o'clock.

Andrew Bozak has returned from a visit with friends at Haverstraw, N. Y.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The poultry exhibit from the Sunswick poultry farm arrived in New York yesterday. They are under the care of Manager George May. Mr. May is one of the best poultry raisers in New Jersey. He came from England several years ago and has managed successfully two of the best poultry farms in the Eastern States. The birds from the Sunswick farm have won a large number of blue ribbons at the Madison Square Garden and the Boston poultry shows. This is thought to be the best lot of birds ever exhibited by the Sunswick poultry farm.

The Middlesex County Board of Taxation will meet today at Thornton's Hotel in New Market for the purpose of hearing the appeals from this district. There are quite a number of cases to be acted upon in this place.

YOUNG MEN ORGANIZE A NEW SOCIAL CLUB

With a charter membership of a few less than fifty, the John F. Madden Association was organized by local young men, last night. It will be conducted on the lines of a social club with headquarters in the Schepflin building in West Front street. The rooms will be fitted up with all club conveniences.

At the organization last night, the following officers were elected: President, John F. Madden; vice-president, Frank Shepherd; recording secretary, John Caulfield; financial secretary, John King; treasurer, Thomas McInerney; sergeant-at-arms, John Casey. Other officers will be appointed later.

The president and sponser of the club is a popular young man and it bids fair to become a strong organization during his reigme. The next meeting will be held New Year's eve when plans will be discussed for a smoker and entertainment.

Preparing for Organization.

The members of Faith chapel will hold an important business meeting tomorrow night when final arrangements will be made for organizing that body as an independent Baptist church. Deacons and trustees will be elected and in accordance with the usual custom, the new church will extend a call to Rev. John W. Musson, to the pastorate, which he will accept and every detail will be completed so that the new order of things will become effective January 1. The congregation has decided to change the name proposed that of "Immanuel," to probably the Temple Baptist church. This matter will be determined tomorrow night.

A New Year's Dance.

The Plainfield Athletic Association Football Club will give a dance in Debele hall Friday night.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Theatre-goers will have a chance to see and hear the celebrated humorist-traveler, Fred Niblo, in his pictorial "Talks of Travel in Distant Lands," before this talented entertainer will present his latest offering in New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia. Arrangements have been consummated whereby Manager Counihan of the New Plainfield theatre has secured Mr. Niblo for five consecutive Wednesday nights, starting tomorrow night with the first zig-zag journey, the title of which is "Africa, from the Cape to Cairo." The other four travel-talks will be given as follows: "Egypt, from Cairo to Khartoum;" "Italy, from Vesuvius to the Alps;" "London, from the Black Sea to Siberia." At the conclusion of this tour, Mr. Niblo goes direct to New York city for ten weeks of "Travel Talks" at a leading Broadway theatre.

You may not believe it, but Frances Gordon is billed as "Plain Mary" in "Firty-five Minutes from Broadway," which will be presented at the New Plainfield theatre next Thursday night. Also she sings "Mary Is a Grand Old Name," and "So Long, Mary," thus indicating that Mary is "It" in the Cohan & Harris offering. Nevertheless, Scott Welch is in the cast as "Kid Burns," a retired prize fighter, and he hits New York a telling blow in the risible ribs during the play's long engagement in the metropolitan city. The original company and production will be seen here. The cast includes Scott Welch, Frances Gordon, Julia Ralph, Elizabeth Drew, Susan Chisnell, Ninon De Varenne, James H. Manning, James A. Davett, Eugene MacGregor, Harry Gwynette, Archie MacKenzie and Harry Wilcox.

May Robson, who will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre Saturday afternoon and night, in "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," by Anne Warner, is one of the few who in this day dares to be a character actress. To her character impersonations she brings a comprehension of the inner humor and the pictorial possibilities of phase or line, a telling oseerve in pose and gesture, and an ease and fluency of quiet, unctious delivery that are in the better spirit of a polished, experienced and original comedy. L. S., Sire, under whose management Miss Robson is starring, has surrounded her with a strong supporting company, and the stage setting and scenic effects are most elaborate. Several novel features are promised, and the entire production and cast is one of the best ever presented on the stage. According to the play, Aunt Mary has become apparently commolescent, owing to prolonged residence in the country. She comes to the city and various influence combine to make her sprightlier and younger. She rejuvenates a few degrees in each act, so that in the last she has become as renovated, joyous and as apt to everything as the iridescent May Robson herself.

Robert Edeson, who is to be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Monday night in George Broadhurst's play, "The Call of the North," can truly be termed an American actor. Since becoming a star seven years ago, Mr. Edeson has not apepared in any but American plays written by American authors: "Soldiers of Fortune," "Ranson's Folly," "Strongheart," "Classmates'," and now, while the action of "The Call of the North" takes place in Canada, Mr. Edeson is again seen as a young American. Mr. Edeson is a Southerner by birth, having been born in New Orleans, La.

BOY SHOOTS ANOTHER IN HIS GLASS EYE.

While on his way home yesterday, fifteen-year-old William Walsh, whose father is caretaker of the City Park in Bayonne, saw Wallace McKenna, aged 16, of 64 West Thirteenth street, that city, pointing an air rifle at him. Six months ago Walsh was shot in the eye by an air riffle fired by Isaac Greenstein and lost his sight. He was provided with a glass eye.

"Please don't shoot at me. I lost my eye that way," cried Walsh to McKenna.

"I'll shoot out your other eye," was McKenna's reply as he fired.

The bullet struck Walsh's glass eye and shattered it. He fell unconscious to the sidewalk and McKenna and his companions ran away. At the City Hospital the physicians said they believed Walsh would come around all right. The fragments of glass were removed.

McKenna was arrested on a charge of assault. An effort will now be made to have the Bayonne Council pass an ordinance prohibiting the use of air rifles.

To Go to South Africa.

Citizens of Montclair are preparing to honor John S. Tichenor, who leaves there early in February for South Africa, at a public dinner which will be given on January 28. Mr. Tichenor, who was formerly general secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association at Montclair, has been appointed an international secretary and has been assigned to the South African field. Mr. Tichenor's home is in Montclair.

Mr. and Mrs. Leivers, who have been residing on Grove street, will move to Belmont avenue, January 15, following a visit with friends in Washington.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright, 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"I imply nothing, colonel; I don't dare to with such strenuous fighters as you gentlemen; only go and see, and if you do find the young gentleman has had no ill treatment, no scare—only a little adventure such as boys like, I hope you will come out here, or wherever I may be, and have that cigar you are refusing."

The colonel was frankly puzzled. He couldn't quite focus his wits on this bravado which had nothing of the bravo about it, in fact, had a tinge of wistfulness in its quiet. One would have said the man regretted his compulsory attitude of antagonism; that he wanted peace.

Mercer smiled faintly. "You ought to know by this time when a man is lying, colonel," he continued, "but I will go further. I may have done plenty of wrong things in my life, some things, maybe, which the law might call a crime; but I have never done anything which would debar me from passing my word of honor as a gentleman; nor any one else from taking it. I give you my word of honor that I have meant and I do mean no slightest harm to Archie Winter; and that, while I do not know where he is at this speaking, I believe you will find him safe under your aunt's protection when you get back to the Palace."

"Call up the Palace hotel, Mr. Birdsall," was the colonel's reply. "Mr. Mercer, I do not distrust that you are speaking exactly, but you know your Shakespeare; and there are promises which keep their word to the ear but break it to the sense."

"I don't wonder at your mistake; but you are mistaken, suh."

Birdsall was phlegmatically ringing up Mrs. Winter, having the usual experience of the rash person who intrudes his paltry needs on the complex workings of a great hotel system.

"No, I don't know the number, I haven't the book here, but you know, Palace hotel. Well, give me information, then—Busy? Well, give me another Information, then—yes, I want the Palace hotel—P-a-l-a-c-e—yes, yes, Palace hotel; yes, certainly. Yes? Mrs. Archibald Winter. Yes—line busy? Well, hold on until it is disengaged. Say, Miss Furber, that you? This is Birdsall & Gwen. Yes. Give me Mrs. Winter, will you, 337? This Mrs. Winter? Oh! When will she be back? Is Mrs. Melville Winter in? Well, Miss Smith in? She's gone, too? Has Master Archibald got back, yet, to the hotel? Hasn't? Thank you—eh?" in answer to the colonel's interruption. "What say, colonel?"

"Tell her to call up this number,"—the colonel read it out of the telephone book—"when Master Archie does get back, will you? I am afraid, Mr. Mercer, that you will have to allow us to trespass on your hospitality for a little longer."

He suspected that Mercer was annoyed, although he answered lightly enough: "As you please, Col. Winter. I am sure you will hear very soon. Now, there is another matter, your machine; I understand you left it outside. Will you ring for Kito, colonel? Under the circumstances you may prefer to do your own ringing. I will ask him to attend to the car."

The colonel made proper acknowledgments. He was thinking that had Mercer cared to confiscate the motor he would have done it without ringing; on the other hand, did he desire some special intercourse with his retainer, wherein, under their very noses, he could issue his orders—well, possibly they might get a whiff of the secret themselves were he allowed to try. At present the game baffled him. Therefore he nodded to Birdsall's puckered face behind Mercer's shoulder. And he rang the bell.

The Jap answered it with suspicious alacrity.

"Kito," said Mercer, "will you attend to Gen. Winter's car? Bring it up to the court."

Absolutely harmless, to all appearances, but Birdsall, from his safe position behind master and man, looked shrewd suspicion at the soldier.

"Shall your man in the ball go with him?" asked Mercer.

The colonel shook his head. "No," he said, quietly, "we have other men outside if he needs help. Call Skid, please." But when Birdsall attempted to get central there was no response.

The colonel merely shrugged his shoulders, although Birdsall frowned with vexation. "What a pity!" said Winter, softly. "Now, the fellows will come when the time is up; we can't call them off."

Mercer smiled faintly. "There are two more telephones in the house," he observed. "You can call off your dogs easily any time you wish. Also you can hear from the Palace. Will you come upstairs with me? I assure you I have not the least intention to harm you or the honest sergeant."

"You take the first trick, Mercer," said the colonel. "I supposed the bell was your signal to have the wires cut. But about going; no, I think we will stay here. There is a door out on the court which, if you will open—thank you. A charming prospect! Excuse me if I send Haley out there; and may I go myself?"

Anticipating the answer, he stepped under the low mission lintel into a fairy-like Californian court or patio of pepper trees and palms and a moss-grown fountain. There was the usual colonnade with a stone seat running round the wall. Mercer, smiling, motioned to one of them. "I wish I could convince you, colonel, that you are in no need of that plaything in your hand, and that you are going to dine with your boy—isn't he a fine fellow?"

The colonel did not note either his admission that he had seen Archie, nor a curious warming of his tone; he had stiffened and grown rigid like a man who receives a blow which he will not admit. He stole a glance at the detective and met an atrocious smirk of complacency. They both had caught a glimpse of a figure flitting into a door of the court. They both had seen a woman's profile and a hand holding a little steel tool which had ends like an alligator's nose. And both men had recognized Miss Smith.

RECEPTION IN HONOR OF MISS RUTH VAN VLIET

One of the most charming receptions of the season was given yesterday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, of Mercer avenue, when their granddaughter, Miss Ruth Gray Van Vliet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Deuse M. Van Vliet, of Washington avenue, was introduced to a large circle of friends. The guests were received by Mrs. John Gray Foster, Mrs. Deuse M. Van Vliet, Miss Ruth Gray Van Vliet, the debutante, and the Misses Gladys Perry, of Boston; Marion Brown, Louise Booth, Frederika Mead, Gladys Peck, Katharine Titus, Mabel Hooley and Louise Saunders from this city assisted by Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, Mrs. Eugene Gray, Foster, Mrs. Howard Foster, Mrs. Paul Kimball and Miss Jennie Foster, of New York, Mrs. S. J. Hegeman, of New Germantown, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. Frederick Mead, Mrs. Percy Stewart, Mrs. James De Graff, Mrs. James R. Joy, Mrs. Augustus V. Healy and Miss Jessie Munger, all of this city.

The house was beautifully decorated with a profusion of cut flowers and the walls of the reception room were hung with southern smilax and holly. The color scheme in the dining room was pink, the table decorations consisting entirely or rosebuds. The debutante received many beautiful remembrances. At the close of the reception, supper was served to a party of thirty intimate friends.

ELIZABETH TO LAKE HOPATCONG BY TROLLEY

Favorable reports are being circulated concerning the progress of trolley extensions by the Morris County Traction Company. Eventually the road will extend from Elizabeth to Lake Hopatcong. Work has been at a standstill for some time till recently. At present more than one hundred men are completing the section near Denville, and there is also a large force of laborers at work on the roadbed between Millburn and Maplewood, where the road joins with the trolley line of the Public Service Corporation. As soon as this work is completed a force of men will be put at work at the Elizabeth end of the road to complete the connection between Springfield and Elizabeth.

This Springfield-Elizabeth connection has been hanging fire for some time. The road more than a year ago acquired all but one piece of the land necessary for the connecting lines. Construction was delayed on account of the financial stringency and the work was temporarily abandoned. The renewed activity is largely due to Manager Manifold and President Gring, formerly of Harrisburg, Pa., who went into power at a recent reorganization of the company. They intend to push the work so Elizabethans can go direct to Lake Hopatcong by trolley.

PERSONAL.

Rudolph Toense, formerly of this city, but now of Merchantville, is spending a few days with friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Warnock, of Craig place, have been entertaining the latter's mother, Mrs. Furman, of Dover.

Mrs. Joseph D. Moon, of Grandview avenue, is entertaining her cousin, Mrs. Minnie Hance, of Liberty Corner, for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Moore, of Passaic, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. Frank French, of Washington avenue, the borough.

Alvah Ten Eyck, of Union street, who was recently taken ill with pneumonia while on one of his runs as a Pullman car conductor, is now convalescing and hopes to be out soon.

A Correction.

In reporting the story of the squabble on West Front street, Saturday, The Daily Press stated yesterday that it was Mr. and Mrs. Cormack Muldowney who were arrested. It should have been Mr. and Mrs. Dominick Muldowney, the other name being given in mistake.

Sale of Real Estate.

The public sale of the property of the late Patrick Kane will take place on the premises, 417 Cottage place, December 30, at 2:30 in the afternoon. The property must be sold and will go to the highest bidder.

S. S. S. Club Meets.

The members of the S. S. S. Club met last evening with Miss Kennena Hansen, of East Second street. An informal program of music was enjoyed, after which refreshments were served.

—Neuman Brothers' store is headquarters for fancy fruits. They have Florida oranges, tangerines, table apples, white grapes and many others.

TWO PASTORS OFFICIATE AT MR. LARUE'S FUNERAL.

The funeral of Israel LaRue, the well known Wset End resident, who died after a brief illness, was held at his late home on Liberty street, yesterday afternoon. It was conducted by Rev. M. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel, assisted by Rev. C. S. Kemble, of the Monroe Avenue church. The service was very simple. The floral offering included a set piece from the Men's Club of Hope chapel. The gathering in attendance included many of Mr. LaRue's old friends from Amwell township, Hunterdon county.

Burial was made in Hillside cemetery, the following acting as pall bearers: Nathan Pennington, A. B. Ayers and Isaac Randolph, of this city, and D. S. Dedrick, of Elizabeth.

Rev. J. M. Van der Meulen Favored.

The Second Reformed church, of New Brunswick, will on January 6 extend a call to Rev. John M. Van der Meulen, of Holland, Michigan, to become its pastor. He occupied the pulpit on December 20, after which the supply committee of that church sent a card to each member of the congregation on which the recipient was requested to state where he was for or against issuing a call to Mr. Van der Meulen. Not all of the cards have been returned, but those that are in indicate an overwhelming sentiment in favor of him. The consistory will meet on January 6 to take decisive action. If called he will succeed Rev. Manmius H. Hutton, who resigned a year ago.

Bishop McFaul's Reception.

Bishop James A. McFaul, of the Trenton Roman Catholic Diocese, will hold his annual New Year's reception on Friday at the episcopal residence in Trenton, from 4 to 6 in the afternoon and from 7 to 9 in the evening. He will be assisted in receiving by Monsignor Fox, Chancellor Powers and Dr. Griffin.

Tonight.

Try-out night at the New Plainfield theatre. Best moving pictures. Don't miss the treat.

MANY XMAS FESTIVALS

More Sunday Schools in City and Borough Hold Their Customary Celebrations.

RECITATIONS AND ADDRESSES.

Christmas Trees Add to the Other Joys—Candy Distributed Among the Pupils.

Festivals were held by the Sunday schools of these churches last night:

First Baptist Primary.

The primary department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school held its Christmas exercises yesterday afternoon, under the direction of Mrs. J. W. Powlison, superintendent. The children thoroughly enjoyed the program, which consisted of a song by the department, Scripture reading by Mrs. Dudley S. Miller, a prayer by the department, the singing of a carol, recitation, "O Gift," Rachel Smith; piano solo, Everett Case; piano duet, Everett and Bessie Case; recitation, Helena Francisco.

There was the usual Christmas tree from which was distributed dolls for the girls, shinny sticks for the boys, toy sleds and balls for the smaller children. The cradle roll was also well remembered.

The entertainment for the older members of the school as well as the church and friends was held in the evening and was furnished by a quartet of Hawaiians, three of whom were in native costume. The program was in charge of William K Makakoa. The first part of the entertainment consisted of beautiful pictures of Hawaiia, which were described by Mr. Makakoa, and the last half was devoted to a vocal and instrumental program of music furnished by the quartet. The selections were mostly of the native variety, while an occasional song in English was given to the delight of all. The quartet played mandolins, guitar and zither, making very sweet music, while the male voices blended nicely.

Crescent Avenue Church.

The Christmas entertainment for the primary department of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Sunday-school was held Monday afternoon, the feature being the playing of games, etc., after which refreshments were served. A feature was the presentation of a Tiffany electric lamp to the superintendent, W. D. Murray, by the children. The presentation was made by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie and was a great surprise to Mr. Murray.

The evening's entertainment consisted of moving pictures. They reption; Paul Revere's ride, the Maration; Paul Rever's ride, the Marathon race, French automobile races, besides a variety of other pictures. At the conclusion of the program, refreshments were served.

First M. E. Church.

The beginners' primary and cradle roll departments of the First M. E. church Sunday-school enjoyed their Christmas party yesterday afternoon in Vincent chapel. The beginners' department, under the direction of Mrs. Arthur E. Crone, superintendent, repeated its program of Sunday afternoon, while the children in the primary and cradle roll departments played all sorts of games. Afterward the children were entertained by H. W. Rankin with a sleight-of-hand performance. His clever work mystified the little ones completely.

Another feature was the arrival of Santa Claus in the person of E. A. Edgar, who distributed gifts to all the children, including dolls, toys, etc. There were a large number of mothers present in the afternoon. Mrs. Thomas MacDonald as superintendent of the primary and cradle roll departmentments was in charge of that program.

In the evening the Till Family Rock Band entertained the adult members of the school with a fine program of music, including vocal selections as well as those on the famous rocks. Among the special gifts of the evening was a purse to Miss Gertrude Sharp, pianist of the school, and another purse to Isaac W. Kennedy, the sexton. There were also gifts for the members of the intermediate departments, while every member of the school received candy. James R. Joy, superintendent, was in charge of the program.

Monroe Avenue M. E.

The Monroe Avenue Sunday-school pupils presented their Christmas cantata last night, entitled "Mother Goose's Visit to Santa Claus." The church was filled to overflowing. The decorations were arranged by Mr. McCormick and were elaborate, as were the settings for the productions. The first act was presented with a summer scene and consisted of these numbers: Solo, Madeline Penning-

COUNTY TAX BOARD CANNOT GIVE RELIEF

The Somerset County Board of Equalization of Taxes, in a communication replying to the appeal made recently by the North Plainfield Council and taxpayers of the borough for more satisfactory method of adjustment, whereby the gross assessment of taxes would be reduced, maintains that the present assessment for 1908 is perfectly just and fair and that it is not in the board's power to change the system.

The letter reads:

"In the matter of the protest against the method of taxation as administered in the borough of North Plainfield during the year 1908, and the apepal to the Board of Equalization of Taxes of the county of Somerset, to investigate the same, with a view to reduce the gross assessment of taxes as against said borough, the Board, upon investigation, and due consideration, do not feel that it is vested with power whereby it could in the exercise of its duties make any change in that regard; first, because in their opinion it would be contrary to law; and, secondly, because of the belief of the Board that the total assessment is perfectly just and fair as at present adjusted for the year 1908.

"By order of the Board.

"Thomas G. Winsor,
"Secretary."

SUPPOSED WIRE THIEF CAUGHT AT NEWARK

Suspected of being a member of a gang of wire thieves that has been operating extensively along the trolley lines at Kenilworth and Picton, and between Dover and Morristown, Charles J. Wilderman, thirty years old, was arrested in Washington street, Newark, yesterday afternoon at the request of the Union county authorities. He was turned over to Detective Galatian, of Westfield, this morning.

Wilderman has served two terms in State prison for wire theits, according to the police records, and in January, 1907, was sentenced to three months because of his suspicious actions in Clinton avenue early one morning. Galatian said Wilderman had been seen in the vicinity of where several sections of trolley wire were cut recently.

Galatian went to Newark yesterday with the information that Wilderman was with the gang under suspicion for the wire thefts, and Captain Carroll assaigned Detectives Fohs and Templeton to find the man. From an acquaintance of the prisoner, the detectives learned where he could be found. John J. Gettings, superintendent of the Elizabeth division of the Public Service Railway Company, looked at the prisoner this morning, and declared he was satisfied he was the same man who had been seen near Kenilworth at the time of the wire cutting.

The wire thieves, aside from the damage they did in stripping poles along the trolley roads, carted off about 2,000 feet of practically new wire.

Around the World in Two Hours.

Not alone absorbingly interesting but most instructive will be the zigzag lecture to be given tonight at the New Plainfield theatre by Fred Niblo, the world-famous American tourist-humorist. The subject tonight will be the best of his series of talks of travels in distant lands, the lecturer by request having "Africa, from the Cape to Cairo," as his theme. It will be graphically illustrated with hundreds of colored views and superb motion pictures.

Mrs. A. R. Hoagland Entertains.

Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland, of West Front street, entertained the members of the Pastors' Aid Society of the First Presbyterian church, Monday afternoon, the time being spent in a social manner, after which refreshments were served.

Reception at Park Club.

The New Year's Day reception will be held at the Park Club Friday afternoon from 4 to 7 o'clock. The wives of the Board of Governors will receive the guests and during the afternoon there will be an entertainment.

McAll Auxiliary Meeting.

The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the Public Library Wednesday morning, January 4, at 11 o'clock. There will be urgent business.

All Souls' Festival.

The children's Christmas party of All Souls' church will be held at the church Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 30, from 3 to 5.

BOROUGH FATHERS' FINAL

Business for the Year Wound Up by North Plainfield Council.

ANNUAL REPORTS ARE READ.

Mayor Samuel Townsend Makes An Address—To Reorganize on New Year's Day.

The Borough Council for 1908 held an adjourned meeting last night and concluded the business for the year. All of the members were present except Clifford McGee. Mayor Samuel B. Townsend bid farewell to the two retiring members, thanking them and the others for their work during the year.

The Mayor said:

"As this is the last meeting of this year's Council I want to express my appreciation of the cordial support that has been given me by all of the members. It has been a great satisfaction to me. To the retiring members I wish to express my regrets that they will not be with us next year. We will miss the absent member, and the one who is here has given good attention to work and we are sorry to see him go, also I thank you all for what you have done and for the kind consideration shown me."

W. L. Smalley, Jr., and Julius J. Stahl, the members elect, will be sworn in on Friday, January 1, succeeding E. P. T. Smith and Clifford A. McGee.

The annual report of Borough Recorder Charles M. Dolliver showed that 230 cases had been disposed of. The amount of fines collected was $386.50. The number of prisoners sent to the county jail, 7; committed to the borough jail, 22; those receiving suspended sentences, 94; dismissed cases, 3; fined, 97; State cases in borough court, 7.

Fire Chief H. F. Woolston's annual report to the Borough Council showed that thirty-one calls had been responded to. There were 12 box alarms, 12 still alarms, 3 engine tests, 3 roll calls on the Fourth of July, and one engine call to Plainfield. The causes of the fires were: Defective chimneys, 4; overheated stoves, 2; burning grass, 2; oil stoves, 2; candles, 1; gas jet, 1; thawing of pipes, 1; unknown, 2.

Councilman E. P. T. Smith reported that these applications for building permits had been made:

The Orchard Park Improvement Co., to erect four frame houses in Orchard Park, two of them to be on Chatham street and two on Pearl street, of about the same dimensions and same class as the other buildings in the neighborhood; B. B. Kinney, to erect a frame house at 56 Chatham street; Allan Coddington, to build a frame addition, 14x16 feet, at 114 Jackson avenue.

The report of Fred Becker, overseer of the poor, was: Balance from last year, $85.45; received this year, $1,300; total, $1,385; expenditures: Rents, $624; groceries, $198; board, $192; coal, $90; medicine, $27; balance in bank, $73.

Borough Clerk Fred A. Martin read this report of the expenses of the borough for 1908:

Borough general expenses, $6,723.29; police, $4,150.89; fire, $4,708.69; water, $1,305; street, $5,908.66; street lighting, $5,632.82; poor, $1,300; health board, $1,100, special school tax, $18,950; special school interest, $188.45; county tax, $20,364.03; State school tax, $8,164.53; total, $78,504.16.

HOPE ENDEAVORERS HOLD BUSINESS SESSION.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Hope chapel held a business meeting last night with President Miss Bertha Jones in the chair. Reports of the various committees showed the society's condition to be good. The members voted to take charge of a meeting at the Rescue Mission at a date to be decided upon later. Rev. L. R. Howard requested the society to take charge of the prayer-meeting to be held at the chapel Wednesday night of next week. During the week the annual week of prayer services will be held, and each society in the chapel will have charge on such nights as designated by the pastor. At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by the social committee, comprising Miss Elsie Slorah, chairman; Miss Edna Eckert and Frank M. Rimmer. Parlor games were played afterward.

Present for Colleagues.

Councilman H. D. Hibbard, who retires this year from the Councilmanic body, has presented each member with a fine group picture of the Common Council, the autograph of each member being on the back. The group contains all of the members, except Mr. Taylor, who could not be present when it was taken; also Mayor Charles J. Fisk.

RECEPTION IN HONOR OF MISS C. S. MARTIN

One of the brilliant social affairs of the Christmastide season was the reception given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. F. S. Martin, of Hillside avenue, for her youngest daughter, Miss Caroline Sprague Martin, at which time she was formally introduced to society. The affair was attended by nearly three hundred guests including those socially prominent in thic city, while there were many guests from New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburg.

There was no special color scheme throughout the house, but in the dining-room red and white were the prevailing colors. The debutante received a wealth of floral gifts; also several personal gifts of great value. The flowers were greatly admired by the guests and Miss Martin was showered with congratulations and best wishes.

The debutante was assisted in receiving by her mother, Mrs. F. S. Martin, and her sisters, Miss Martin and Mrs. Henry D. Bushnell, the last named of Pittsburg. Those in the dining-room were Mrs. Richard H. Hood, Miss Lucy Otterson, Miss Virginia Hegeman, Miss Helen Bushnell and Mrs. Howard A. Colby, of Plainfield, and Miss Emily P. Gould, of New York. They were assisted by about fifteen women of the younger society set.

Following the reception at 7 o'clock, an elaborate dinner was given to fifty guests, the service being from all tables. During the dinner and for the dancing which followed, the Neapolitan orchestra, of New York, furnished the music.

NO BONDSMAN FOR COX, TAKEN TO COUNTY JAIL

Charles Cox, who has been held by the borough police since Christmas eve, when he was arrested for non support, was taken to the county jail at Somerville this afternoon, having been unable to procure a bondsman to guarantee the carrying out of the Court's order that he pay $5 per week towards the support of his wife and two small children.

Having been up on the same charge only two months ago, Recorder Dolliver, at the hearing Saturday night, was not disposed to be lenient with him as on the previous occasion.

His excuse that he could find no work was not accepted for the reason that exceptional advantages had been given him after his release in October. The man is a hackman by occupation, and Chief Weiss, at that time, loaned him a horse and harness, the only condition required of him being that he feed the animal; while Mayor Townsend purchased a good serviceable cab at second-hand sale and he was allowed to keep whatever he earned. During the first week he made from $4 to $5 per day and things were going along smoothly with the folks well provided for, when rum got the best of him again and during the third week it became necessary to take the outfit away from him. The animal was not being cared for and the family was being neglected.

This was not the only chance he had, however, for Henry De Mott, the undertaker, loaned him an entire outfit, with the understanding that he should keep half of what was taken in. On the first day he earned $4.75, but on the second day he brought the rig in at night, with the money all spent and himself too drunk to unhitch. Since these feeble efforts to brace up, he has spent his time about the house, while his wife went out to work to earn money for the food the family ate. No one seems to care to go on his bond, which is fixed at $300, hence his removal to the county jail.

OLD BOROUGH "LOCKUP" TO HOUSE JAIL BOARDERS.

The borough's old "lockup," which stands behind the police station on Somerset street, is to again be used for the reception of prisoners. It is proposed to turn it into a boarding house for those who are held for several days, making it necessary to provide them with food.

At present the meals are carried to the cells, but when the old jail is brought into use again, the necessaries will be placed in it and the occupants will have to prepare the food themselves. A resolution was presented by Councilman Van Arsdale before the adjourned meeting last night, that the present tenant, Samuel Caldwell, colored, who uses it for a residence, be given notice to move out by the first of April, 1909. It was passed.

THE WEATHER.

Rain and warmer tonight; Thursday generally fair and colder. Maximum, 45; minimum, 25.

PRIEST'S FATHER IS DEAD

Charles Bogan Passes Away in His 84th Year at St. Mary's Rectory.

FATHER BOGAN HIS SON.

Solemn Requiem Mass to Be Celebrated by St. Mary's Rector On Saturday—Burial at Newark.

Charles Bogan, father of Rev. Father Bernard M. Bogan, of St. Mary's church, died at the rectory this morning, having made his home there since his son assumed the pastorate four years ago. Death came at 3 o'clock and was due to causes resulting from old age.

Mr. Bogan was born in Ireland in 1824 and sixty-five years ago came to America, locating at Newark. He engaged in the bakery busines and continuously until 1893 when he retired. At the outbreak of the Civil War he left his affairs in the hands of others and enlisted in a New Jersey regiment, serving with distinction throughout the conflict. He was one of the organizers of the Franklin Literary Club, of Newark, the first of its kind in the State, instituted in 1847. He served as its first secretary.

Mr. Bogan retained a vigorous constitution and all his faculties until shortly before death ensued. His eyesight was perfect and he read newspapers and books every day. His wife died many years ago and of nine children but two are living, Father Bogan and Miss Margaret Bogan, who retired recently after teaching in the Newark public schools for forty years.

The funeral will be held in St. Mary's church Saturday morning at 10 o'clock when a solemn requiem mass will take place. Rev. Father Bogan will be the celebrant.

Burial will be in Holy Sepulchre cemetery, Newark.

FREEDOM CASTLE GIVE A BANQUET AT FINAL MEETING

Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle, held its closing meeting and banquet of the year last night, there being a gathering of about sixty members, including delegations from the New Brunswick and Somerville castles. After a fine banquet prepared and served by the good and welfare committee, there were speeches by Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and visiting knights. During the evening William Allen was presented with a handsome sofa pillow.

The officers-elect of Freedom Castle will be installed Tuesday night by the New Brunswick Castle team and District Deputy Moore. There will also be degree work by the team and a general good time afterward.

Gentleman Burglar Pardoned.

Alfred Smalley, the young man known as "Raffles, the gentleman burglar," who confessed to robbing houses in Elizabeth, Bayonne and Plainfield and who was sentenced to five years in the State prison in November, 1905, was pardoned by the State Board of Pardons yesterday. His application has been before the board for a year or more. Smalley comes of a wealthy family and at the time of his arrest was employed as general salesman by Swift & Co., at a salary of $50 a week.

Will Hold a "Scrub-Race."

An old-fashioned Methodist "scrub race' will be a feature of the watch night meeting at the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church tomorrow night, beginning at 10 o'clock in charge of William H. Grobes, Deacons A. Wilson and S. P. Reilley, Rev. E. B. Maynard and Pastor Rev. J. T. Diggs. The trustees met Monday night and the reports showed a good financial condition. The pastor and officers expressed their thanks to all who had helped the church during the year, especially the white friends.

New Year's Reception.

William G. Debele invites the men of North Plainfield to Debele Hall on Chatham street, New Year's afternoon between 3 and 5 o'clock. It is in the nature of a reception arranged for the purpose of giving everybody a chance to become acquainted with the new councilman, Julius J. Stahl. Cigars and refreshments will be served.

New Year's Reception.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson and Mrs. Nickerson will be at home to all members of the Unitarian parish, at 168 Kensington avenue, on New Year's Day, from 4 to 7 o'clock.

—The finest assortment of fancy fruits in the city at Neuman Brothers. They have an abundance of selected table apples, Florida oranges, tangerines and white grapes. New Year's orders will be delivered promptly.

YOUTHS ADMIT ROBBING THORNTON'S POOL ROOM

A pool room on Watchung avenue between Second street and North avenue, conducted by Samuel Thornton, was entered and robbed of some pipes Monday night and the police suspected two youths, Richard Fairclough, white, aged 20, and James Coleman, colored, aged 19. The pair was arrested yesterday afternoon by Detective Sergeant Flynn and after an hour's gruelling at headquarters owned up to being guilty. They took a meerschaum pipe, which Thornton values at $28, and two French briar pipes, all of which they hid in the railroad embankment at Bound Brook.

The youths were arraigned before Judge Runyon this morning and were held in $100 bail each for appearance before the grand jury. Neither one could furnish a bondsman and they were committed to the county jail. Fairclough's parents moved to this city from Paterson two weeks ago and he came here on December 20, one day after he had been discharged from the Passaic county jail for petty larceny. Coleman's home is on Cottage place.

Fairclough possesses a splendid singing voice and warbled for a couple of hours while locked up yesterday. Most of the time he sang the popular song which runs, "Cheer up Mary, don't be sighing, there's a rainbow in the sky," and the cops forgot to tell him to shut up because it sounded so good.

TO TRY WALTER SMALLEY ON A CHARGE OF BIGAMY

Walter Smalley, of Somerset street, engaged as a grocery clerk at Westfield, arrested at Newark a week ago on a charge of bigamy and turned over to the Westfield police, is to be taken back to Newark to answer for the offense of which he is accused. It was not until after Smalley had been given a hearing before Justice of the Peace Walter B. Toucey, of Westfield, that the authorities realized that as the bigamous marriage was contracted in Newark, the defendant's case would have to be disposed of there.

Richard R. Eustace, father of Catherine Eustace, who was married to Smalley by Justice of the Peace Murano, at 511 Market street, Newark, apepared in the First Precinct Police Court at Newark yesterday morning, accompanied by Chief of Police O'Neill, of Westfield, and made a new complaint. At the time of his arrest Smalley, in admitting his second marriage, claimed he was so intoxicated at the time that he remembered little about the ceremony. This, however, was denied by Murano. Smalley's legal wife, from whom he said he had been separated for more than a year, is living with her parents in Scotch Plains.

MRS EDSON C. MARTIN IS GIVEN A SURPRISE.

A happy event of the Christmastide was a surprise party tendered to Mrs. Edson C. Martin, of Albert street, Monday night, by a few friends. The occasion being in honor of her birthday. The affair was arranged by Mrs. Floyd T. Woodhull arranged the affair and the members of her family, together with Mr. Martin gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Leek on Clinton avenue, and then proceeded to the Martin home, where Mrs. Martin was completly surprised.

A novel feature was a shower of birthday cards. Mrs. Martin was invited into the parlor, where she was requested to sit down in the only chair. As she did so, she was showered from above with the cards. The celebration included refreshments with the "birthday cake" which all enjoyed. Mrs. Martin received the best wishes of all for many happy returns of the day.

Opening of New Clubhouse.

James E. Martine will be among the guests at the New Year's Day reception to be held at the Jeffersonian Club's new home, 95 Halsey street, Newark. The invitations announce that the club will be "wide open" to all of its friends from Friday afternoon, January 1, at 2 o'clock 'till the morn of January 2.

Final Meeting of the Year.

The Common Council will hold its final meeting of the year tonight, when as far as possible the business of 1908 will be transacted, preparatory to the organization of the 1909 body on New Year's night.

Class Reunion.

The class of 1908, Plainfield High School, will hold its first reunion and dance at Fanwood, and not at Truell hall, on Friday night, January 1.

BOARDMAN TYLER WEDS

Plainfielder Takes Miss Susan Whittlesey, of Pittsfield, Mass., as His Bride.

A BROTHER OF WM. S. TYLER.

Groom a Director of Local Public Library and a New York Lawyer—To Reside Here.

Miss Susan Whittlesey, daughter of Mrs. William A. Whittlesey, of Pittsfield, Mass., and Cornelius Boardman Tyler, son of the late Col. and Mrs. Mason W. Tyler, of this city, were married yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother by Rev. Calvin Stebbins, of Framingham, Mass., assisted by Rev. William V. W. Davis, of the First church, of Pittsfield. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number including relatives and friends from New York and this city.

Mrs. William A. Whittlesey, Jr., was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Sabin, of New York and Miss Katharine Peck, of Pittsfield. Miss Margaret R. Tyler, of Plainfield, the bridegroom's niece, was flower girl.

William A. Whittlesey, Jr., escorted the bride, who was given in marriage by her mother. Mr. Tyler's best man was Stuart Jackson, of New York, and the ushers were Frederick W. Goddard and Thomas R. VanBoskerck, of this city.

The bride is a daughter of the late William A. Whittlesey, a State Senator and man of large of affairs in Pittsfield, and is a grand-niece of Samuel J. Tilden. Mr. Tyler is well known here, where he enjoys a large acquaintance. He is a director of the Public Library, having succeeded his father in the capacity. He is engaged in the practice of law in New York with his brother, William S. Tyler, a former member of the Common Council and now a member of the Board of Education. The couple will reside in this city following an extended wedding journey.

HEPTASOPHS ELECT OFFICERS AND PLAN FOR INSTALLATION.

The annual meeting for the election of officers of Protective Conclave, No. 505, Improved Order Heptasophs, was held last night at the rooms in Exempt Firemen's hall. These officers were chosen: Archon, Allen H. Vanderhoef; provost, Charles G. August; prelate, Frederick A. Weber; secretary, Vincent W. Nash; financier, Michael Armstrong; treasurer, Eugene M. Laing; inspector, E. L. VanCampen; warder, Jack Horner; sentinel, R. H. Barnard; sitting past archon, W. G. Uhler; representative to Supreme Conclave, Vincent W. Nash; alternate, Eugene M. Laing.

It was voted to invite to the installation of officers, which takes place next month, the following Conclaves: Somerville, Westfield, Elizabeth, and Rahway. In connection with the installation ceremonies it is proposed to hold a banquet and several of the Supreme Conclave officers will be present.

Suydam Inquest Postponed.

Coroner Harburger, of New York, yesterday adjourned the inquest in the Councilman H. B. Suydam case until Wednesday, Jan. 13. District Attorney Jerome's assistant said that he had not completed his investigation and wanted more time before the inquest. Mr. Suydam, a curb broker, was shot down and killed by J. C. Lumsden, an inventor, in the former's New York offices.

W. W. Wilson the Choice.

When the Common Council holds its final meeting of the year tonight, it is expected that W. W. Wilson, the West End grocer, will be chosen as the successor to the late Harry B. Suydam. This is according to the "slate" and it is believed that Mr. Wilson will accept. He has been a resident of the city for a great many years and has been very successful in business.

Received Consolidation Communicat

A report of the Bi-Municipal Consolidation commission, of which Alexander Gilbert is chairman, was present at the adjourned meeting of the North Plainfield Council last night. It was the same communication as was read before city Common Council the night before, and, as in that case, was referred to the Council of 1909.

Dr. and Mrs. T. V. Smith, of London, England, are spending the holidays with Mr. Smith's mother on Clark street. Dr. Smith was a native of Westfield, and went to England several years ago to practise his profession of dentist, where he has been very successful.

The town engineer has nearly finished the work of renumbering the town. There is a penalty of $1 per day for each day after January 1 for failure to have the new number properly displayed on a house or other building.

A large supplementary list of pictures is to be added to the Westfield Public Library after the first of January as soon as the books can be installed.

Fireside Council, Royal Arcanum, will hold a meeting tomorrow evening.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The masquerade dance and reception held last night in Excelsior Hall, Scotch Plains, was one of the most successful affairs the younger set has yet held. About twenty couples were in costume, some unique and others very pretty. Dancing, of course, was the feature of the evening, music being furnished by Morello, of Newark. At midnight the dancers unmasked and refreshments were served. The hall was prettily decorated with greens and bunting, which made a pretty contrast with the costumes worn. The success of the affair will probably lead to a series of monthly receptions and dances during the winter. Guests were present from Plainfield, Dunellen and Westfield. The committee who arranged the pleasant affair consisted of Mrs. George Harper, Mrs. Thomas Walsh and Mrs. Ketcham.

Miss Laura Bornmann entertained the members of her Sunday school class of the Baptist Sunday-school at her home on Westfield avenue, yesterday afternoon, from 2 to 5 o'clock. The several hours were pleasantly spent in playing games and enjoying music, after which refreshments were served.

Fireside Council, R. A., of Westfield, held its annual Christmas celebration at its meeting held last night in Arcanum Hall. A Christmas tree and all that goes with it was provided by Orator Murray and a general good time was enjoyed by the members.

Seely's mill, which has been shut down for several days while necessary repairs were being made, has started work again.

Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., holds election of officers at its first meeting in January.

DUNELLEN AND VICINITY.

Five boys were arrested by two Central Railroad detectives yesterday afternoon while riding in a coal car. They were taken before Recorder David S. Campbell, who listened to their stories and then dismissed them with a severe reprimand coupled with good advice, which they all declared they would heed. Their names, ages and places of residence were: Leo Meyers, 16, Elizabethport; Edwin Vail, 14, Plainfield; Thomas Kay, 16, Elizabethport; Michael Luck, 19, Plainfield; Louis Fulton, 16, Plainfield.

It is not always that the loser of a pocketbook is fortunate enough to recover it with the contents intact. Miss Lillian Garretson missed her purse, containing several dollars, after alighting from a trolley car yesterday. An honest conductor found it and turned it in at the car barns where its owner regained possession of it.

New Year's services will be held in the Methodist church Sunday evening. Rev. E. C. Dutcher, the pastor, will have for his topic, "The Starting of the New Year." Assistant Pastor W. W. Giddes will also deliver a short address.

Joseph Luccup, who shot himself in the eye several weeks ago, was taken to the insane hospital at Trenton yesterday. He is now totally blind in addition to his unbalanced mind.

SPORTS HERE AND THERE

GOLF.

This season, as in 1907 and 1908, the handicap list of the Metropolitan Golf Association will be restricted to players having a rating of nine strokes or under. This means a list of from 900 to 1,000 names, whereas the former unrestricted list ran up to 2,500 names. The saving on the cost of compilation and printing is considerable and to the advantage of the M. G. A., besides which the smaller list or limited rating has other points to recommend it.

It is obvious that many players in excess of those handicapped at nine or less will take part in the season's tournaments, and a simple plan has been devised to handicap such players, who, as they are not on the printed list, are termed "unregistered." The condition is that any player not on the association's printed list who enters a tournament handicap must present a letter from his club saying how many strokes he gets at his home club from some player whose name is on the list. This is a reliable method by which tournament committees can get a line on players who are not on the printed list.

In regard to local ratings the handicap committee reports that during the past season it was only with the greatest trouble and difficulty that the information could be obtained. The retiring committee—J. E. Erickson, F. J. Phillips and F. S. Douglas—recommends therefore that in 1909 the handicap committees of the differet clubs in the M. G. A. exercise more promptness in sending in their reports; also that the club committees report voluntarily throughout the season whenever a rated player shows permanent improvement in form, as without such voluntary reports it is impossible to keep the general list up to date. The best handicapping of the season was in the M. G. A. championship at Baltusrol last May. The par of the course is 75, and there was a tie between F. S. Douglas, 78, 2—76 and W. J. Travis, 76, 0—76.

Golfers who attend the spring tournament of the Atlantic City Country Club will find a greatly improved course. The old course, which has been the scene of a national, an intercollegiate and the Eastern women's championships, is now being lengthened to more than 6,000 yards, and many new hazards are being made to stiffen up the links as a test of golf. The old second hole is to become the fifth and the green is to be guarded by a wide water hazard. The sixth, formerly the third, is to be made an island green surrounded by a deep water hazard. The former fifth hole, 520 yards and known as Long Tom, will be extended to 585 yards, making it virtually impossible for all but very long drivers to reach the green in three shots with wood even with the aid of the wind. Many side traps and deep pits are to be placed as guards to the greens and to force care on the approach shots.

The tees have been changed to give the opportunity to lengthen or shorten the distances by at least ten feet on every hole. The order of play is to be entirely changed, the short holes to be sandwiched in between the long ones to relieve if possible the congestion on big days and at the semi-annual tournaments.

The public course at Forest Park, Borough of Brooklyn, has been closed for the winter. Boys were tobogganing on the hillsides Saturday and doing more damage to the turf than an army of golfers would do, according to one members of the Brooklyn-Forest Park Golf Club.

In accordance with the resolution passed at the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Golf Association the report of Secretary Calkins has been printed and may now be had in pamphlet form. It gives a complete summary of the season's open golfing on M. G. A. courses.

BASEBALL.

Larry Lajoie got a Christmas gift in the shape of two bats that had been soaked in oil for two years.

"Ed Walsh of the White Sox was once a brakeman on the Soo line," says a paragraph. Now he's fireman on the spit ball limited.

Cy Young may be sorrowing, but Bill Dineen is rejoicing. Cy won't have Criger with him next year, but Dineen will have him again.

A year or two of added maturity sometimes helps a ball player a great deal. When Freddie Parent first tried his hand in fast company under Pat Tebeau he was very young and didn't make good. But he made good all right when he tried it later. That may be the case with Jack Knight.

McGraw has a young shortstop named Fletcher in reserve who promises to shine among the diamond elect some day. He played against the New Yorks in Texas last spring, and Roger Bresnahan recently referred to him as the best young infielder he ever saw.

The Philadelphia American League club will open the finest ball park in the country next year. It occupies an entire city block and the stands and walls are built entirely of concrete. The grand stand, a double decker, has seats for 10,000 spectators, while the two open stands will have accommodations for 13,000 more. The players' dressing rooms are located under the grand stand, and are connected by tunnels with the benches. The playing field is large, level and well drained. The plant will be called Shibe Park and the cost was nearly $400,000.

Roger Bresnahan says: "In parting with John McGraw I wish to say that he is one of the greatest managers in the business. I wish him and the New York club success, and I really think that the New Yorks should be more of a pennant factor than ever next year, for McGraw has a great team now."

Eagan, the Athletics' new catcher, had a batting average of .378 in the New York State League last season.

A Pittsburg humorist rises to remark that the Cubs ought to be called the Artisans, because there is an Archer, a Tinker, a Butcher, a Marshall and a Miller on the team. This habit of punning is very Klinging.

In the opinion of several players and managers Jack Knight is the best fielding shortstop in the business.

John Ganzel, manager of the Cincinnati club last season, has signed a contract to manage the Rochester Eastern League club next season. It is said that he will receive $5,000 a year besides a liberal bonus if he lands the club in the first three.

Manager John J. McGraw will again lead the big band of Giants to Texas next March to prepare the men for the season's championship campaign. For two weeks or more the first and second teams of the New York combination will play the Dallas and Forth Worth Clubs, and the start for home will be made on March 28, the first stop being at Muskogee, Indian Territory, for the second team, while the regulars will proceed to Little Rock, Ark., for a game, and then jump to Memphis for two contests.

The barnstorming on the return to Manhattan will end with games at Baltimore on April 8 and 9, and New Yorkers will get their first glimpse of the 1909 Giants in action when they meet Yale in the annual game at the Polo Grounds on April 10.

From all accounts the New York Americans have picked up a fine young third baseman in Austin of the Omaha club. Austin is a Cleveland boy and in the Western League last season he not only played the bag finely and hit hard but also stole the remarkable number of 97 bases. Since the New York Americans drafted Austin the Omaha club has tried to buy him back, offering $3,000 for his release, but Manager Stallings has decided to hold on to him.

Watch night services will be held at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church tomorrow night, according to the usual custom.

An important meeting will be held at Faith chapel tonight when the details of the new organization will be perfected. It is hoped that every member will attend.

DEPUTIES DISSATISFIED WITH THEIR PAY CHECK

Men who served as deputy sheriffs and special policemen during the recent strike at the local plants of the National Fireproofing Company at Keasbey, have recently received checks for their services and few of them are willing to admit that they have been properly paid. When the forces were enlisted, no stated sum was promised them, but there was talk of $4 a day. When the deputies were put at work they remained on duty day and night, without leaving the plants. They expected that they would be paid $8 for every twenty-four hours they served and some of them figured that eight hours constituted a day's work and they hoped for Christmas money at the rate of $12 a calendar day.

There was a long delay in paying the men at all and when the checks came several men received none at all. Most of them were dissatisfied with the amounts. One man worked seventy-eight hours, during a part of the time engaged in the brawls which took place, and he received $8. Another found two checks for him, neither of them for what he considered the correct amount. One deputy acknowledges receiving $35 for seventy-two hours. Others were paid $8 for the same hours of labor in the same squads. It is impossible to figure, from the checks and the time the men served the rate at which payment was made. Two men who were on duty twenty-four hours were paid $12 apiece. When the men were discharged, upon the arrival of the State troops, they grumbled considerably. Now they are sorry the troops did not sooner come to Perth Amboy. The deputies claim that they were in danger of injury or death all of the time they were on duty.

They assert that the force of 140 strikebreakers, brought there from New York and in the plants only one day, cost the company $1,000, in addition to the transportation charges, and argue that they have been unfairly treated. Sheriff Quackenboss asked for the militia because he could not secure enough deputies. The men who served under him declare that he will have a harder time when there is again need of deputies, although he is not blamed for the unsatisfactory settlement of their claims.

Alleged Deserter Seized.

Frank Middleton, a young man, was arrested at Elizabeth last night by Detective Brogan on a charge of being a deserter from the United States military post at Fort Wadsworth, Staten Island. He left the service two years ago. When taken into custody he was acting as a motorman for the Public Service on the Third street line in Elizabeth. He was taken back to Fort Wadsworth yesterday.

PREDICTS POLITICS IN SCHOOLS IS DOOMED

Interference by politically appointed and controlled laymen in the work of teaching the boys and girls of the State is doomed, according to President James E. Bryan, of Camden, head of the New Jersey State Teachers' Association, which opened its annual session at Atlantic City last night. The change, he says, is to come through the higher education of professional instructors and more drastic standards of requirements for teachers.

"Teachers should welcome the higher requirements demanded of educators in this day," he said. "The change is raising the professional standard, and the time is coming when the political officials who now exercise control of every branch of educational work will be relegated to the place where they will only be called on to handle the business end of school matters, and will be ashamed to undertake any control of the professional teachers who are making education their life-work."

Heads of factories and workshops throughout the country are asking for better educated employes, Dr. Albert A. Snowden, of the New Jersey Commission of Industrial Education, said. "The old years of apprenticeship are out of date," he said, "and the places of those who formerly entered the trades in that manner alone are to be filled with skilled workers."

Dr. Snowden stated that some rather startling facts would be contained in the report of his commission to be handed to Governor Fort soon, but refused to make any statement as to the findings of the commission, which has been at work for several months.

Five hundred teachers attended the session, which will continue for three days. Meetings of the various sections started today. Friends of the teachers' retirement fund, who are elated over their success in bringing the fund to a place where they claim it will become a permanent advantage to the teachers of the State incapacitated through age or sickness, are present to encourage a more general subscription to the insurance feature, but they will make no fight for any drastic legislation in favor of the movement.

GOVERNOR SUSTAINS STATE EDITOR'S ACT.

Trenton, Dec. 30.—Governor Fort sat yesterday as a court of appeals to determine the merits of a very lively wrangle which had just taken place between two well-known newspaper men in this State. The little drama took place in the executive chamber, and the principals were William Cloke, the State commissioner of reports, and Charles R. Bacon, head of the bureau of shell fisheries.

Mr. Cloke had exercised his editorial privilege freely upon the report of Mr. Bacon on the shell fisheries, and the latter took exception to the fact that the blue pencil had been drawn through an article prepared by special request by the State geologist of Oregon.

This treated of oyster cultivation in that State, which Mr. Bacon said was far advanced in that direction, and which has been importing Jersey oysters for seed. Mr. Bacon regarded this treatise as a valuable part of the report, but Commissioner Cloke thought Oregon was too far from home to make its doings valuable reading in this State.

Mr. Bacon appealed first to Mr. Cloke who refused to modify his views, and, after the subject had been thrashed out before the Governor, he sustained the action of Mr. Cloke.

CHAUTAUQUA LYCEUM RECITAL AT MT. OLIVE.

The Chautauqua Lyceum will give a classical recital at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, tonight, at 8 o'clock, when this program will be rendered:

Impromptu, orchestra, H. Peterson leader; chorus, "Italia," Lucrezia; reading, "The Party," Dunbar, Mrs. Dr. Wormley; soprano solo, "Queen of the Earth," Pinsuti, Miss P. Lander; violin obligato, "Fifth Averie," J. Tony; reading, "Answered," Dr. J. F. Lawson; tenor solo, "Nita Gitana (B minor) DeKoven, G. H. P. Ganaway; overture, selecter, Mrs. L. Calendar; baritone solo, "The Armorer's Song," DeKoven, A. J. Lambert; dramatic reading, Poe, Miss Alice Maynard; contralto solo, "Asthmore (E minor), Trotere, Mrs. A. G. Liggins; quartet, "The Monket Said to the Chimpanzee," Messrs. Ganaway, Clay, Wilson and Thompson.

The committee in charge comprises G. H. P. Ganaway, chairman; Miss S. V. Hill, secretary; M. B. Dyette, chairman of the ways and means committee; Miss Mabel Peterson, pianist and Mrs. L. Calendar. Supper will be served a la carte in the basement by T. H. Royster.

Proctor's Garage.

The management of Proctor's theatre has built a "garage" for baby carriages to the left of the main corridor. Women attending matinees are given free use of the "garage," as also of the handsome parlors.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

The Christmas exercises of the Baptist Sunday-school were held last night in Washington hall. The games were enjoyed by everybody, although some of the young people were disappointed to hear that a "postoffice" was not included.

Miss Florence Whilhelm, of South Easton, has returned to her home after a short visit with her friend, Miss Pearl Shrope.

Miss Mary Gallagher, of Metuchen, is visiting Mrs. P. J. McDonough.

Large parties of skaters enjoyed the sport on the lake yesterday.

The public school will reopen on Monday.

Trinity Reformed Celebration.

The members of the primary, beginners' and cradle roll of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school had a delightful Christmas entertainment in the Sunday-school room yesterday afternoon. Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent, was in charge of the exercises, assisted by all of the teachers. A feature of the afternoon was a brief address to the children by the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek. He pleased all with his happy words, full of cheer.

The program of the afternoon was a reptition of the one given Sunday night, which all enjoyed so much. In addition there was a song by the beginners' department, a recitation by Donald Willett and a piano solo by Louise Seader. Adele Freeman repeated her solo of Sunday night, which received favorable comment. After the entertainment there was a distribution of suitable gifts, including dolls, toys of all kinds and books while everyone was generously treated to ice cream and cake. The program follows:

Recitation, Carmen Trembath; "The Christmas Message," Alma Alligar, Florence James, Hazel Creveling, Donald Willett, Alfred Baker, Ellis Enanderffl "Greeting," Marion Woolley; recitation, "A Problem," Laura Smith; song, "Wide Awake Boys and Girls," Alfred Willett, Russell Sears, John Wirth; recitation, Helen Thompson, Ella Van Arsdale, Harriet Higgins; "The Baby King," Margaret Smith; exercise, "Three Modern Wise Men," Seymore Day, Malcolm Sheppard, Reginald Applegate; recitation, "Bethlehem," Louise Seader; recitation, "If You Were a Little Boy," Howard Willett; song, "Beautiful Story," Adele Freeman; recitation, "His Star," John Dunn; song, "Sleep, Baby Sleep," Marion Blair, Beatrice Bodine, Lillie Schleif, Ruth Enander, Beatrice Tier, Adele Freeman, Marguerite Barkalew. Recitations by the juniors: "The First Christmas," by Helen McGrady; "Bethlehem Stars," by Grace Vail; "The Christmas Babe," by Jennie Sears.

The entertainment for the older members of the school last night was furnished by professional talent and for more than an hour all were pleased with the program. Miss Catharine Lane gave soprano solos; Miss Ethel Palmer, whistler, held the close attention of all by her clever work of whistling the most difficult selections and imitating birds, while Miss Helen M. Comes gave recitations and impersonations. The trio displayed exceptional talent and they received numerous encores throughout the entertainment. Afterward all the members of the school were remembered in the usual manner with boxes of candy.

At Warren Chapel.

The little folks of the Warren chapel Sunday-school lived Christmas day over again yesterday, the school celebration, having been held over until then. Toys, books, candies and other things were distributed in the afternoon, after which they saw in moving pictures the story of "The Three Bears," the Marathon race, and a number of Mother Goose stories.

The older members of the school were entertained at night in the church, with additional kinetograph pictures followed by refreshments of ice cream and cake, served by the Men's Association and the Missionary and Ladies' Aid Society. Five hundred were in attendance filling the church to the doors. The decorations were the same as for the Sunday Christmas services, consisting of evergreens, wreaths, holly and red immortelles. J. W. Gavitt, superintendent of the Sunday school, was in charge of the entertainment.

Bethel Chapel.

The annual Christmas festival of Bethel chapel was held at the chapel, last night, with a large attendance of the school and friends to enjoy the event. The entertainment was under the management of Miss Helen Lovell, who was assisted by her sister, Miss Laura Lovell, and her brother, Richard Lovell. The distribution of gifts was made by Superintendent A. W. Duxbury.

The exercises consisted of a few recitations, a drill and a drama by the Boys' Club, entitled, "The Teddy Bears' Christmas," which afforded unusual merriment. At the conclusion of the program the superintendent proposed three cheers for Miss Lovell for the pleasing entertainment rendered and the school responded unanimously. Refreshments, including a box of candy, a plate of cream and cake, were then served. Presents were given to the little ones and several teachers were remembered by their classes. The committee on refreshments comprised Abram Brown, Charles E. VanNorn, George Dillard, Miss Laura Field, Mrs. Sarah Pryear, Miss Euphemia Dorsey and Miss Elveta Marcellus.

First Presbyterian Church.

The Christmas entertainment for the primary department of the First Presbyterian church Sunday-school was held yesterday afternoon in the chapel, when the children took part in a program of recitations and carols, after which there was a distribution of gifts to the little ones and ice cream and cake were served. Tea and cake were served to the mothers. Mrs. George A. Ballantyne was in charge, assisted by Miss Helen Lounsbury, Miss Florence Dickinson, Miss Line and Miss Georgia Ricker

In the evening a cantata, entitled "A Trip to Santa Land," in three parts, was given by the school under the direction of Clifford A. Braider, assisted by Miss Aimee Emmons, who drilled the children in the speaking parts. Those who presented the cantata were as follows:

Germans — Ruth Wean, Helen George, Ruth Waldron, Frances Mosher; Chinese—Charles Burnet, Edith Adams, Clayton Ballantyne, Dorothy Dixon; Italians—Lois Diamond, Natalie Selby, Bertha Townley; clown, Elston Hoagland; French—Hazel Selby, Edith Hamilton, Dorothy Gaston, Pauline Gates, Marielle Dunham, Roberta Templin, Edith Adams; Russians—Marion Wean, Clare Britton; soldiers—John Causbrook, Douglas Kirch, Warren Townley, Ernest Hand; French dolls—Florence Hall, Augusta Allen, Mildred Smith, Julia Grace Alcorn. Frank Line took the part of Santa Claus.

After the cantata there was the customary distribution of gifts to the children; also boxes of candy.

Park Avenue Baptist.

The Park Avenue Baptist Sunday-school room was crowded last night during the presentation of the Christmas cantata, "Santa Claus' Mixup." This was the cast of characters: "Santa Claus," H. C. Runyon; "Sexton," George E. Hall; "Jack Frost," Charles Van Winkle; "Chief of Police," Martin Stutzman; "Queen of Fairies," Miss Clara Hadley; "Miss White," Miss Cora Brokaw; "Miss Black," Miss Emily Runyon; "Chief of Milliners," Miss Arlene Brown; "Ned," Philip Schuyler; "Violet," Miss Madeline Moy, "Lillie," Miss Anna Smith.

The platform was arranged to represent a scene in a Sunday-school room. One of the features of the entertainment was the "Holly Swing Chorus of Fairies," by six little girls. Some of the local song hits were: "I Got My Eyes on You," Martin Stutzman; "When I Shovel in the Coal," G. E. Hall; "Nobody Cares for Me," Charles Van Winkle; "My Reindeer," H. C. Reindeer.

Gifts were presented by the various classes to their teachers. Rev. Finn received a mahogany rocking chair, Miss Finn a linen table set, Mrs. S. A. Crum was given a Bible, Miss Florence A. Hawkins, who had charge of the drilling, received a large bunch of carnations, and G. E. Hall was presented with a book.

In the primary room, in the afternoon, exercises were held by sixty of the pupils of that department. Miss Elmira Runyon was in charge, assisted by Mrs. E. F. Vail, Mrs. H. C. Runyon, Miss Charlotte Tennett, Mrs. R. M. Stelle and Miss Alice Brown. Refreshments were served.

Faith Chapel.

"The Santa Claus Land" was the title of a Christmas entertainment given at Faith chapel, last night, and the edifice was thronged to the doors with members of the school and their friends. The cantata was presented in a creditable manner and the various parts were well acted, while the singing was a feature. Santa Claus and Jack Frost made lots of fun for both old and young. Mrs. J. W. Musson was in charge of the program, assisted by Mrs. Frank Stewart. The part of Santa Claus was taken by Frank Stewart, and Miss Bessie VanNest was Mrs. Santa Claus, while Paul Jones was Jack Frost. The part of the poor girl was taken by Verna Stewart.

The fairies were: Gilberta VanNest, Edna Stewart, Tillman Ryno, Nellie Askham, Mildred Dower, Cora Cornelius, Alice Huff, Mary Conway, Bessie Griffin, Grace Baker and Blanche Askham. The last named one sang a pretty solo. These were the elves: Harold Griffin, Harold Wahlig, George Patterson, Enid Johnson, John Patterson, Wesley Giles, Harry Huff, Alexander Campbell, Hardress Patterson, Monroe Gullberg, William Simon and Frank Dower.

Miss Lizzie Frank sang a solo and Miss Helen Meyers gave a recitation. Mrs. Charles Quint, soprano; Mrs. D. C. Patterson, alto; D. C. Patterson, tenor and Frank Stewart, bass, sang several selections, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Charles Griffen. There were also two carols by the school, William Conger presiding at the organ, and at the close of the entertainment Bessie Carson and Christine Viebrock sang "The Good Night Song."

The feature of the celebration was the awarding of prizes to the children who have been present every Sunday. They were books and were presented to the following: Bessie Carson, Grace Baker, Oswald Meyers, Edward Simon, Arthur Johnson, Russell Stewart and Bessie Griffin. Secretary William Conger also had a perfect attendance. Those missing but one Sunday and receiving honorable mention were Ira L. LaRue, U. B. Crane, George Simon, William Simon and Robert Gullberg. Every member of the school received an orange and a box of candy, and in addition the primary girls were given dolls and the boys received books.

Perhaps the greatest interest was in the gifts to the pastor, Rev. J. W. Musson as well as the officers and teachers of the school. Mr. Musson received a typewriter, while Mrs. Musson was presented with a cut-glass fruit bowl and a Christmas stocking. L. W. Randolph, the superintendent, received a cut-glass fruit bowl and Assistant Superintendent Frank Stewart received a set of military brushes. A gold-handled umbrella was given to W. A. Conger, the secretary, and the members of the choir were also remembered. The sexton, Isaac Alexander received a purse of money. The Philathea Bible class gave its teacher, U. B. Crane, a set of books and the Junior Barca Class gave its teacher, L. W. Randolph a sterling silver whiskbroom and a bottle of beef, iron and wine tonic. There was the usual Christmas tree, about which were placed the gifts.

For Coach Drivers' Union.

A movement is on foot in Elizabeth to organize a coach drivers' union, for the purpose of doing away with Sunday funerals, the same as has been accomplished in Trenton, and likewise regulate a scale of wages for which the drivers will agree to work. There is a Coach Owners' Union in Elizabeth, but up to the present time no attempt has been made to organize the drivers. A preliminary meeting for this purpose will be held next week.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

The mysterious discovery of a deer skin, which has been perplexing Haleyville, has, on investigation, been found to be an old calf hide which dogs have been dragging around for several years.

For the first time the Passaic police wore their new caps yesterday. They are of the same style as those worn by the New York department and are considered an improvement over the old stiff helmet.

After twenty years' continuous service as cashier of the Commercial Bank, Egg Harbor, Herman Dietz has resigned and will enter the firm of Renault & Sons. Anthony Vautrinot, paying teller for eight years, will become cashier.

The committee from the Gloucester County Horse Breeders' Association, who went to New Brunswick with a view of having one of the State's imported stallions located in Gloucester county, are positive that one will be sent there.

Isaac Klien, a brakeman on the Salem branch of the West Jersey and Seashore Railroad, had an arm crushed between two cars at Elmer yesterday. He was hurried by special train to Cooper Hospital, Camden, where it was found necessary to amputate the arm.

A Riverside trolley car, No. 988, rammed Dr. I. Surnamer's automobile while in Bridge street, near Broadway, Paterson, yesterday afternoon. Dr. Surnamer had his hand lacerated and some slight damage was done to his machine. The fender of the trolley car was also damaged.

The marriage of P. Stryker Smith, of Omaha, Neb., and Miss B. Geraldine Perkins, of Beverly, performed in Camden by Rev. J. Williams on July 4 last, has just been made public, causing a great surprise to the young people's friends. Mr. Smith was formerly employed in Beverly.

Evidence given by his own daughter of his relations with an alleged "affinity," caused Harry Smith, of Washington, D. C., to be held in bail by Magistrate Grove, in Atlantic City, yesterday, on charges of statutory crime made by his wife. The man made no plea, and is under bond to appear before the grand jury.

Xavier Seifritz, fifty-two years old, of Woodbury, who for three months has been suffering from a complication of diseases, died yesterday. Two weeks ago he was attacked by a fit of hiccoughing, which clung to him for ten days and left him in a weakened condition. He leaves a widow and two sons, one of whom has just graduated from the Jefferson Hospital.

Henry W. Leeds, president of City Council at Atlantic City, whose term expires with the year, charged members of the City Board of Assessors with direct responsibility for a 17-cent increase in the resort's tax rate last night in a valedictory address. To prove his charge he cited the fact that while $6,000,000 had been spent upon buildings in three years, tax valuations had increased $2,000,000.

While driving over the railroad crossing near the station in Lumberton yesterday, Edgar G. Allen, a farmer near Vincentown, and a man riding with him, were struck by a northbound train. Mr. Allen is in a serious condition at the Burlington County Hospital. One of his hips and several ribs are broken. The carriage was wrecked, but the farmer's companion was not hurt. The horse also escaped injury.

LONG HUNT FOR RARE SERUM.

But One Hospital in Orange Had the Kind Used for Meningitis.

Dr. Samuel Harris of the Orange Memorial Hospital at Orange, spent five hours in New York yesterday in a search for the serum used in cases of cerebrospinal meningitis, as he had a patient whose life hung upon the outcome of his quest.

The physician visited Flower Hospital, but was told there was not a drop of the precious fluid on hand, and he then applied in turn at the Presbyterian, Post-Graduate, and Bellevue Hospitals, with no better success. He then tried the Board of Health, but could not get it.

At last Dr. Harris tried Roosevelt Hospital and Dr. Grimshaw, the superintendent, informed him that he had a quantity of the serum. With the serum, Dr. Harris hurried back to the Orange hospital. His patient is Tony Sandal of Valley road, Orange.

Dr. Simon J. Flexner discovered the serum about a year ago, during researches at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research at First avenue and Sixty-second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mundy, of Beverly, are visiting Mrs. Mundy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Addis, of Orange place.

Clifford Williams, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Williams, of West Front street, has about recovered from an attack of pneumonia.

W. J. Poulson, who has disposed of his business at the Hotel Kensington, will leave this week for Flemington, where he will make his home in the future.

Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., will hold a regular meeting tomorrow night.

EXHIBITION IRISH LACE MAKING

Comely Girls from the School of Industries of Loughlynn, County Roscommon, Ireland, have been brought over expressly for this demonstration, and will give an exhibition of their cleverness in the art of lace making. The exhibit is in charge of Rev. Michael O'Flanagan, who is on a tour of the United States in aid of the industrial revival of Ireland. Father O'Flanagan's efforts to promote the industries of Ireland are laudable indeed and will be approved by all friends of the Emerald Isle in this section of Jersey.

The merit of Irish Laces is known the world wide, but of late a great deal of the imitation Irish laces have flooded the market, and this exhibit will serve to illustrate the difference between the sham and the real. Many magnificent pieces of Irish laces, neckpieces, coats, etc., will be displayed.

The exhibition is on the Third Floor in the Oriental Rug room and will continue thruout the week.

No Better Time in the Whole Year to Purchase Coats, Suits & Millinery

THAN DURING THIS EXTRAORDINARY VALUE-GIVING CLEARANCE SALE.

That New Suit, or coat, or hat, or fur that you didn't purchase before Christmas is now offered from one-third to one-half less. In fact the reductions in many instances are even less than half. The garments are this season's most fashionable numbers, such as cleverly designed Directoire and Empire models beautifully tailored in the most wanted materials. There are any number of them to choose from—and every one has been decisively marked down for a speedy clearance. If you prefer the ultra fashionable styles elaborately trimmed with fancy braids, buttons, etc., they're here. If you prefer a modest style, such as a plain tailored broadcloth or cheviot coat or suit, they're here. And every Fall and Winter garment for Women and Misses, as well as Children's Coats, has been marked at go-quick figures. For example:

|---|---|
| $12.50 to $17.50 Broadcloth, Worsted and Novelty Stripe Suits, now at | $ 7.50 |
| $15.00 to $20.00 Directoire, Empire and Plain Tailored Suits, now at | $10.00 |
| $22.50 to $28.50 Elaborately Trimmed Tailored Suits, now at | $15.00 |
| Values up to $50.00; Handsome Tailored Suits, now at | $25.00 |

There are also striking reductions in beautiful Long Coats. They are full length coats made of broadcloth or kersey cloth. Some are handsomely trimmed, while others are plain. To give you an idea of the reductions:

|---|---|
| $16.50 Full Length Broadcloth Coats, now at | $10.00 |
| $17.50 Full Length Broadcloth Coats, now at | $12.50 |
| $22.50 Full Length Kersey Cloth Coats, now at | $15.00 |
| $37.50 Imported Broadcloth Long Coats, now at | $25.00 |

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

Fred Niblo in the first of his travel talks, "Africa," will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tonight.

Fred Niblo, in "Talks of Travel," at New Plainfield Theatre tonight.

Never before in her popular career has Miss Frances Gordon had a part more admirably adapted to her abilities than that of "Mary," the servant girl in George M. Cohan's successful and brilliantly entertaining play with music "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," which Cohan and Harris produce on an elaborate scale at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night. Quite as unique in conception as the story of the play itself is the character of "Mary," which differs radically from any role seen on the stage for the past decade and affords Miss Gordon unlimited range for the display of her versatile powers. Underlying the quiet but effective comedy lines of this part which keeps the audience in a constant smile is a deep laid thread of pathos which often brings one to the verge of tears. Miss Gordon's two song numbers "Mary is a Grand Old Name," and "So Long, Mary," both of which are written in Mr. Cohan's most characteristic vein, are so capitally rendered as to make them features of the performance. Scott Welch will be seen in his famous role of "Kid Burns," the ex-slangy prize fighter retired, with the original cast and production.

May Robson comes to the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, when she will be seen in her latest comedy success, "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." Miss Robson is returning from the Pacific coast and all through the far west the papers speak in the most glowing terms of her and her company. The following is clipped from an exchange: "Miss May Robson as 'Aunt Mary' is simply delightful, she gives it all the tenderness, all the pathos and all the humor it requires. One moment the asperity of her voice makes even the pet cat squirm, and the next the helpful philosophy of this mellow maiden lady sheds benignity over all. There is a sparkle in the lines that is refreshing and one goes home wishing he had just such a dear old aunt."

Annie Russell in "The Stronger Sex," at New Plainfield Theatre next Tuesday night.

Theatre, New York, during the long run of her play, "The Stronger Sex," will present that highly successful comedy here at the New Plainfield theatre Tuesday night. As Mary Barrington, the young American heiress, who finds a happy solution to the international marriage question, Miss Russell is more a delight than ever, and has added new lustre to her reputation. Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper, her managers, have surrounded their star with a first-class supporting company.

James T. Closson, of East Front street, who has been detained at home by a severe attack of rheumatism, is much improved and is now able to be about the house.

MARSHALL & BALL

Announce---Beginning Saturday Morning at 9 o'clock

A January Sale of Men's Winter Overcoats

It has been the policy of the Marshall & Ball Store for years to carry no garments over from one season to another. And with these sharp price reductions we won't be long in cleaning up this season's stock of Overcoats.

This is a Great Overcoat Opportunity---great because of the wide provision of models and patterns, as well as because of the saving it makes possible on garments of distinctiveness and excellence.

For this sale we have grouped all our overcoats into three lots.

| LOT A | LOT B | LOT C |
|---|---|---|
| All $12 to $15 Overcoats | All $18 to $22 Overcoats | All $25 to $40 Overcoats |
| $9.75 | $14.75 | $19.75 |

The choice comprises black, oxford and brown Kerseys; black, oxford and brown Mixed Melton; Fancy Tourist Overcoats of Velour and Melton, in brown, gray and smoke shades.

Men are ALWAYS enthusiastic over a Marshall & Ball Sale, but we expect THIS Sale to arouse unusual interest because it comes just at Heavy Overcoat Time.

Remember, the sale starts Saturday Morning at 9 o'Clock.

Annual Sale of Garments

AROUSES GREATEST INTEREST AMONG PARTICULAR WOMEN

Discriminating women; women who know style and quality, hail this sale as the one that extends most magnificent money-saving opportunities on ultra fashionable garments—bona fide in every particular.

Fine Choosing; Hundreds Stylish Garments For Women and Girls

How is it that this store sells desirable attire at such little prices? First, we do a tremendous business, and while sale assortments are large quantity is small compared with aggregate that passes through this store in a season. Hence, price-cuts can be hearty and without consideration of original figures. And we have no undesirable garments at any price any time. We replenish every day with the newest of the new. To offer passe styles under regular price would be no bargain. We want this event to uphold, and it is upholding, the prestige built upon previous sales. Any garment here would bring regular price up to March first; but we never depart from our policy to reduce stocks early so as to be SURE of selling all and giving the benefit while there is still long wearing time. ALL ON SALE WHILE THEY LAST.

SOMERVILLE EXPERIENCES A LIVELY BUILDING BOOM.

Despite the hard times Somerville has had what amounts to a building boom. Even with material and labor at the high-water mark more houses have been erected during the past year than the combined number built within the town limits for five years previous. This building boom has not been stimulated by real estate syndicates or foreign land companies, but most of the buildings have been erected by residents.

A. V. Sargeant is just completing four handsome houses in East Somerville of the Queen Anne, Colonial and mission style. Joseph S. Barras has put up two fine residences on Eastern avenue. George V. Van Norwich has recently moved into a new home on West Cliff street. Hugh N. Hartnell is building a unique residence on Cliff street of the bungalow pattern. Aaron A. Vanderveer has nearly completed a large dwelling on West Cliff street, into which he expects to move about February 1. Mrs. Archibald Taylor has erected a home on East High street, Hyman Kline has completed a fine double brick and stone dwelling house on Franklin street, and Abram T. Van Fleet is building a small house in North Somerville.

During the past year Benjamin Coon, R. B. Stryker, Stephen King and James Denning have built new houses north of the town. A large number of farms have been sold to city men during the year and these are being improved and made into handsome estates.

AUTOS HELP GOOD ROADS.

Jersey Commissioner Says They Increase Demand for Smooth Highways.

In making his annual report to the Governor State Commissioner of Roads Frederick Gilkyson declares that while automobiles may have ripped up roads throughout the State and cost the people money, good has come from the use of automobiles, as it has brought about a demand for better roads. He says that while road building is highly advanced it has not got to the point of perfection. He believes from certain experiments now going on that Jersey will evolve a hard hemogeneous material for roads that will make the model roads of the world.

In recommending that greater attention should be paid to road repairs the Commissioner insists that when a road is resurfaced it should bes acrificed, all foreign surfaces removed, and when stone is put on it should be bound with a competent binder and rolled.

JEWELER VOWS VENGENCE.

Says He'll Make a Country Justice Smart for Arresting Him.

Placed under $200 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury, William Harris, a jeweler of Dover, says that before he is through with the case the Justice of the Peace who put him under the bonds will smart. Harris is positive that he has been guilty of no offense, and when he signed the bond under protest he says the Justice told him he would probably hear no more of it.

Harris took a ring from George Lake a few days ago, which he was to repair. A few days later Mary Heintz, an aunt of Lake, entered the store and demanded the ring, saying it was hers. Harris knew Lake but had never seen Mrs. Heintz, so he refused to give it to her. Mrs. Heintz then appealed to the Justice of the Peace, who sent for Harris and told him he was under arrest and would have to give the bond or go to jail.

FEWER EPISCOPAL PRIESTS.

Decrease Due Partly to Depositions in "Open Pulpit" Dispute.

For the first time probably in its history the Episcopal church in the United States reports a decrease in the number of its clergy, due in part to an unusually large list of depositions from the priesthood and to an abnormally high death rate during the past year. The annual statistics show a total of 5,411 clergy, a decrease of 13 from 1907. There were 135 deaths, an increase of 30, and 41 depositions, an increase of 15.

The increase in depositions is ascribed to the action of sixteen or more of the clergy, who, resenting what they termed the "open pulpit" canon adopted at the last general convention, entered the Roman Catholic church. The defections occurred largely in Pennsylvania, Wisconsin, and Illinois.

S. O. Wants S. I. Sound Dredged.

The Standard Oil Company wants the War Department to dredge the sound in the vicinity of its new Linden plant to a depth of eighteen feet, so as to allow ships of large draft to come up the sound to its docks. Should this eighteen foot channel be dug, it is very likely that ships of large dimensions will also unload their cargoes and reload at the docks of other big industrial concerns near the oil plant. The Elizabeth Board of Trade and other civic bodies in Elizabeth will be urged by the Standard Oil officials to use their influence in hastening the project.

Mrs. H. B. Faroat, of Sandford avenue, has returned from Green, N. Y., where she has been visiting during the past two weeks.

EAST ORANGE MAN GETS BIG WINDFALL.

James Ruthven Lord, of 31 Evergreen place, East Orange, was surprised on Saturday night to learn through the efforts of City Clerk Lincoln E. Rowley, that he was probably one of three heirs to an estate in Kansas worth in the neighborhood of $30,000.

Mr. Rowley received a letter from Dennis D. Doty, of Garden City, Kan., asking for information of Mr. Lord, Mrs. Mary Jervis, and others of the family, one of whom is now dead. Mr. Rowley set inquiries on foot and found that Mr. Lord was living in East Orange.

When informed what the letter contained, he expressed the belief that it was the result of the recent death of a distant relative in Kansas who owned two quarter sections. He is of the opinion that the estate is of much greater value now than when he last visited it, many years ago.

SMALL SUGGESTIONS THAT ARE WORTH WHILE.

If a little vinegar be kept boiling on the stove while onions or cabbage are cooking it will prevent the disagreeable odor going through the house.

When boiling rice try adding a little lemon juice to the water. This gives the rice a nice, white appearance, and keeps the grains well separated.

To clean water bottle and decanters mix together half a gill of vinegar and a handful of salt. Shake well in the decanters to be cleaned, and no motter how discolored this treatment has been tried and found successful.

The cheaper grades of linoleum lose their bright coloring after a time, but the body of the material is still firm. A young housekeeper discovered that she could paint this a soft yellow brown, and the effect was that of a hardwood floor.

French chalk, plentifully applied, will clean evening slippers which have not become soiled enough to submit to a professional cleaner. Indeed, French chalk is a most excellent thing to have in the house, as its uses in a careful household are many.

Pretty Safe Sign.

"That is a honeymoon pair at the end of the carriage," whispered the commercial traveler.

"Yes," laughted the modern Sherlock, "and I'll wager two pounds that he kissed her going through the tunnel."

"Did you see him?'

"No; but I see something now. He had a smutty spot o nhis nose when the train entered the tunnel, and now he has one, too."

For Fruit Stains.

To a two-ounce bottle of good whiskey put one heaping tablespoonful of gum camphor. Shake well before using. Keep the bottle handy, and when counting the soiled clothes apply freely to every stain. Do not rinse out, and when the articles return from the laundry you will find them as spotless as when new.

The Ranchman's Love.

"The Ranchman's Love," a beautiful, pathetic and dramatic story, is the title of the grand moving picture show at the Bijou theatre tonight.

CHAPTER IX.

The Agent of the Fireless Stove.

The time was two hours later. Rupert Winter was sitting on one of the stone benches of the colonnade about the patio. The court was suffused with the golden glow presaging sunset. Warm afternoon shadows lay along the flags; waving silhouettes of leafage or plant; blurred reflections from the bold bas-reliefs of Spanish warriors and Spanish priests sculptured between the spandrels of the arches. Winter's dull eyes hardly noted them; the exotic luxuriance of foliage, the Spanish armor and Spanish cowls were all too common to a denizen of a Spanish colony in the tropics, to distract his thoughts from his own ugly problem. He had been having it out with himself, as he phrased it. And there had been moments during those two hours, when he had ground his teeth and clenched his fists because of the futile and furious pain in him.

When he recognized Janet Smith, by that same illuminating flash he recognized that this woman who had been tricking him was the woman that he loved. He believed that he had said his last word to love, but love, after seeming to accept the curt dismissal, was lightly riding his heart again. "Fooled a second time," he thought with inexpressible bitterness, recalling his unhappy married life and the pretty, weak creature who had caused him such humiliation. Yet with her, there had been no real wrongdoing, only absolute lack of discretion and a childish craving for gayety and adulation. Poor child! what a woeful ending for it all! The baby, the little boy who was their only living child, to die of a sudden access of an apparently trifling attack of croup, while the mother was dancing at a post ball! He was east, taking his examination for promotion. The frantic drive home in the chill of the dawn had given her a cold which her shock and grief left her no strength to resist—she was always a frail little creature, poor butterfly!—and she followed her baby inside of a month. Had she lived, her husband might have found it hard to forgive her, for already a sore heart was turning to the child for comfort; but she was dead, and he did not let his thoughts misuse her memory. Now—here was another, so different, but just as false. Then, he brought himself up with a jerk; he would be fair; he would look at things as they were; many a man had been fooled by the dummy. He would not jump at conclusions because they were cruel, any more than he would because they were kind. There was such a thing, he knew well, as credulous suspicion; it did more harm than credulous trust. Meanwhile, he had his detail. He was to find Archie; therefore, he waited. They were in the house; it were only folly to give up their advantage under the stress of any of Mercer's plausible lurings to the outside.

Moreover, by degrees, he became convinced that Mercer, certainly to some extent, was sincere in his profession of belief in Archie's absence and safety. This, in spite of hearing several times that Archie was not returned. Mercer did all the speaking, but he allowed Birdsall to hold the receiver and take the message from Mrs. Winter.

The telephone was in an adjoining room, but by shifting his position a number of times the colonel was able to catch a murmur of the conversation. He heard Mercer's voice distinctly. He had turned away and was following the detective out of the room. "I don't understand it any more than you do, Mr. Birdsall," he said; "you won't believe me, suh, but I am right worried."

"Of course I believe you," purred the detective, so softly that the colonel knew he did not believe any more than Mercer suspected. "Of course, I believe you; but I don't know what to do. It ain't on the map. I guess it's up to you to throw a little light. I've called the boys off twice already and told 'em to wait an hour or a half-hour longer. I got to see the colonel."

"I can trust my intuitions, or I can trust the circumstantial evidence," thought the colonel. He jumped up and began to pace the court.

"Seems to be like a game of bridge before one can see the dummy," he complained; and, as so often happens in the crises of life, a trivial illustration struck a wavering mind with the force of an argument. His thoughts reverted whimsically to the card-table; how many times had he hesitated over the first lead between evenly balanced suits of four; and how often had he regretted or won, depending solely upon whether his card instinct had been denied or obeyed! It might be instinct, this much-discussed "card instinct," or it might be a summing up of logical deductions so swift that the obscure steps were lost and the reasoner was unconscious of his own logical processes. "Now," groaned Rupert Winter, "I am up against it. She looks like a good woman; she seems like a good woman; but I have only my impressions and Aunt Rebecca's against the apparent facts in the case. Well, Aunt Rebecca is a shrewd one!" He sat down and thought harder. Finally he rose, smiling. He had threshed out his problem; and his conclusion, inaudibly but very distinctly uttered to himself, was: "Me for my own impressions! If that girl is in with this gang, either what they are after isn't so bad—or they have made her believe it isn't bad."

He looked idly about him at the arched doorway of the outer court. It was carved with a favorite mission design of eight-pointed flowers with vase-like fluting below. There was a tiny crack in one of the flowers, the tiniest crack in the world. He looked at it without seeing it, or seeing it with only the outer half of his senses, but—he could not have told how—into his effort to pierce his own tangle there crept a sudden interest, a sudden keenness of scrutiny of this minute, insignificant crack in the stone. He became aware that the crack was singularly regular, preserving the form of the flower and the fluting beneath. Kito, the Japanese, who was sitting at the far end of the court, conversing in amity with Haley, just here rose and came to this particular pillar. The Irishman sat alone, rimmed by the sunset gold, little spangles of motes drifting about him; for the merest second Winter's glance lingered on him ere it went to the Jap, who passed him, courteously saluting.

"Yes, Suh, I Got Your Aunt Herself," Responded Mercer.

After he had passed, the colonel looked again at the column and the crack—it was not there.

"Chito, chito!" muttered the colonel. Carelessly he approached the column and took the same posture as the Jap. Unobtrusively his fingers strayed over the stone. He scratched the surface; not stone, but cement. He tapped cautiously, keeping his hand well hidden by his body; no hollow sound rewarded him; but all at once his groping fingers touched a little round object under the bold point of an eight-pointed flower. He didn't dare press on it; instead he resumed his cautious tapping. He glanced about him. Save for Haley he was alone in the patio. He pressed on the round white knob, and what he had half expected happened: A segment of the column swung on inner hinges, disclosing the hollow center of the engaged columns on either side. He looked down. Nothing but darkness was visible, but while he stood, tensely holding his breath, his abnormally sensitive auricular nerve caught distinctly the staccato breath of that kind of sigh which is like a groan, and a voice said more wearily than angrily: "Oh, damn it all!"

Almost simultaneously, he heard the faint footfalls of the men within; he must replace his movable flower. The column was intact, and he was bending his frowning brows on the stylobate of another when Birdsall and Mercer entered together, Mercer, with a shrug of his shoulders at the detective's dogged suspicion, preceding the latter.

"Well," said the colonel, "did you get my aunt?"

"Yes, suh, I got your aunt herself," responded Mercer, with his Virginian survival of the formal civility of an earlier generation. "Yes suh; but I regret to say Archie is not there."

"Where is he?" The soldier's voice was curt.

"Honestly," declared Mercer, "I wish I knew, suh, I certainly do. But—" Mercer's jaw fell; he turned sharply at the soft whir of an electric stanhope gently entering the patio through the great arched gateway. It stopped abreast of the group, and its only occupant, a handsome young man, jumped nimbly out of the vehicle. He greeted them with a polite removal of his cap, a bow, and a flashing smile which made the circuit of the beholders. Birdsall and the colonel recognized the traveling enthusiast of the Fireless Stove.

The colonel took matters into his own hands.

"I think you're the young gentleman who took my nephew away," said he. "Will you kindly tell us where he is?"

"And don't get giddy, young gentleman," Birdsall chimed in, "because we know perfectly well that you are not the agent of the Peerless Fireless Stove."

"I've got one here on trial, and I've come back to see if they like it," explained the young man, in silken accents, but with a dancing gleam of the eyes.

"We are going to keep it," said Mercer. "Kito," calling the unseen Jap, "fetch that Fireless Stove this gentleman left us, and show it to this gentleman here."

"Oh, cut it out!" Birdsall waved him off. "It's only ten minutes before our fellows will come. You can put the police court wise with all that. Try it on them; it don't go with us."

"Where is the boy?" said the colonel.

"Tell him, if you know," said Mercer. "This gentleman," he explained, "left a stove with us to test. He was here about it this morning, and we gave Archie to him to take to the Palace hotel."

"And he is there now," said the young man.

"Did you leave him there?" asked the colonel.

"Yes, did you?" insisted Mercer.

The young man looked from Mercer to the other two men. There was no visible appeal to the southerner, but Winter felt sure of two things: One, that the new-comer was Mercer's confederate whom he was striving to shield by pretending to disavow; the other, that for some reason Mercer was as anxious for the answer as were they.

"Why-y," hesitated the stove promoter, "you see, Mr.—ah, gentlemen, you see, I was told to take the boy to the Palace hotel, and I set out to do it. We weren't going at more than an eight-mile-an-hour clip, yet some foozler of a cop arrested us for speeding. It was perfectly ridiculous, and I tried to shake him, but it was no use. They carried us off to a police court and stuck me for ten dollars. Meanwhile my machine and my passenger were outside. When I got outside I couldn't find them. I skirmished around, and finally did get the machine. I'd taken the precaution to fix it so it couldn't be run before I left it—took the key out, you know—it must have been trundled off by hand somewhere!—but I couldn't find the boy. Naturally, I was a bit worried; but after I had looked up the force and the neighborhood, it occurred to me to 'phone to the Palace. I did, and I was told he was there."

"Who told you?" The question came simultaneously out of three throats.

"Why, Mrs. Winter—that's what she called herself."

"But not three minutes ago Mrs. Winter told me that he wasn't there," remarked Mercer, coldly. "When did you telephone?"

"It was at least 15 minutes ago," the young man said dolefully. "I say, wouldn't you better call them up again? There may be some explanation. I shouldn't have come back without the kid if I hadn't been sure he was safe."

"Was it Mrs. Melville or Mrs. Winter you got?" This came from the colonel. "Did she by chance have an English accent, or was it southern?"

"Oh, no, not southern," protested the young man. "Yes, I should say it was English—or trying to be."

"It would be exactly like Millicent," thought the colonel, wrathfully, "to try to fool the kidnapers, who had apparently lost Archie, by pretending he was at the hotel!"

He made no comment aloud, but he nodded assent to Mercer's proposal to telephone; and then he walked up to the stove man.

"The game is up," he said, quietly. "We have a lot of men waiting outside. If we signal, they will come any minute; if we don't signal, they will come in ten minutes. Give us a chance to be merciful to you. This is no kind of a scrape for your father's son—or for Arnold's."

Shot without range though it was, Winter was sure that it went home under all the young fellow's assumed bewilderment. He continued, looking kindly at him:

"You look now, I'll wager, about as you used to look in the office when you called on the dean—by invitation—and were wondering just where the inquiry was going to light!"

The dimple showed in the young man's cheek. "I admit," he replied, "that I didn't take advantage as I should of my university opportunities. Probably that is why I have to earn a strenuous livelihood boosting the Only Peerless Fireless Stove. By the way, have you ever seen the Fireless in action? Just the thing for the army! Fills a long-felt want. I should be very pleased to demonstrate. We have a stove here."

The colonel grinned responsively. "You do it very well," said he. "Can't you let me into the game?"

There was the slightest waver in the promoter's glance, although he smiled brilliantly as he answered: "I'll take it into consideration, but—will you excuse me? I want to speak to Mr. Mercer about the stove."

The moment he had removed his affable young presence Birdsall approached his employer. It had been a difficult quarter of an hour with the detective. Vague instinct warned him not to touch the subject of Miss Smith; he felt in no way assured about anything else. The result had been that he had fidgeted in silence. But the accumulated flood could no longer be held.

"I've found out one thing," exploded Birdsall, puffing in the haste of his utterance. "The boy is on the premises."

"Think so?" was all the colonel's answer.

"I'm sure of it. Say, I overheard Mercer talking down a speaking-tube."

"What did he say?"

"Talked French, damn him! But say, what's gorge?"

"Throat."

"What's cupillo gorge?"

"Sure he wasn't talking of a carriage, or did he say je le couperai la gorge?"

"Maybe—I wouldn't swear to it. I don't parles francais a little bit."

"Did you hear any other noises? Where were they?"

Birdsall thought he had heard other noises, and that they were down cellar. "And, anyhow, colonel, I'm dead-to-rights sure those guys are giving us hot stuff to get us out of the house. I'm for getting our men in now and rushing the house. It's me for the cellar."

While the colonel was rolling Birdsall's information around in his mind, he heard the echo of steps on the flagging which preceded Mercer and the other man.

There was that in the bearing and the look of them that made the watcher, used to the signs of decision on men's faces, instantly sure that their whole course of plans and action was changed.

Mercer spoke first and in a low tone to the colonel.

"I have no right," said he, "to ask so much trust from you, but will you trust me enough to step aside with this young man and me for a moment only—out of earshot? I give you my word of honor I mean no slightest harm to you. I want to be frank. I will go alone if you desire."

The colonel eyed him intently for the briefest space. "I'll trust you," said he. Then: "I think you have the key to this queer mix-up. At your service. And let your friend come, too. He is an ingenuous sort, and he amuses me."

Birdsall looked distinctly sullen over the request to wait, intimating quite frankly that his employer was walking into a trap. "I won't stand here more than 15 minutes," he grumbled. "I've given those fellows poco tiente long enough." But the colonel insisted on 20 minutes, and reluctantly Birdsall acquiesced.

Mercer conducted the others to the library. When they were seated he began in his composed, melancholy fashion:

"I earnestly beg of you to listen to me, and to believe me, for your nephew's sake. It is the only way now. When you came, we handed him over to this gentleman, exactly as we have said. I do not know why he should have been stopped. I do not know why he left the machine—"

"Might he not have been carried away?" said Winter.

"He might; but I don't know what motive—"

"What motive had you? You kidnaped him!"

"Not exactly. We had no intention of harming him. He came accidentally into the room between Mrs. Winter's and Mr. Keatcham's suites. Standing in that room, trying to stanch the bleeding of a sudden hemorrhage of the nose, he overheard me and my friend—"

"You?" asked the colonel, laconically, of the young Harvard man.

"I," snuffingly confessed the latter. "I am ready to own up. You are a decent fellow, and you are shrewd. You ought to be on our side, not fighting us. I tell you, you don't want to have the boy turn up safe and sound any more than I do." Mr. Mercer was talking to me, and the kid overheard. We heard him and went into the room—"

"How."

"Knocked on the door and he opened it. And we jumped on him. It was life and death for us not to be blown on; so, as we didn't wish to kill the kid, and as we didn't know the youngster well enough to trust him then—although we might, for he is game and the whitest chap!—but we didn't know—why, we just told him he would have to stay with us a while until our rush was over. That was all we meant; and we let him 'phone you."

"How about his great-aunt—the cruel anxiety—"

"Anxiety nothing!" began the other man, but a glance from Mercer cut him short.

The southerner took the word in his slow, gentle voice. "I tried to reassure our aunt, Col. Winter. I think I succeeded. She telephoned and I told her it was all right. As for Archie, after we talked with him, he was willing enough to go. He stole out with my friend inside of five minutes, while you all were searching your rooms. It was he insisted on calling you up, lest you should be worried. He said you were right afraid of kidnapers, and you would be sending the police after us. You can call Mrs. Winter up and find out if I am not telling you the exact facts."

"Very well, I will," said Winter. They met the sullen detective at the door. Cary Mercer, with his mirthless smile, led the way. Mercer rang up the hotel for Winter, himself. To the colonel's vast relief Aunt Rebecca answered the call. "Est-ce que c'est vous-meme, mon neveu?" said she, dryly.

"Mais oui, ma tante. Why are you speaking so formally in foreign tongues? Is Millicent on deck?"

"In her room," came the answer, still in French. "Well, you have got us in a pretty mess. Where is my boy?"

"I only wish I knew! Tell me now, though, is Mercer's story straight?"

"Absolutely. You may trust him."

"What's his real game, then? The one he was afraid Archie would expose?"

"Ask him."

"But you are in it, aren't you?"

"Enough to ask that you abandon the chase—immediately! Unless you wish to ruin me!"

"You'll have to speak plainer. I've been kept in the dark as long as I can stand in this matter."

But before he could finish the sentence. "Pas ici, pas maintenant—c'est trop de peril," she cried, and she must have gone, for he could get no more from her. When he rang again, Randall responded:...

HELPFUL WORDS.

From a Plainfield Citizen.

Is your back lame and painful?

Does it ache especially after exertion?

Is there a soreness in the kidney region?

These symptoms indicate weak kidneys;

There is danger in delay.

Weak kidneys fast get weaker.

Give your trouble prompt attention.

Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly. They strengthen weak kidneys. Read this Plainfield testimony.

Mrs. Oliver Voorhees, 21 Stone street, Plainfield, N. J., says: "Mr. Voorhees publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills in 1905 and I am now glad to confirm all he said at that time. He suffered from attacks of backache for years and the trouble would not yield to any treatment. His whole body was often very lame and sore and he had quite a bit of trouble from the irregular action of the kidney secretions. Doan's Kidney Pills, which he procured at Randolph's Pharmacy helped him from the first and in a short time drove all symptoms of kidney complaint from his system. Since then he has never ceased praising this remedy."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

RECIPE FOR CARAMEL CAKE.

Complete with the Directions for the Sirup and Filling.

Beat one-half cup butter to a cream, add 1½ cups sugar, beaten yolks of 2 eggs, 1 cup water and 2 cups flour. Beat 5 minutes, add 1 teaspoon vanilla, 3 teaspoons caramel sirup, one-half cup flour. Beat again and then add 2 teaspoons baking powder and well-beaten whites of 2 eggs. Bake in two round layers in moderate oven.

Caramel Sirup.—One-half cup granulated sugar in sauce pan until it burns a dark brown. Have ready one-half cup boiling water. Remove sauce-pan, add water, stirring rapidly. Allow to boil until a thick sirup. Makes enough for three cakes.

Filling.—One cup sugar, one-half cup water. Boil until it hairs, then pour it into the beaten white of one egg, stirring it constantly while pouring. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla and 3 teaspoons of caramel sirup. I beat mine when all together with the egg-beater until quite cool, then spread it on the layers. Hope some one will try this, as it is a delicious cake.

The Home.

Buying olive oil by the gallon is one case of economy.

To cover the pan in which fish is cooking will make the flesh soft.

Serving but two vegetables at dinner is as fashionable as it is economical.

Cheap cuts of meat can be served palatably in stews and croquettes.

Perfumed olive oil, sprinkled on library shelves, will prevent mold on books.

After trimming, turn the wick of a lamp below the burner or the oil will ooze.

Mud stains can be removed from black cloth by rubbing them with a raw potato.

Dried lemon peel sprinkled over coals will destroy any disagreeable odor about the house.

To make luminous paint, mix a small quantity of calcium sulphide with ordinary white paint.

Paperhanger's paste is made by adding a teaspoonful of powdered alum to every pound of flour.

Stuffed Tomatoes, Italian Style.

Take one dozen or more tomatoes, not too ripe. Wash, but do not peal them. Cut one slice off top, so as to clean the inside, then to make the stuffing taken seven eggs and beat well, two cups of grated cheese, two sprigs chopped parsley, two sprigs of chopped thyme, a quarter loaf of stale bread; let stand in lukewarm water five minutes, then squeeze water out, a half cup of sausage meat, pepper and salt to taste. Mix the whole. Have your baking pan ready. Put tomatoes in, four or five in a row, and fill. On each tomato put a piece of butter. Grease pan with olive oil or butter. Have oven warm and let bake for an hour or more until done. Serve hot or cold, as preferred.

A Supper Salad.

A toothsome salad may be arranged of fruit and lettuce for a little supper after the theater or for any informal evening occasion.

Cups are made out of the heart of lettuce and in each is put sliced pears, apples, bananas and walnuts, covered with mayonnaise or French dressing.

It can be prepared beforehand and put into the refrigerator to chill. It should be served cold on dainty little plates. With it have sandwiches made of thin slices of graham bread covered with French dressing and boiled red Spanish peppers with celery chopped up and put under the peppers.

About Screens.

Screens are often made of cheap wood which easily warps and for this reason they should be kept in a dry place during the winter. They should be stood on end and not laid flat upon the floor. Sweep the screens free from dust and, with an old brush and a bucket of kerosene coat the wire and wood. This prevents rust and helps preserve the wood. Do not nestle the screens closely together so that the weight of small ones will bulge the wire of larger ones. A storm door can be made from the frame of an old screen door covered with oilcloth.

Cheese Entree.

To one pint of fresh cottage cheese add one-quarter cup each of broken walnut meat, candied cherries and pineapple, mix thoroughly, then take up nicely rounded spoonfuls of the mixture and place on leaves of crisp lettuce (one spoonful for each individual serving). Lastly cover with mayonnaise dressing and serve.

A Mexican Dish.

Into a baking dish put a layer of macaroni (after it has been thoroughly cooked in salted water), then a few spoonfuls of gravy, from roast beef; cover with tomato catsup, then another layer of macaroni, gravy and catsup, being sure to have catsup on top. Set in the oven to brown.

Lemon Water Ice.

Take the juice of four lemons, the grated rinds of two lemons, one orange, one pound of sugar and one quart of water. Put the water and sugar on to boil, then add the juice. When this comes to a boil set it aside until cold, then freeze it hard.

Tomato Butter.

I cooked the tomatoes, then ran them through a colander to extract the seeds. I then added sugar and spices to taste, cooked down rather thick and the result is delicious.

GOSSIP FROM THE ZOO.

The horned horse's wife has a gnu baby.

The tailor bird denies that he made the short pants the Esquimau dog's breath comes in.

The lyre bird indignantly resents the insinuation that she is related to the harpy eagle.

The mongoose's husband has served notice that he is not to be addressed as mongander, or he will fight.

The osprey in the aviary got hungry for fish the other day, and bit a chunk out of the basswood perch.

The fact is being commented upon that, although the prairie dog is a born gopher, he never goes near the lynx.

The new orang-outang is such a funny simian that there is much speculation as to whether his other name isn't Ford.

The folks at the snake house are talking of getting the jocular ape to give the rusty old Texas moccasin a monkey shine.

The jocular ape believes that the reason the giant anteater is so thin is that there are no giant ants here for him to eat.

The polar bear weeps when he thinks of the arctic whales and seals. He says they always did make him blubber, though.

The American eagle says it is a sad reflection for him when he thinks how bald he is, and remembers all the hare he has had.

The pert paroquet says the great horned owl is on the blink. But then the paroquet grew up in a land that is always bowery.

The sand-hill crane stuck his long beak through the wicket in the deer yard yesterday, and the elk said: "Hello, bill!"—Ed Mott, in Judge.

DYSPEPTIC PHILOSOPHY.

Spot cash isn't so scarce as spotless cash.

Money talks, but it never gives itself away.

The luck that seems to come easiest is hard luck.

Any man who can make money can make friends.

Love is blind, and self-love is positively incurable.

A man descends from his ancestors and still may rise above them.

The male flirt never asks a girl to marry him till he's sure she won't.

If every man has his price lots of them should be on the bargain counter.

When an old maid makes a goose of herself it merely proves that she is no chicken.

A man's enemies will unconsciously do more to boost him into prominence than his friends.

If we could see ourselves as others see us the spectacle would be a severe blow to our vanity.

Many a man doesn't do anything worth while because he thinks it isn't worth while.

If a man could only endure his own troubles as easily as he thinks he could endure other people's this would be a happier world.

BY OUR OWN OWL.

The best thing about hope is that it costs nothing.

Opportunities frequently come in inopportune times.

The average girl would rather marry well than happily.

A promise is something that is almost as easily made as broken.

Constant use will wear a thing out, even the constant using of friends.

Every young man should learn to say "No," especially in Leap year.

The man who can talk to himself while shaving doesn't miss the barber.

Some people count their chickens even before the eggs have been laid.

The man who is satisfied with "something just as good" is apt to be a failure.

The unexpected happens so frequently that the wonder is we don't learn to expect it.

In an argument a man may be as stubborn as a mule, only a mule argues with his feet.

On the sea of matrimony the man who marries a widow can only expect to be her second mate.

The square piano is old-fashioned, and it looks as though the square man was getting to be, also.

HER MAIDEN FEARS.

"George."

There was an anxiety—just a little of it—in the girl's tone.

"What is it, love?"

"I read something in the paper that alarmed me."

"What was it?"

"Niagara Falls are wearing away at the rate of more than 12 inches a year, and in the course of some hundreds of years will be gone entirely."

"What of that?"

"You know, it is such a delightful place at which to spend a honeymoon."

"Yes."

"I had set my heart on going there on our honeymoon."

"Y-e-e-s."

"We have been engaged four years now."

"About that length of time."

She laid her head on his shoulder and sobbed.

"In that time—boo-hoo—fully 50 inches of the falls have been worn away—boo-hoo—and I'm afraid they'll all be gone before—before—oh, dear, what am I saying?"

"Never mind, love," said George tenderly, as he kissed her cheeks. "Don't cry. We'll go before the falls are worn away. How would next September suit?"

"That will do nicely, sweetheart."

And she was happy again.—Royal Magazine.

Landlord—Oh, it may be coming from that direction, but it's the south wind. It's just coming back, you know.—Judge.

In the Future Skyscraper.

Something had gone wrong with the machinery in the basement and one of the elevators was stuck half way between the 157th and 158th floors.

FIGHTING DUST NUISANCE

Street Sprinkling too Expensive and Unsatisfactory City Fathers Hear.

DUST ABSORBER NECESSARY.

Street Commissioner Gavett Tells of His Experiments and Views in His Report.

City Engineer and Street Commissioner Andrew J. Gavatt, who has the reputation of being the best authority in his line of work in New Jersey, last night made his annual report to the Common Council. The features of this report follow:

"It is being realized all over the country that more efficient means must be devised to combat the dust nuisance, so greatly aggravated by the continually increasing number of automobiles. Street sprinkling with water is expensive and unsatisfactory, being effective for only a small part of the day; for the rest of the time the streets are either muddy or dusty.

"Three experiments have been made in Plainfield during the season, one by private owners and two by the city. In the first case roadbed oil was sprinkled on parts of West Eighth street, Plainfield avenue and Irving place, and proved efficient, for a while, in preventing dust and disintegration of the macadam.

"Asphaltoilene, prepared by the Good Roads Improvement Company, was spread on North avenue, also on Park avenue between Fourth and Seventh streets and south of Randolph road, and on short sections of other streets. This preparation is an excellent dust absorber, but becomes a greasy mud in wet weather, and is objected to on that account.

"Tarvia, was used on Park avenue between Seventh street and Randolph road, on Sycamore avenue, Grove street and South avenue west of Terrill road.

This preparation is cheaper than the others, is not a 'dust absorber,' but prevents the formation of dust to a considerable extent, and helps to preserve the macadam. If it is found that the Tarvia does not require renewing too often, and if the streets treated with it are regularly swept, it would probably be practicable to treat all the macadam streets with it and dispense with most of the water sprinkling.

After referring to the repair work done, the report says:

"Probably the most promising method of treating our macadam roads is by having one of the tar preparations incorporated with the upper two to four inches of the stone, then spreading a layer of clean, small stone, and rolling. Machines will soon be on sale in this country in which heated tar is forced by compressed air, in a fine spray, into the macadam, doing the work thoroughly and very economically.

"The street railway company pays one-third the cost of repairing streets where there is a single track, one-half for double track and the entire cost where the track alone is done, as on the last mentioned streets. The total amount paid by the company this year for removing snow and for repair work was $2,344.94.

On October 8, 1908, the permanent pave contractor was notified to repair the pavement, but neglected to do so, and the six months during which he was required to maintain and repair the pavement expired on December 5. The sum of $2,030.73 has been retained by the city to provide for repairs, and these should be made as soon as the weather will permit in the spring.

After setting forth what streets have been macadamized during the year, the statement is made that:

"There are 47.63 miles of macadam streets in the city, 0.78 mile of brick pavement, 0.07 mile of Hassam concrete pavement (alley) and 37 miles of unpaved streets, a total of 85½ miles.

Probably more notices to lay sidewalks have been served this year than ever before, and about the same proportion of property owners have complied with the notices. 35,000 linear feet of flagging, monolithic concrete and concrete slabs have been laid and 1,500 linear feet of curb.

Two hundred and twenty-five notices to relay sidewalks were served, mostly between Park and Plainfield avenues and Front and Ninth streets and have met with the most gratifying response, the result being that most of the walks in this section of the city are now in excellent condition. The need of iron instead of stone culvert covers was demonstrated recently, when a local dray, loaded with a granite column, broke over thirty dollars worth of cover stones in one afternoon. The broken stones

WILSON COUNCILMAN FOR UNEXPIRED TERM

As foretold in The Daily Press of yesterday, W. W. Wilson, of West Third street, the Fourth ward, was last night elected a member of the Common Council at large to succeed the late Harry B. Suydam. The action followed a suspension of the regular order of business immediately after the Common Council convened for the last time this year.

Councilman Frank De Witt Randolph nominated Mr. Wilson and there being no other candidate, he was elected, all the members voting aye. Mr. Wilson was then invited to take a seat in the Council chamber, but he did not take his regular seat, being unable to do so until sworn in to office. He will take the oath so as to meet with the body tomorrow night when the Common Council for 1909 gathers to organize for the coming year.

Mr. Wilson has been a resident of Plainfield for many years. He was formerly employed at the Pond Machine Tool Works, where he held a clerical position in the office. Later he engaged in the grocery business and has been successful, at the present time conducting three stores in the West End of the city. He is a man that is in close touch with city affairs and his friends predict that he will be a valuable member of the Common Council.

LITTLE ONES MERRY AT CHILDREN'S HOME

The annual Christmas festival at the Children's Home yesterday afternoon was a bright and happy one for all the little ones. There was a large Christmas tree handsomely decorated and illuminated and laden with gifts for all. The children, as usual, marched into the parlors, where the tree was placed and then followed the distribution of presents.

One friend sent enough pairs of mittens for every child, while another friend presented them all with handkerchiefs. In addition to the many useful articles, there were also toys and games of all kinds. Miss MacDonald's Sunday-school class at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, made scrap-books for every child and the class attended the festivities.

Added pleasures were the happy remarks made by Rev. Dr. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church, and selections by a Victor talking machine, loaned for the occasion by Mrs. A. N. Selter, a member of the board of managers of the Home. The members of the board were in charge of the affair.

Holiday Bridge Party.

A charming bridge party was given yesterday afternoon at the Park clubhouse by the Misses Van Deventer, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob K. Van Deventer, of Woodland avenue. There were sixteen tables grouped about the ball-room which was beautifully decorated with Christmas greens, red ribbons and bells. After the game, refreshments were served in the dining-room, Mrs. Jacob K. Van Deventer and Mrs. Augustus Van Deventer presiding at the table.

To Greet New Councilmen.

A New Year's reception to be given by William G. Debele tomorrow afternoon from 3 to 5, is in honor of the two new Councilmen, W. L. Smalley, Jr., and Julius J. Stahl, both of whom are to take the oath of office at noon. Mr. Debele has arranged the affair in order that everybody will have an opportunity to become acquainted with the new city fathers. It will be held in Debele hall on Chatham street and all men of the borough are invited.

Whist at Park Club.

A bridge whist party was given by Misses Marguerite and Frances Vandeventer at the Park Club yesterday afternoon. There were sixteen tables, about seventy people being present. Red and green decorations were used throughout the rooms. Miss Verna McCutcheon secured first prize and Miss Helen Brown, second.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, Jr., of this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ethel Murray, to William Barlow, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William Barlow, of North Plainfield.

Bijou Feature Film.

"The Story of the Donkey's Skin," in beautiful colors, will be the feature film at the Bijou theatre, today. It is especially pleasing to women and children.

—The famous White Label brand of canned vegetables is sold by Neuman Brothers. They quote a special price on all orders of a dozen or more cans.

WEDS ROSELLE PARK MAN

Miss Jeannette Gertrude Addis Becomes the Bride of Dwight Van Doren.

CEREMONY AT GRACE CHURCH.

Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the Rector, Officiates—Reception at Parents' Home Follows.

Miss Jeannette Gertrude Addis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Addis, of Orange place, and Dwight Van Doren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilvie L. Van Doren, of Roselle Park, were married this afternoon at Grace church, the Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector, officiating in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends from the New England States, Pennsylvania, New York, Brooklyn, Elizabeth, Roselle and this city.

The bride was attended by Miss May L. Pierson, of this city, and Miss Medora Barnes, of Elizabeth, as bridesmaids; Mrs. Howard C. Young, of Elizabeth, as matron, and Mrs. Clarence N. Mundy, of Boston, her only sister, as matron of honor, and Virginia Palmer Mundy, a niece, as flower girl. The best man was Harry Perwinkle, of Roselle Park, a cousin of the groom, and the ushers were Clarence N. Mundy, of Boston; Kenneth Stuart, of this city, and Howard C. Young, of Elizabeth.

The bride was gowned in white princess satin, empire, trimmed with duchesse lace and she wore a double tulle veil, fastened with a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies-of-the-valley. She wore a pearl necklace, the gift of the groom. The bridesmaids were gowned in marquisette silk, trimmed with princess lace and they carried shower bouquets of pink carnations. The matron was gowned in heliotrope chiffon volle over silk of the same shade, trimmed with princess lace and carried a bouquet of white carnations and heliotrope chiffon. The matron of honor's gown was exactly the same as that of the matron and all of the gowns were of the directoire style.

The bridesmaids wore wreaths of holly leaves, while the matron and matron of honor wore white aigrettes with gold ornaments. The flower girl was gowned in white accordeon plaited trimmed with pink net. She carried pink roses which she scattered along the aisle as the bridal party left the edifice.

William E. MacClymont, organist, was at the organ, and the processional was "Traumeri." The ushers led the way, followed by the flower girl, bridesmaids, matrons and matron of honor and the bride, accompanied by her father, who gave her in marriage. During the ceremony, the rendition was "O, Perfect Love," and as the party left the church, the wedding march from Mendelssohn was played. The decorations for the wedding about the chancel and altar were the work of the altar committee of the church.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Orange place, it being of dual importance, as the occasion marked the forty-second wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. William Addis, parents of the bride. The house was decorated with greens, palms, wisteria, cut flowers and narcissus. The decorations in the hall and dining-room comprised evergreens and Christmas bells.

The house was thronged with guests. The bride and groom were assisted in receiving by Mrs. William H. Addis, who was gowned in black spangled net and Mrs. Gilvie Van Doren, who wore a gown of London smoke, princess satin.

The gifts were numerous and of great value, and included a completely furnished house at Roselle Park, the gift of the groom to the bride and two $100 checks and a piano given to the bride by relatives, cut-glass, hand-painted china, silverware, etc.

After a trip of two weeks, the couple will reside in their new home at Roselle Park. The bride's going away gown was of broadcloth, a shade of brown, with hat to match.

Guests at St. Regis Luncheon.

Among the guests at a luncheon of eighteen covers given yesterday at the St. Regis Hotel, New York, by Mrs. Joseph S. Stout in honor of Misses Anna and Ruth Waldo, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Waldo, of West Eighth street, and this season's debutante, were the following from this city: Mrs Leonard Waldo, Misses Anna and Ruth Waldo, Louise Saunders, Ruth Van Vliet, Katharine Titus, Blanche Buttfield, Lizzie Budlong, Frederika Mead, Annie May Campbell, Lillian King and Dorothy Williams.

FAITH CHAPEL NO MORE

Temple Baptist Church Comes Into Existance with 106 as Its Membership.

REV. MR. MUSSON THE PASTOR.

Trustees and Deacons are Elected and Articles of Faith Are Adopted—Has Prosperous Start.

The members of Faith chapel met last night and completed the details of organization of an independent body which hereafter will be known as the Temple Baptist church. The new church starts with a membership of 106 and a Sunday-school membership of 206 and a property valued at $9,000, which is free and clear of debt.

The meeting was called to order by U. B. Crane, who was chosen moderator, and after a formal call was extended to Rev. J. W. Musson to become the pastor, and the same was accepted, the latter took charge of the meeting and the organization declared itself to be an independent one.

These trustees were then elected: Three years, L. W. Randolph, U. B. Crane, W. A. Conger; two years, Frank Stewart and Valentine Utzinger; one year, George Viebrock and Ira L. La Rue. These deacons were also elected: Five years, L. W. Randolph, U. B. Crane and Frank Stewart; three years, Edward Baker, Jr., and Christopher Utzinger. Frank Stewart was elected treasurer of the church.

Articles of faith and rules of order were adopted and a committee of which Rev. J. W. Musson is the chairman, was appointed to arrange for public recognition services to be held early in the new year. Isaac Alexander was also appointed sexton of the church for a term of one year.

SAUNDERS TOASTMASTER FOR MERCHANTS' BANQUET

Arrangements for the first annual banquet of the Plainfield Merchants' Association to be held at the Hartridge School auditorium, Tuesday night, January 19, are complete. The toastmaster will be William L. Saunders and the principal speakers of the evening will be Marcus M. Marks, of New York, who is president of the National Clothiers' Association, and Peter Francis Daly, of New Brunswick.

The following have consented to respond to toasts: Maryor Charles J. Fisk, of this city; Mayor Samuel Townsend, of North Plainfield; Rev. George A. Warner, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross; Rev. Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, and James E. Martine.

The committee in charge of the banquet is making every effort to have it one of the best of the kind held in Plainfield. City Judge William N. Runyon is in charge of the musical program which will be one of the features of the evening.

Juniors Reception to Pastor.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church, not being at all slow, gave a social and reception to their pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, in the Sunday school room of the church, yesterday afternoon. The first part of the affair was devoted to devotional exercises and during the social hour, Mr. Broek made an interesting address, which held the close attention of everyone present. Refreshments were served by the boys of the society.

Juniors Xmas Party.

The Junior department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school held its annual Christmas party in the church yesterday afternoon under the direction of the superintendent, Mrs. Harold Serrell. The afternoon was spent in playing games of all kinds. The visitors were made happy and shared in the distribution of gifts, everyone being remembered not only with a present, but refreshments as well.

Boys' Work on Display.

There will be an exhibition of work in burnt wood by the Y. M. C. A. boys' department tomorrow afternoon in the association rooms, under the supervision of Charles B. Batchelor. The public in invited.

Big Week at Proctor's.

This is a big week at the Proctor theatre. Every afternoon and evening the popular play house is crowded. The new pictures are much admired and the new illustrated songs call for much applause.

A service will be held in St. Peter's Lutheran church tonight at 7 o'clock.

CITY FATHERS, '08, FINAS

Report of All Departments Received by the Retiring Municipal Government.

MUCH WORK IS ACCOMPLISHED.

Little Routine Business Transacted—To Publish the Treasurer's Report—Year's Business Considered.

The final meeting for the year of the 1908 Common Council was held last night, following an inspection of the new police headquarters' building at East Fourth and Sycamore streets at 7:30 o'clock. The members were much pleased with the structure and its general arrangement, and while it is not completely furnished, believe that it will meet every requirement of the police department for years to come. While the building has not been officially accepted, the department has practically taken possession and is using it.

There was little business to be considered at the last meeting of the year, as most of it was disposed of at previous sessions in the month. Building Inspector Doane reported that he had granted 26 permits during December and a total of 285 for the year.

The report of Treasurer Andrew Jennings of the Firemen's Pension fund for the past six months, showed receipts from all sources with balance of $4,927.09 and a balance of $4,793.37.

The annual reports of the city treasurer, city engineer, chief of police, chief of the fire department, shade tree commission and city physician were all received and filed, according to the usual custom. A digest of a majority of these reports will be found in another prat of The Daily Press.

Mr. Buxton reported back the petition of J. Francis Cahill, of Newark, in reference to the sale of land in Plainfield for taxes, together with an opinion of Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, and on the advice of the latter a check for $100 sent to Tax Collector W. R. Townsend was ordered returned and Mr. Cahill will be informed that he must seek and adjustment of his taxes separately and not collectively on property owned in this city by him.

Only a portion of the report of the alms committee was read, that part which referred to the many improvements made at the Industrial Home and the fact that the sewage farm had been put out on share during the year an enumerated the variety of vegetables an fruits as well as the quantity received by the Home as its share. The report also called attention to the loss the committee sustained in the death of H. B. Suydam, as chairman of the committee.

The report of Dr. C. B. Lufburrow, city physician, showed that he had made 87 visits to the Industrial Home during the year, that there were seven deaths in the Home and eight outside of persons under the jurisdiction of the overseer of the poor, six persons were committed to the New Jersey State Hospital and seven to Muhlenberg Hospital, while the city physician had made 185 visits to all parts of the city and 71 to police headquarters in his official capacity.

Upon motion of Mr. Buxton of the finance committee, the report of the city treasurer was received and ordered published in the Plainfield newspapers according to law. Mr. Buxton presented a committee report which was based on that of Treasurer W. F. Arnold. After the business was concluded the minutes of the meeting were read and approved and adjournment taken.

Plainfielders Going Abroad.

Among the Plainfielders who will leave on the Caronia, of the Cunard Line, on January 7, for extended trips abroad, are Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies, who will be accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Howard Wright, of New York; Miss Lucy Otterson, Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bowers and Mrs. Frank B. Bostwick, son and maid. Mrs. Bostwick, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Eoff, of Crescent avenue, has been spending the past three months here with her son, and she returns to her home at Gibraltar, where her husband, Dr. Bostwick is a practicing dentist.

Runaway Has Clear Track.

A horse belonging to William Dunham ran out Somerset street last night, starting at Craig place, where Miss Sisson, a maid employed by the family, was thrown as she tried to jump out, and suffered some slight bruises. No one was able to stop the animal until it had reached the trolley car terminus where Grover Schuck succeeded in bringing it to a halt. No material damage was done.

FANWOOD MAN IS TO SECURE DIVORCE DECREE

John C. Radin, of Fanwood, who sometime ago filed a petition for divorce from his wife, is now entitled to a final decree under the new practice and as soon as it is signed by Chancellor Pitney he will be freed from his matrimonial bonds. The report of the special master, John H. Van Winkle, who took testimony in the matter, was filed some time ago and a decree nisi was entered on June 15, 1908. Under the new practice Radin would be entitled to his final decree on December 15, but because of the absence of Chancellor Pitney, who must sign all decrees, he has not received it.

Radin married Viola May Pack, of Fanwood, on August 12, 1901, the ceremony being performed by Rev. George A. Francis, of the Westfield Baptist church. The groom was twenty-seven years old and the bride sixteen. In his petition for divorce, Radin alleged that his wife deserted him and that she committed a statutory offense with Joseph Gallagher. The defendant's mother substantiated his allegation and the special master stated that he was convinced of her guilt.

The report of the special master advises that the chancellor award the custody of the couple's five-year-old child to Radin.

EXECUTOR FILES BILLS TO FORECLOSE MORTGAGES

Counsellor John H. Van Winkle, as surviving executor of the estate of Catherine Webster, has filed a bill in the Court of Chancery, at Trenton, to foreclose a mortgage on property belonging to John E. Keeley, of this city. Van Winkle alleges the mortgage is past due and unpaid. Others having an interest in the property, which is in two pieces located on East Seventh street and Kensington avenue, are the City National Bank of Plainfield and Julia V. Keeley.

Mr. Keeley is a coal dealer and has been more or less prominent in local politics for several years.

Counsellor Van Winkle has also filed a bill to foreclose a mortgage held by the same estate on property on Park avenue formerly owned by Charles C. Brower. The bill shows that the principal of $3,000 is due and unpaid.

Niblo Makes Emphatic "Hit."

Fred Niblo, the humorist-traveler, made a decided and emphatic hit at the New Plainfield theatre, last night, when he presented the first of his travel talks, "Africa, from the Cape to Cairo." Those who braved the weather to hear him were more than repaid as his descriptions and explanatioins are a decided treat. Many seat reservations were immediately made for the remainder of Mr. Niblo's talks which are to be given on four succeeding Wednesday nights. The next one will be "Egypt, from Cairo to Khartoum." All are illustrated with beautiful colored views and motion pictures.

Miss Cora Rosling Howlett.

The funeral service of Miss Cora Rosling Howlett, daughter of the late Rev. T. Rosling Howlett, a former resident of this city, and a Baptist clergyman, was held this afternoon from the home of a relative in Piermont avenue, Brooklyn. Miss Howlett died on Monday at Leonia, where she had been living for several years. Death was due to heart trouble. She lived in this city when a girl and there are many persons here who will remember her. She was a cousin of Miss May E. Howlett, of Elmwood place.

Injured at Xmas Festival.

During the Christmas entertainment at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, Tuesday night, several boys tripped and fell over a rope that was stretched across the sidewalk and were severely bruised. John Bishop, a boy employed at the Courner-News office, was among the unfortunates and his face was badly lacerated. Medical assistance was necessary to remove the dirt from the cuts and scratches, after which the boy was sent home.

Alaska in Moving Pictures.

The second of the Y. M. C. A. star course entertainments will be held tomorrow night in the association auditorium. The attraction is Lurrick Lincoln in his pictorial travelogue, "Alaska, Land of the Midnight Sun," with moving pictures. It is one of the most important of the star course series. Seats are on sale at Hodge's, at 25 and 50 cents.

Will Receive Their Friends.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Zelie will be "at home" at the parsonage, 813 Park avenue, tomorrow afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock where they will be pleased to see their friends.

WORK OF RELIEF STARTS

New Jersey Red Cross to do Its Share in Aiding the Stricken Italian Cities.

DAILY PRESS FUND BEGUN.

First Contribution Received From Union's State Senator— Governor Fort to Make Appeal.

Governor J. Franklin Fort is expected to appeal to the people of New Jersey to day to help the stricken people of Southern Italy, the scene of one of the greatest catastrophes in the world's history. The terrible earthquake cost the lives of 250,000 and destroyed untold millions in property. According to cable messages the situation is indescribable.

In all countries and particularly in America the appeal for help is meeting with quick response. The American Red Cross is taking the lead in the relief work. Acting independently the Governors of many States and the mayors of countless cities have made the calamity a subject of special messages to their constituents.

As chairman of the Red Cross of New Jersey, Hamilton F. Kean has sent this telegram to Governor Fort, who is president of the organization:

"In view of the terrible disaster which has happened to the people of Southern Italy, and the proposed appeal for funds to be sent out by President Taft of the Red Cross of the United States, in behalf of the Executive Committee of the Red Cross of New Jersey, I ask whether you will not designate banks in the principal cities where funds may be deposited and request the newspapers to open subscription lists for the sufferers. These funds should be sent to Daniel S. Voorhees, treasurer of the Red Cross of New Jersey."

Following its custom to receive funds for all worthy causes, local or otherwise, and without waiting for the Governor to act, The Daily Press invites contributions for these stricken people. Through this paper, the people of Plainfield subscribed approximately $2,000 to the San Francisco earthquake sufferers and they have always been most liberal when appealed to in other deserving works.

It is with much pleasure that a check for this object, from Ernest R. Ackerman, is acknowledged. He has given generously to every fund previously raised by this paper, and we are proud to announce that he heads this subscription with a contribution of twenty dollars.

Ernest R. Ackerman.....$20.00

Contributions sent to The Daily Press will be promptly acknowledged and placed in the bank until a goodly fund is obtained, when the total amount will be transmitted through the New Jersey Red Cross.

Will Celebrate Anniversary.

The watch night services at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, tonight, will be of special interest for it was twelve years ago that the church was instituted with a membership of 150. It now has 300 members on the roll, over sixty of whom have been added during the past year. A watch night service commencing with a social hour at 9:30 o'clock and closing with a consecration service at midnight will celebrate the twelve years' occasion for thanksgiving.

Only One Contested Case.

There was only one contested case in the District court, this morning, that of Charles H. Schub against the Laing Machine Auto Repair Company, in which the plaintiff sought to recover an amount claimed due on a bill. The defendant filed an offset, claiming that some of the goods charged for were damaged. Judge Newcorn reserved his decision, but soon afterward the contesting parties got together and settled the claim to he saisfaction of all concerned.

In Financee's Honor.

William J. Firstbrook, of Grant avenne, gave a reception at his home, last night, in honor of his financee, Miss Edna Kelley, of Newark. Thirty friends were in attendance and the hours until shortly after midnight were enjoyed with dancing and other diversions.

$500 For New Church.

An anonymous contributor last night presented Westminster Hope chapel at Elizabeth with a gold certificate for $500, which will be added to a fund to be used for the erection of a new church, ground for which has already been purchased.

Watch Night Service.

A watch night service will be held at Hope chapel tonight, beginning at 10:30. Several good speakers will be in attendance.

JOLT FOR MOTHERS-IN-LAW.

She is Secondary to Wife in Latter's Home, Vice-Chancellor Holds.

A wife does not have to play second fiddle to her mother-in-law in her own home in New Jersey, according to the decision of Vice-Chancellor Stevenson, handed down yesterday in Jersey City. Mrs. Elizabeth Kerry, of Delford, Bergen County, a farmer's wife, sued for separate maintenance, alleging that her husband's mother had assumed the management of the home with the approval of her son, and that the wife had to do chores, including the care of pigs.

The Vice-Chancellor gave an alternative decision, which allows Kerry to oust his mother or pay alimony to his wife, the sum to be fixed when Kerry elects which course to pursue. The Vice-Chancellor ruled as follows:

Our statutes require a man to maintain a home for his wife. This man's mother persisted in making her home with him at the wife's objection. Therefore the court will make an order for proper alimony for the injured wife. This order may be changed at any time that the husband desires to maintain his wife in his home instead of his mother.

HELD UP IN THE TOWN JAIL.

George Burr, who said he was walking from Philadelphia to New York on a wager, applied at the local lock-up at Perth Amboy last night for permission to rest a few hours, and when he wanted to leave at midnight to resume his journey Sergt. Mulligan refused to let him go. A rule of the lock-up is that lodgers, once they enter, are not to leave until morning, and despite Burr's pleadings he was detained until 6 o'clock this morning.

Burr said he was a student at the Drextel Institute.

Invited to the White House.

Mrs. Emily E. Williamson, president of the State Charities Aid Society, and probation officer of Union County, who recently resigned from the State Dependencies and Crimes Commission, has been invited by President Roosevelt to a conference on the care of dependent children to be held in Washington on January 25 and 26. The delegates will be received by Mr. Roosevelt at the White House on January 25, at 2:30 o'clock.

Riker Cultivates Osborne.

The tongues of politicians in Orange are wagging over the dinner given last night by Supreme Court Clerk William Riker, Jr., at the Essex County Country Club, for State Senator-elect Harry V. Osborne. Rumors are that it had political significance, inasmuch as a prominent Republican was showing honor to the Democratic victor over ex-Senator Colby. Mr. Riker and all his guests say it was merely a social affair.

Van Horn Estate a Million.

Friends of Amos H. Van Horn were surprised yesterday when his will was read at Newark and it was found that he had disposed of an estate worth $1,000,000. He gives $150,000 to Newark for three monuments in city parks in honor of soldiers, and to churches and charitable institutions sums ranging from $5,000 down.

ANNUAL REPORT OF FIRE CHIEF T. O. DOANE

Following is the substance of the annual report of Fire Chief T. O. Doane as submitted to the Common Council last night:

The greater part of the twenty-first annual report of Chief T. O. Doane of the fire department, presented to the Common Council, last night, is devoted to recommendations which he believes will tend to increase the efficiency of the department. He renews his recommendation that the old brick tower and the present partition be removed at No. 1 Engine House, the stalls changed and the sidewalk be replaced with cement. He says that the floor under the stalls are dangerous and should be repaired at once.

He reports that a portion of the floors at headquarters is in a bad condition and immediate repairs is recommended. He again asks that a heater be placed in No. 1 house to keep the water warm in the boiler, and again calls attention to the fact that a larger steamer is needed in the centre of the city and suggests that the present steamer be placed in the new house in the Netherwood section. While he says that he has been skeptical regarding an automobile apparatus he now thinks it would be wise for the city to purchase a combination engine and hose wagon automobile.

The chief also again calls attention to the necessity of having more hydrants on East Front street between Richmond street and Central avenue, and requests immediate action. The fire alarm wires about the city are reported to be the only overhead wires and the chief suggests that as soon as possible arrangements be made to place them underground.

Attention is also called to the need of a modern switchboard for the fire alarm system. The fact that there was a cross with overhead high tension wires once this year putting the entire system out of commission, is cited as sufficient reason for this change. The chief says that two of the department horses will have to be replaced during the year. One, old "Jim" at headquarters, who has served the city faithfully for a good many years, is now worn out and should be replaced at once to save the other horse of the team, which is a valuable one, he says.

Other recommendations include that four more men be installed at the present engine house, two in headquarters and one in each of the other houses. They are needed greatly during meal hours. The chief also asks for three thousand feet of new hose.

The report shows that there is now in the service 6,700 feet of hose, 700 feet of which is only in fair condition. There are fourteen horses in the department, all owned by the city. Every public school building is connected with the nearest fire-alarm box by an auxiliary box, placed in the main hall of each building. There are a total of forty-five fire-alarm boxes. There is about twenty-six miles of overhead wire; one twelve inch steam gong, four fifteen house gongs.

There were 123 alarms during the year—64 'phone alarms, 43 box alarms and 16 verbal or still alarms. The loss on building amounted to $19,406; and the insurance on buildings was $120,310; loss on contents, $12,752.76; insurance on contents, $120,310; total amount of insurance, $292,110; total amount of insurance collected, $31,548.76; total loss insured and uninsured, $32,156.76; value of property involved-buildings, $243,700; contents, $164,450.

The causes of the various fires follow:

Chimneys and defective flues, 29; woods and grass, 11; debris, 10; children and matches, 7; locomotive sparks, 6; automobiles, 6; stores, 5; smoke, 5; candles, 3; phosphorus, 3; incendiary, 3; lightning, 3; unknown, 3; gas jet, 2; heaters, 2; lamp, 2; gasolene, 2; matches, 1; Christmas decorations, 1; machinery, 1; gasolene stove, 1; rags, 1; out of city, 1; meat, 1; accidental, 1; meat, 1; tinners, 1; freight cars, 1; telephone poles, 1; back draught, 1; fire crackers, 1; trolley cars, 1; painters, 2; cigar, 1; ash pot, 1; false alarm, 1; compound, 1.

There are now placed and in use 341 hydrants, twenty-four of which are four-way, and 317 two-way hydrants. The water pressure throughout the city is about 75 pounds, except in the eastern section, where it is about thirty to sixty, with a probable average of forty pounds. At a test from a hydrant located at Belvidere and Berkeley avenues, through 250 feet of hose with 1⅛-inch smooth bore nozzle, given in the presence of the members of the Common Council last winter, a stream was thrown, which barely reached the cornice of a two story house.

PASTOR AT 19.

Rutgers Freshman Fills Pulpit at Long Branch.

Harry A. Relyea, of New Brunswick, who is a freshman in Drew Seminary, at Madison, has been appointed assistant pastor of the old First Methodist church at West Long Branch, at a substantial salary. He goes from Madison to West Long Branch every Friday and remains over Sunday, conducting the prayer service and assisting at the Sunday services. Seminary seniors are sometimes called for this work, but it is rare that a freshman gets such an appointment.

Mr. Relyea was graduated from the New Brunswick high school last year and while in school was often called to fill pulpits there and in nearby cities. He is a forceful pulpit orator for so young a man. He is only 19 years old and one of the youngest preachers in eMthodism in this country.

In spite of the fact that mounted policemen in Trenton have been put on duty in the neighborhood and that the yard is surrounded by electric lights and guarded by special watchmen, thieves have gotten away with 1,500 pounds of scrap rubber stock from the plant of the United and Glove Rubber Company, Trenton, within less than a week. No clue to the thieves can be found.

Happy New Year!

A thousand feet of hose, please.

As tomorrow will be a legal holiday, The Daily Press will not be issued.

On scanning over the city officials' reports, one is driven to the dictionary to learn the meaning of the word "vacation."

During the coming year let us agree not to worry. This applies as to the consolidation bugaboo and the annually promised municipal garbage disposal brainstorm.

W. W. Wilson is a plain every-day business man who has earned his share of success and has a reputation of his common sense. He should make a first-class councilman, and here's hoping that he will.

The White House batteries may now be directed at Winston Churchill, who has made himself liable to membership in the Ananias Club by naming his newest book "My African Journeys." Will there be a special message?

The Merchants' Association made a happy selection when it hit upon William L. Saunders as toastmaster for its banquet. There is none more witty nor entertaining than the genial and brilliant former executive of the borough in such capacity. To hear his introductions will be worth the price of a plate alone.

As has been its custom for many years in raising funds for charity and relief work, The Daily Press has started a fund for the survivors of the earthquake stricken Italian cities. Contributions sent to this office will be promptly acknowledged and transmitted to the proper authorities. Remember that you are hear his introductions alone will be worth the price of a plate.

A particular friend of ours who is a particular friend to a man who knows about things on the inside, says there is a lot of gumshoeing being done in an effort to place an outside man at the desk in police headquarters during the day. The why and wherefore of this is a mystery to the taxpayer who knows that the recognized departmental rules demand that the sergeant be the incumbent. Seems as if somebody is doing a lot of unnecessary work while the somnolent councilmanic police committee is taking things easy.

The taxpayer should "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the fine annual report of Street Commissioner and City Engineer Andrew J. Gavett, for it is to his own interest to do so. Among the many valuable suggestions made is one that a more modern method of dust laying than street sprinkling be adopted. The present method, as frequently pointed out in these columns, is declared to be both "expensive and unsatisfactory" and that is putting the condition mildly. Some such preparation as tarvia, aspholtoilene or road-bed oil would be a great improvement and as the commissioner records the results of his experiments, there should be no hesitation on the part of the city fathers in substituting tarvia, as he suggests, at the earliest possible date. Street sprinkling must be abandoned, for it is a useless waste of the taxpayers' money.

NEGRO CULPRIT SENT TO MORRIS PLAINS

Henry Schenck, the well-known Scotch Plains colored man who has been in the county jail since last summer under indictment for atrocious assult, has been declared insane and sent to the Morris Plains asylum. He has been a victim of epileptic fits for several years and his mental condition has suffered in consequence. He was employed by a Scotch Plains family for a long time as coachman.

The assault for which Schenck was indicted was committed early last summer while he was drunk. He became angered at John Reick and threw a piece of iiron at him but it missed the intended victim and struck James Hunter, breaking his collarbone. He was rendered unconscious by the blow and for a time was in a serious condition. Schenck's anger toward Reick was engendered by the latter's declaring that he would have the colored man arrested for some offense.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PUPILS HAVE YULETIDE FEASTS

Christmas festivities were held by the Sunday-schools of these congregations yesterday afternoon and last night:

Hope Chapel.

The main depar ment of the Hope chapel Sunday-school held its Christmas exercises last night. Moving pictures comprised the greater part of the entertainment and the views were greatly enjoyed. The films included the following: "Burying A Title," "The Midnight Ride of Paul Revere," "The Teddy Bears," "Aladdin's Wonderful Lamp," the Marathon race and the 1908 automobile races at Dieppe.

Superintendent G. Herbert Condict was in charge of the exercises and the school sang Christmas carols. Boxes of candy and oranges were distributed at the close.

In the afternoon the children of the primary department played games and were entertained by two Santa Clauses, impersonated by Carl Ulrich and Harry Fraleigh. The exercises were in charge of the primary school superintendent, Mrs. J. M. Ulrich, assisted by the teachers in the department. The attendance included the members of the beginners' class with Mrs. E. E. Williams and Mrs. George Whyte in charge. The gifts distributed included toys, games, dolls and books.

Grace M. E. Church.

The primary and cradle roll departments of Grace M. E. church Sunday-school enjoyed their Christmas entertainment yesterday afternoon. The little ones presented a program of recitations and sang carols, after which Santa Claus in the person of W. J. Conroy arrived and distributed gifts from a big tree. The exercises were in charge of Miss Bella Lunger and Miss Alice Carroll.

In the evening the senior and intermediate departments gave a Christmas sketch entitled, "Santa Claus' Partner." These characters were introduced:

Mr. Livingston, a prosperous business man, Benjamin Schuck; James his butler, Ray Miller; Mr. Clark bookkeeper for Livingston, Russell Harden; Mrs. Clark, Miss Ada VanHorn; Santa Claus' partner, Cora Hale; Dick Clark, Samuel Bodine; May Clark, May Winans; Helen Clark, Elva Jennings; Janette, Marie Jennings; Little Miss Nobody, Helen Nelson.

This was followed with memory pictures portrayed by Miss Grace Clark, Miss Nichols, Miss Edna Mantz, Harold Mantz, Albert Monk, Marie Jennings. Miss Mary G. Steiner coached the various ones for their parts. There was the usual distribution of candy, etc., to the members of the school and the exchange of gifts among teachers an the pupils.

Vaudeville Feature Pleases.

The vaudeville features added to the Park theatre have greatly increased the standard of the show. Last night Archie Cain, the funny musical mamn made his last appearance. Ed. Williams, a comedian, full of music, will be the attraction today. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be the New Year's Day feature film.

Granted a Patent.

William McIntosh, of North Plainfield, mechanical engineer of the New Jersey Central, has been granted patent for car underframes.

were replaced with iron as far as possible and it has been the policy of the committee to have all new culverts constructed with iron covers. The culverts crossed by street railway tracks have continued to give trouble and there will probably be no permanent improvement at these poin's until they are provided with storm sewers.

Most of the crosswalks put down this year and in 1907 were taken from the streets on which brick pavement was laid. No new storm sewers were constructed by the city this year. The long talked of extension of Kensington avenue to Park avenue has been advanced by the adoption and approval of the ordinance laying out and opening the street, leaving for next year the work of treating with the property owners, appointing commissioners and assessing damages and benefits.

Surveys and plans have been made for extending Johnston and Jackson avenues from North avenue, under the railroad to South avenue; as there is some question about the obligation of the railroad company to construct a bridge without expense to the city, the committee is not yet ready to make its final recomendation in the matter. A petition has been referred to this committee for widening Central avenue from West Front street to the railroad. As stated in the petition, there is now no street of respectable width without car tracks, between Richmond and Plainfield avenue, and it seems very desirable that this improvement should be made, providing that too great expense is not incurred by the city.

$2,500 was paid from the 1907 appropriation toward the city's proportion of the cost of macadamizing under contracts of 1906 and 1907, assessments for which were confirmed October 12, 1908. $2,943.01 is still due on this assessment, and another payment will be due early in 1909 for macadamizing done this year.

During the year 1908 two miles of sanitary sewers have been completed, including 0.69 mile constructed by private parties under city superintendence.

The total length of sanitary sewers is now 43.81 miles, nearly double the amount originally constructed in 1894-95. There are 395 manholes, 137 flush tanks and 12 direct flushing connections. The daily flow of sewage is 1,500,000 gallons and the total number of buildings connected with the sewers is 3,086, an increase of 264 during the year.

The pumping plant consists of displacement pumps, air compressors and electric motors, in duplicate, and a Fairbanks' gasolene engine for use in case of failure of electric current. A Cutler-Hammer starting and stopping device and float switch cause the automatic operation of the plant, which only requires attention two or three times a day. The plant was installed by the Ingersoll-Rand Co.

The property in this drainage area is now rapidly building up, the lack of sewers seeming to have been the only obstacle to the earlier improvement of this section.

The sewage disposal works have been operated under the direction of Hering & Fuller since July 1, 1908, and they have placed Mr. R. S. Lanphear in charge as day operator. The office building at the plant has been fitted up with laboratory equipment, permitting tests to be made showing the quality of the final effluent and the purification accomplished at the different stages of the process. These tests have been made nearly every day since the first of September.

CITY'S VAULT JIMMED.

The Elizabeth fire department and Chief of Police George C. Tenney were called upon yesterday by city officials who were unable to open a huge vault in the finance department of the City Hall in that place. Jimmies that had done service for burglars now languishing in prison were called into requisition by the amateur cracksmen, who at last succeeded in opening the vault. It was necessary for the firemen to climb to the top of the vault by means of ladders before they accomplished their task.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Pugh, who were recently married here, will leave Saturday for Seneca Falls, N. Y., where they will reside.

NEWS IN THE SUBURBS.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Township Committeeman George Harris, of East Bound Brook, visited the village yesterday to confer with Township Committeeman William Hamilton.

William Hamilton and William H. Manning, of this place, attended the meeting of the Middlesex County Board of Taxation yesterday.

The meeting of the Township Committee will be held tonight in Thornton's hall in New Market to wind up the year's business.

Midget, a handsome pony owned by Charles Brantingham, will be raffled off at a ball to be given tonight in Washington hall.

The meeting of the Good Government Club will be held tonight in the fire-house.

William Hamilton visited Newark on business Wednesday morning.

Mrs. P. J. McDonough visited friends in Plainfield today.

(Additional suburban news on page 2.)

TREE COMMISSION'S PLANS ARE UNFOLDED

Following are the salient features of the Tree Commission report:

"The commission undertook to spray all the street elms this summer. The time was short within which this spraying should have been done, and the leaves on some of the trees were rather ragged before the men reached them, but much good work was done, as was evident by comparing the sprayed trees with those near by on private grounds that had not been sprayed. It is planned to have two gangs of men spraying at once the coming year, so that the elms throughout the city can all be covered before the beetles have a chance to get a foothold. This can be done by getting one or two barrel hand-pumps for use on some of the smaller trees and using the prower pump for the larger ones. It is also hoped that the commission will be able to spray private trees at cost, which it was unable to do this year.

"The work for the coming year will be carried on along the same general lines at is has been this year, except that it is planned to take certain streets and blocks where the abutting property owners are willing to co-operate with the commission, and put the trees on these particular streets or blocks in as good a condition as possible, keeping a record of such work on maps on file in the office. In this way the whole city will finally be completely and systematically covered and it is believed that the educational effect of the work of the commission will be greater thereby. And this is perhaps not its last important work. It is also planned to do some planting of trees next spring on our streets where there are gaps that need filling up, and perhaps on some of the streets where trees have never been set out. The cost of this work, however, if carried out, would be charged against the abutting property owners and collected in much the same manner as in the case of curbing or flagging when done by the city."

Receipts—Appropriaition for general work, $2,200; appropriation for park, $300; received for wood, $204.29; received for trimming, removing and repairing trees, $37.46; received for spraying, $27; total, $2,768.75. The expenditures were the same.

GIVES SOUND ADVICE ON "HIGHER EDUCATION"

"Boys and girls in the public schools would be much better qualified to grapple with the modern problems that confront our citizens if they were given information about the prosecution of the San Francisco grafters and the Missouri boodlers instead of being taught the history of English Kings," declared Professor William McAndrew, principal of a New York school, in a talk against the so-called "higher education," before the New Jersey High School Teachers' Association at Atlantic City yesterday afternoon.

"Comparatively few high school students go to college, yet the high school of today is designed primarily to prepare the young folk for college. It is not strange, therefore, that so many children are taken out of high schools when their parents discover that the constantly increasing cost of this "higher education" is not fitting them for any useful occupation."

Professor McAndrew insisted that many children are in a state of "mental ataxia" as a sequence of the forced study saddled on all for the benefit of the few who expect later to enter college. Educators have come to regard the high school as a sort of experimental ground for pet fads and fancies where teachers who pose as specialists without even slight experience fill the child with antiquated theories of no practical value.

Superintendent Charles J. Baxter, head of the State Board of Public Instruction, and principal speaker before the teachers' association, defied the expressed desires of the 20,000 New Jersey farmers banded together in the State grange when he declared against the election of school boards by the people.

Members of the grange, at their recent meeting at Atlantic City, came out openly in favor of elective boards, with the plea that present appointment of school boards leaves the education of the children under the control of politicians, who use the places for the rewarding of their henchmen, while elective boards would be the direct servants of the people who elected them.

Opposing this stand, Prof. Baxter insisted that election of school boards would force the members to become petty politicians, with more regard toward re-election than the carrying out of their duties. "The school director would be forced to become a politician and vote-seeker to hold his job," said the head of the State School Board. "Where he is an appointive official, however, he has only to attend strictly to his business to convince the people of his worth and insure retention in his place."

The teachers applauded the statement of their superior that increased state appropriations had made it possible to increase the average pay of New Jersey teachers by $79.59 per annum. The speaker stated that the increase would insure a better grade of teachers and more general efficiency in the schools.

G. O. . Committee Organizes.

The committee of five appointed to re-organize the Republican County Committee of Middlesex met in New Brunswick last evening for the purpose of perfecting an organization. C. C. Baldwin, of Perth Amboy, was elected chairman and W. S. Frederick, of Dunellen, secretary. H. H. Banker, of New Brunswick; Edward Whitehead, of South River; Dr. E. E. Haines, of South Amboy, are the other members of the committee.

SHOPPING by TELEPHONE.

"Telephone your orders"

is a phrase found in the advertising of nearly all stores. Business establishments of all descriptions, large and small, advertise telephone connection as one of the important features of their service. These establishments appreciate the importance of catering to telephone shoppers.

Have you tried telephone shopping? Are you aware of the convenience and saving of time that this method of shopping effects?

Do you realize that a telephone order involves no street car trip or carriage ride, no crowds, no bad weather, and saves an hour or more?

You will soon be doing your holiday shopping. Why not employ your telephone for this purpose? You will save time, temper and energy.

'GLAD HAND' AT WORK AMONG CITY FATHERS

Prior to the final adjournment of the Common Council for 1908 last night, Mr. Buxton called attention to the fact that one member, H. D. Hibbard, was about to retire and he expressed regret that the body was to lose so valuable a member, one who was always "a jolly good fellow."

In reply Mr. Hibbard said that other members retiring from the Council were allowed to escape and he saw no reason why he should be expected to make a speech. He expressed his pleasure in being a member of the body and added that in retiring he left with the warmest feeling for every member.

As a colleague from the Second ward, Mr. Montgomery took occasion to make a few remarks. He said that he had served the city for three years and during that time had been much benefitted by his experience, while he had derived considerable pleasure from his associatioin with other members, especially Mr. Hibbard. He had not always agreed with Mr. Hibbard, but the differences were such as to pass away and all were working for one common end, the best interests of the city. He expressed his sincere regret over the retiremnt of Mr. Hibbard.

President Tolles thanked every member for the co-operation given during the year and he believed that every one could feel proud of the work accomplished. While all of the members had not agreed there had been a harmonious feeling. He, too, regretted the retirement of Mr. Hibbard, and expressed sorrow over the death of Mr. Suydam. In conclusion he thanked every member for the courteous treatment and support and expressed the hope that it would continue next year.

FORT FOR NEW KIND OF VOTING MACHINE

"I am unalterably opposed to using the voting machines, of which New Jersey now has 365, purchased at an expense of $182,500, but I am not opposed to a voting machine which shows the voter what he is doing and which is not so arranged that strict party voting must be resorted to by most men in order to vote at all," said Governor Fort yesterday afternoon to the newspaper men as he said that his message to the coming Legislature had been prepared, except for chapters on this question, on inland waterways and oysters.

The Governor said that he would not recommend the adoption of the sunset election law in his message, but favored avoiding the present slow method of getting returns by having an amendment to the election law making 600 votes the unit for an election district.

"With smaller districts," he said, "every voter would be given a chance to cast his ballot and it would take less time to complete the counts, and the actual results of the voting would be known earlier in the night after election day.

"I am not in favor of the party lever on voting machines nor the voting machines constructed as these in New Jersey are. The people have said they did not want them, and this is enough to abolish them. The people have abolished them."

The Governor said he favored a machine which had a button for each candidate, so that when it was pressed or pulled the voter would know from some kind of a shutter that he was voting for that man, and he alone, and that the vote was being registered for that man and for no other. He believed that the people would approve of such a machine.

LOCAL AMUSEMENTS

The producing manager who makes a strike with some production whether of the straight or musical kind, success which means the presentation of the piece for several successive seasons, ought in a spirit of gratitude at his good fortune to maintain the original high standard of his offering during the life time of the play. More often, however, unmindful of his good luck, and thinking only of false economy, he is apt to cheapen the production, engaging less expensive players for the various parts and staging the piece in inferior fashion. The reverse is true of Cohan & Harris who present George M. Cohan's very successful and unique "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" at the New Plainfield theatre tonight, with Scott Welch appearing as "Kid Burns" and Frances Gordon in the role of "Mary," the maid who lived at New Rochelle, just three-quarters of an hour distant by train from New York city. Not only does Mr. Welch and Miss Gordon measure artistically and vocally up to their predecessors, but the entire supporting company is of the very best quality. In this play the offering loses nothing at all through its age, but through the infusion of new blood gains materially thereby. Added to which is the fact that it is a piece which has been tried and found to be of unusual merit, its third year being conclusive proof of this.

George Broadhurst's new comedy, "An International Marriage," with Digby Bell in the leading role, will be the attraction at the New Plainfield theatre tomorrow night.

May Robson, who will be seen at the New Plainfield theatre next Saturday afternoon and night, is fortunate in securing for her first starring vehicle a comedy so interesting and unique as "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." In the role of "Aunt Mary" Miss Robson has a part that fits her like a glove. Those who see her will enjoy one of the theatrical treats of the season, and those who do not see her will miss a dramatic banquet. The play is as pure and refreshing as the ozone laden breeze that might blow across the meadow one sees through the window of Aunt Mary's "settin' room," and after seeing the play one leaves the theatre with a better feeling toward all mankind and a knowledge that one has spent an evening in a worthwhile manner while enjoying a hearty laugh.

Miss Annie Russell, who has always been America's most favorite actress in the roles of an emotional ingenue, will shortly make her appearance in this city. She will be seen in "The Stronger Sex," a comedy which has had a long run on both sides of the Atlantic. She has just closed a long season at Weber's theatre, New York, and takes her company for a brief tour of the principal cities. All the New York favorites will appear in the production here, which is set down for Tuesday, January 5, at the New Plainfield theatre.

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, of Watchung avenue, has returned from a week's visit at the Loomis sanitarium.

Miss Dorothy Tremaine and Miss Annette Gladwin, of Westfield, were among the guests at a luncheon of twenty covers given Tuesday by Miss Ruth Fairbairn, of Brooklyn.

STATE NEWS BRIEFLY TOLD

Daniel T. Sweeten, the leading merchant of Mt. Royal, is very ill in a Philadelphia hospital, after an operation for appendicitis.

At the Second Presbyterian church, Paterson, last night, the cantata, "A Christmas Pie," written by Rev. Charles D. Shaw, was presented.

Former Councilman Joel Leeds, who built the first city hall at Atlantic City, is dead, at his home, on North Iowa avenue. He was born in Port Republic.

John Tambleson, of Missouri, who returned to Cross Key, his native town, Monday, and did not recognize his own brother, had been away over thirty years.

William Johnson, twelve-year-old son of Frank Johnson, of Bordentown, while skating yesterday, fell and broke his left arm. A short time ago the boy broke the same arm in a football game.

Miss Etta Haun, of Akron, O., and Herman G. Taylor, of Salisbury, Md., were married Monday in the sun parlors of Pennington Seminary, by Rev. Dr. Frank Moore, president of the institution.

Falling overboard from a dredge at the foot of Spruce street, Camden, Frank Accome, thirty-two years old, was rescued by fellow-employes, but he was badly injured. He is in the Homeopathic Hospital.

Members of the Camden Excise Board, at the City Hall, last night, discussed the advisability of passing an ordinance closing saloons at midnight and prohibiting music in barrooms. No definite action was taken.

In the Cumberland county court yesterday Judge Tuller sentenced Joseph Sears, forgery, to one year in State Prison, and Edward Sands, carrying concealed weapon, an old offender, also got one year.

While Edward Glass, of Millville, was testing a knife which he received on Christmas, the instrument slipped and cut his eye so badly that today surgeons at a Philadelphia hospital found it necessary to remove the optic.

Wesley Warner was leaving a Pennsylvania Railroad train at Lambertville, yesterday, when the door slammed, shattering the heavy glass. A splinter entered the calf of his right leg, making an incision of five inches and severing several arteries.

Samuel B. Mickle was found dead in his armchair at his home in Mauricetown yesterday. Mr. Mickle was about seventy-five years old, and for many years he was the leading merchant of the town. His ancestors were the earliest settlers of the town.

Accused of non-support of his wife and four children, Walter Woodward, a druggist, was held in $300 bail in the Camden Police Court yesterday, for a further hearing. He pleaded that he could not give his family support because he had been out of employment.

A. E. Davies, a music dealer of Vineland, whose recreation is yachting on the Maurice River, found a pearl while eating oysters in Dennis Creek, near Dennisville, for which he has refused $500. It is pronounced the most beautiful of its kind ever found in the Maurice River oyster beds.

The Trenton Association for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis has received promises of support and co-operation from the Common Council and the Chamber of Commerce, and with a mass-meeting last night renewed its war on the "white plague." The principal object of the meeting was to take steps for using the municipal hospital for the treatment of tuberculosis patients.

John Schubert, sixty-two years old a silk worker in the Hamil Mill on Market street, Paterson, was attacked by a young man yesterday afternoon who kicked him in the side several times. Schubert applied for medical attention at the General Hospital. The man's body was contused and swollen. The physicians strapped the wounded portions and advised the patient to return in case complications ensued.

"BLACK HAND" BOY ON PROBATION TWO YEARS.

In the Union County Court of Quarter Sessions, yesterday, Judge Edward S. Atwater sentenced William R. Boyd, seventeen years old, of Elizabeth, who sent a "Black Hand" letter to Joseph McManus, an Elizabeth merchant, demanding $200 under a threat of blowing up himself and family if he did not send the money.

The judge said to the prisoner that he would not send him to the reformatory, but would turn him over to the probation officer for two years, with the understanding that for that period he was to be kept under restraint in some place where he would be unable to commit any further offense against the State. Many influential persons interceded with Judge Atwater, asking him to be lenient toward the boy for his family's sake, they being highly respected residents of Elizabeth.

THE LION'S SHARE

By OCTAVE THANET

Author of The Man of the Hour

PICTURES BY A. WEIL

(Copyright 1907, The Bobbs-Merrill Co.)

"Mrs. Winter says, sir, will you please come up here as quick as you can. She's gone out. She thought she caught sight of Mr. Archie on the street."

To the colonel's demand: "Where, how did she see him?" he obtained no answer, and on his vicious pealing of the bell there came, eventually, mellow Anglican accents, which asked: "Yes? Whom do you wish to see?" It is an evidence of the undisciplined nature of the sex that the soldier made a face and—hung up the receiver.

He found himself—although this to a really open mind is no excuse—in a muddle of conflicting impulses. He was on edge to get into the street for the search after the boy; he was clutched in a vise by his conviction that the clew to Archie's whereabouts lay in Mercer's hands, and that the southerner meant no harm to the lad. And all the while he could feel Birdsall tugging at the leash.

"It's on the cards," he grumbled, with a wry face, "quite on the cards that he may bolt in spite of me and do some foolish stunt of his own that will make a most awful muddle."

Not nearly so composed as he looked, therefore, he turned to Mercer. However, his ammunition was ready, and to Mercer's inquiry, was he satisfied? he replied, calmly: "Well, not entirely. If Archie isn't in the house, who is it whose throat you wish to cut? Who is hidden here?"

It could not have been an unexpected question or Mercer hardly had answered so readily: "You know who it is," said he. "It is Mr. Keatcham."

CHAPTER X.

The Smoldering Embers.

If Mercer's avowal surprised the colonel, there was no trace of such emotion in his face or his manner. "I rather thought it might be," he said. "And our young friend who is promoting fireless stoves with the solemn energy he learned doing Dicky stunts?"

"Mr. Endicott Tracy." Mercer had the manner of a ceremonious introduction. Tracy flavored the customary murmur of pleasure with his radiant smile.

"Pleased, I am sure," said the colonel in turn, bowing. "Your father, I suppose, is the president of the Midland; and Mr. Keatcham will, I suppose, not be able to prevent his reelection to-morrow. Is that the game?"

Mr. Tracy's son admitted that it might be.

"Ah, very clever," said the colonel, "very. Any side-show, for example?"

"I did not go into this for money." Mercer's level gaze did not relax, and he kept his dreary eyes unflinchingly on Winter's. A peculiar look in the eyes recalled some tragic and alien memory, just what, Rupert could not capture; it flitted hazily through his thoughts ere the next words drove it off. "Nevertheless, it is true that if we win out I shall have enough to pay back to all the people who trusted me the money they lost when they were frightened into selling their stock in the Tidewater, and your aunt and Mr. Tracy stand to make money."

"How do you expect to make it?"

"The M. & S. stock is away down because of rumors Keatcham is likely to control it. When it is settled it is not to be looted by him, the stock will rise—we are sure of the ten points; we may make 20—"

"And my aunt has financed your scheme, has she?—paid all your expenses?"

The Harvard man laughed out. "Our expenses? Oh, yes, she has grubstaked us, all right; but she has done a good deal more—she has furnished more than half a million to us for our gamble."

Mercer's Eyes Followed Him.

The colonel considered; then: "But why did you keep him here so long beforehand?" said he.

"It was not long beforehand," said Mercer. "The meeting was adjourned for a day—we don't know why—we fancy that his partners suspect something. It is called for to-morrow, in spite of their efforts to have it put off a week. But we want more; we want to induce Keatcham to vote his own stock for us, and to call off his dogs himself."

"And you can't force him to do it?"

"We shall force him, easily enough," returned Mercer, "but we don't trust him. We want his private code-book to be sure he is playing fair. In fact, we have to have it, because nothing gets any attention that isn't, so to speak, properly introduced."

"And he will not give it to you?"

"Says he has lost it."

"Perhaps he has," mused the soldier. "But now, all this is not my concern, except that I have no right, as a soldier, even passively to aid in breaking the laws. It is my duty to rescue and free Mr. Keatcham."

Before he could speak further Mercer lifted a hand in apologetic interruption. Would Col. Winter excuse him, but he must ask Mr. Tracy to go back to the patio and have an eye on the detective. Endicott only exchanged a single glance before he obeyed. Mercer's eyes followed him. "It was not to be helped," he said, half to himself, "but I have been sorry more than once that I had to take him into this."

Winter looked at him, more puzzled than he wanted to admit to himself; indeed, he was rather glad to have the next word come from Mercer.

"I have a few things I want to say to you; they go easier when we are alone—but won't you sit down?" When the colonel had seated himself he went on: "I'd like to explain things a bit."

"I'd like to have you," answered the soldier. "I think you have the clew to Archie's whereabouts and don't recognize it yourself; so put me wise, as the slang goes."

73 MARKET STREET. NEAR PLANE ST. NEWARK, N.J.

We'll Start You (A) "Housekeeping"

—or if you're already "started," we'll help you refurnish! We've been doing it for thousands of others for nearly 50 years at this same old, well known "73 Market Street" address, and certainly ought to have the knack by now! There's a lot of good common sense reasons for using us, these among others:

1st—Immense stocks of latest styles in every good grade to pick from.

2nd—Whether purchase is one or a hundred dollars, your account is equally welcome!

1009 FORD, 4 Cylinder, 20 H. P., with Magneto and 3 Lamps, $850; Roadster $800; Landaulette $950. F. O. B. DETROIT

SPECIFICATIONS.

ENGINE—Four-cylinder, 3¾ bore x 4-inch stroke, 20 H. P. conservative rating.

CYLINDERS—Cast in one block, top removable, affording easy access to all parts of the engine. In case you should let your engine freeze and crack a cylinder, you can buy the entire block of 4-cylinders for the very low price of $25.00. This price is less than most factories charge for one cylinder, and removes the only possible objections a man could have against this method of construction.

IGNITION—Ford low tension magneto generator, built as part of the fly wheel. No gears, belts, brushes or contact points to give trouble. So simple in construction and so positive in operation, that it looks as though it would last forever without any attention from the owner. This system removes all battery trouble, one of the most annoying and expensive troubles.

STEEL—Heat treated Vanadium steel throughout. No car at $5,000.00 has higher grade, for none better can be bought. We defy any man to break a Ford Model T spring, axle, shaft, gear, or other part with any test less than 50 per cent more severe than would be required to put any other steel in the junk pile.

It has taken Ford two years and cost him $200,000.00 to acquire the analysis and the heat-treating and quenching formulas of this wonderful steel, as they are his own secrets.

LUBRICATION—No pumps, tubes or glasses to give trouble. The fly wheel acts as the distributing agent, and as long as there is a drop of oil in the tank your engine and transmission is sure to be taken care of.

TIRES—Ford Model T weighs only 1,200 pounds, therefore will take you more miles and cost you less for tires than any other five-passenger car in the world. The tire cost is really about the only expensive part of the running of an automobile. Be sure and give this subject your most critical examination before buying a car, as it means a good many DOLLARS in your pocket every time you wear out a set of tires.

HERE ARE THE FACTS—If a manufacturer designs and makes his car so heavy that he must equip it with a 32x4-inch tire,
It will cost you for a set of four tires ..... $129.00
Four tires for a Model T Touring Car will cost ..... 74.50
Difference saved every time you must buy a set of tires .... $ 54.50

This will buy a lot of gasoline and oil. All tires, regardless of size, are guaranteed by the tire manufacturer to run the same number of miles. So do not let anybody tell you differently. Ask them to show you the tire guarantee and it will show for itself.

DELIVERIES—We are booking orders for deliveries in rotation as received, or by placing a small deposit with your order we will deliver you a car when you want it in the spring.

BE SURE TO SEE the Ford exhibition at the Grand Central palace auto show January 1 to January 7.

WE guarantee all new cars sold by us free of repairs for three months.

PYTHIANS BOWLERS WIN A LEAGUE SERIES

The Knights of Pythias bowling team defeated the Plainfield Bicycle Club five three straight games in a Fraternal League series at Campbell's alleys last night. The bike members were in poor form and the best tally they made was a 167, put up by Percy Haberle. Nash, of the Knights, rapped out two double centuries but in his last game fell back to 145.

Vanderbilt, another K. of P. roller, hit the timber for 191. "Sam" Clouston had good intentions but somehow or other could not reach the head pin and was replaced by Frazee in the final game.

The scores:

BOROUGH SCHOOL FIVE WINS FROM RAHWAY TEAM.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team defeated the players from the Rahway High School yesterday afternoon in a game that was remarkably firee from fouls. The teamwork on both sides was good and each player succeeded in scoring. The final score was 33 to 22.

The lineup: Forwards, Conroy, Stine; center, A. Overtone; guards, Becker, Powlison. Referee, George Webster; umpire, T. Overton; timer, Demning; scorer, Percy aBiley.

New Year's Basketball.

Four basketball games will be played in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium tomorrow afternoon. Beginning at 2 o'clock, Hope chapel will meet the First Baptist five, and the Seventh-Day Baptist team will oppose the First Presbyterian; at 3:30 the major Y. M. C. A. five will meet the Williamsburg Y. M. C. A., a team from Brooklyn. Another game will be between the North Plainfield high school and Y. M. C. A. second five.

WORK DONE IN YEAR BY ALMS COMMITTEE.

The annual report of the Councilmanic alms committee, presented to the Common Council, last night, shows that the expenses during the year at the Industrial Home amounted to $4,262.02 and $1,508.59 for outside poor. The total disbursements, including the $800 salary of Overseer-of-the-Poor A. D. Ayres, were $8,833.70.

The number of persons received at the Home during the past year was twenty-eight, and twelve were disposed of during that time, while during 1908 there have been thirteen deaths there. There were 223 applications for help of which number seventy-five men were put to work on the streets. Help was given to sixty-seven while temporary aid was given to 100 and outside work given to seven. Medical attendance was given to 250. The overseer-of-the-poor made 226 calls outside and 927 calls at office and home of the overseer. The total receiving miscellaneous help outside during the year was 1,467.

Mr. Ayres reported that there were two removal proceedings taken this year, both of the overseerof-the-poor against Franklin township. He suggests that next year the committee set aside a sum of money for the purchase of farming implements, horses, etc., for the cultivation and caring of the grounds.

Xmas Greens Start Chimney Blaze.

A still alarm at 8:52 last night called the fire department to the home of H. E. Butler on West Seventh street, for a chimney blaze. It was caused by throwing a large quantity of Christmas decorations in the fire place. Two extinguishers stopped the trouble before any damage had been occasioned.

Week of prayer services will be held at the First M. E. church on Tuesday and Thursday evenings of next week at 8 o'clock.

NEW YEAR'S RECEPTIONS

They Will Predominate in the Formal Affairs on the Morrow.

OTHER HOLIDAY ATTRACTIONS.

Extra Bills at the Theatres and a Variety of Diversions—"Glad Hand" to Be Extended at Debele Hall.

While New Year's day will generally be observed by Plainfielders in the customary manner of holding house parties and family reunions, there will be more or less public and semi-public affairs to assist in the diversion. Chief among the attractions will be the reception at the new police headquarters building at East Fourth and Sycamore streets to mark its occupancy by the department and also to allow the citizens to inspect it. Mayor Charles J. Fisk and a majority of the city officials will be in attendance to receive the visitors and officers will assist everyone in looking about. The women are especially invited and the affair will continue from 2 o'clock until the evening.

Several of the city clergymen will hold receptions at their homes during the afternoon for members of their congregations. Among those who wil receive in this manner are Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church; Rev. A. C. Nickerson, of All Souls Unitarian church and Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, the rector of Grace Episcopal church. "Open house" will be observed as usual at Hope chapel where members of the congregation will endeavor to entertain all who call from 4:30 until 10:30. An informal entertainment and refreshments will be included.

Another reception to be conducted on an elaborate scale will be at the Park club. The entertainment committe has announced that all who call between four in the afternoon and seven in the evening will have diversion aplenty. Amateur theatricals by members of the club will be a feature.

Borough people are interested in the reception to be tendered by William Debele to his business partner, J. J. Stahl and William H. Smalley, Jr., in honor of their entrance to the North Plainfield Council. The affair will take place in Debele hall on Chatham street and wil include a smoker. Cigars and refreshments will be passed and while it is practically a borough affair the glad hand will be extended generaly.

The New Plainfield theatre will make a bid for the holiday patronage by offering George Broadhurst's latest comedy drama, "An International Marriage," with Digby Bell in the leading role. Matinee and night performances will be given and the fact that the production is of the very best is certain to draw crowded houses.

Four basketball games will be played at the Y. M. C. A. during the afternoon and evening and a Star course entertainment will be held in the evening. The Y. W. C. A. will have various holiday attractions for the members.

At the Proctor, Bijou and Park theatres, the managers will have strong holiday bills that will include extra features for their patrons.

The circulation department of the Plainfield Public Library will be closed all day but the reading room will be open in the afternoon from 2 until 6 o'clock.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The sewing school will resume ts regular meetngs at Warren chapel Saturday mornng at 10:30 o'clock.

Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Zwemer, a noted missionary of Arabia, has been secured as the speaker at Trinity Reformed church for Sunday night, January 24.

Watch night services will be held in Alliance Hall, opera house, Cranford, commencing at 10 o'clock tonight. Rev. W. W. Newberry will be in charge.

Communion service with reception of new members will be held at the First M. E. church, Sunday morning. In the evening the Christmas music will be repeated.

The Christian and Missionary Alliance will hold its regular meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, followed by Bible study at 3 o'clock.

TO AID THE STRICKEN.

Elizabeth Italians Will Meet Tonight To Raise Funds.

Like their fellow countrymen in Newark, the Italian residents of Elizabeth are appalled at the catastrophe in their native land. A meeting has been called by the leaders of the race for tonight, when plans will be outlined for raising funds. There are several local residents from Calabria and the other stricken sections, and some have relatives who were lost.

Masses will be said in the Church of St. Anthony of Padua, at Elizabeth, for the victims, and everything possible will be done by the Italian people here to alleviate the suffering of the survivors of the earthquake.

E. S. HOOLEY MAKES YOUNG AMERICA HAPPY

About one hundred young people attended a dinner at the Holy Cross parish house last night. The feast was given by Edwin S. Hooley, to the members of the boy's club of the parish and the chorus boys of the church. A full course dinner was served, with plenty of turkey and trimmings, prepared by Mrs. Johnson, stewardess of the Park club.

Miniature footballs were placed at the plates of the members of the football team, while each of the other diners received something as a souvenir. The decorations were in holly, and the club colors, maroon and white.

Rev. George A. Warner, the rector, made a brief speech in which he mentioned the absence of two members, Fred Grey, who died recently, and Vernard Egel, who is seriously ill. The six days' old daughter of the rector had been elected an honorary member of the club and the mention of that fact was received with cheers.

Mr. Hooley's generosity was acknowledged with loud applause and on the completion of the rector's speech he was given hearty cheers.

Coach Frank Emmons was presented with a white sweater decorated with a Holy Cross monogram in appreciation of his work for the football team. A Holy Cross monogram was also given to each of the team members as he stepped forward to receive it.

The young folks were entertained by Milton P. Lyons, of Philadelphia, with his marinette figure show. The first part was the French Revolution, the second part, magic conjuring, and the third part "Punch and Judy."

Following the entertainment the older members danced until midnight. The music was furnished by Mr. Mosher, pianist, and Miss Mabel Maxson, violinist.

PAPAL DISPENSATION FOR NEW YEAR'S DAY

The Right Rev. John J. O'Connor, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Newark, last night announced that a special dispensation had been granted by Pope Pius X, permitting Catholics to eat meat on Friday, New Year's Day. The word came as a surprise, as when it did not reach here before Sunday it was generally expected that no dispensation would be granted.

The various pastors throughout the city will make the announcement to their parishioners from the pulpit at all the masses on New Year's Day. The bishop will officially notify the various priests in his diocese some time today.
